Health service funded continuing health care is available where a person is assessed as having on-going clinical needs that require frequent intervention by a hospital consultant and/or specialist nursing services. This is generally provided in hospital, most usually in specialist units; in exceptional circumstances continuing health care may be provided in a nursing home setting. Health and Social Services Boards are expected to have operational arrangements in place, which take into consideration local priorities and available resources, for this purpose.

It is considered that clinicians and their counterparts in social care are best placed to make decisions in individual cases in relation to their patients' long-term care needs on the basis of their clinical and professional judgments.

Development Funding

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much Central Government funding was allocated to each local authority district in Northern Ireland for (a) urban regeneration and (b) economic development in each of the past five years. [190508]

Mr. Spellar: Central Government funding in respect of urban regeneration and economic development is not allocated on the basis of local authority districts. Successful funding applications may arise from projects which work across a number of local authority areas. Information is not normally held at district council level and consequently a special exercise was carried out to determine, where possible, which district council is the recipient. The details are given in the table. It should be noted that in some instances European Funds is a call on the Departmental Expenditure Limits and both the Department for Social Development and Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment in these instances have classified spend as Central Government Funding.

Table A gives information on Central Government funding for Urban Regeneration in last five years paid by the Department for Social Development.

Table B gives information on Central Government funding by DETI for Economic Development in the last five years.

Table A does not include funding from the Community Support Programme which is a unique collaborative initiative involving the Voluntary and Community Unit of DSD and the 26 district councils to support local community infrastructure. Table A also does not include regeneration spend of £35,870,000 over the last five financial years by the Laganside Corporation and Belfast City Centre Promotions. Also not included is £8,874,298 of PEACE II and Urban II money spent on urban regeneration initiatives that could not be allocated by area.

Eating Disorders

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made with the implementation of the recommendations of the review and consultation exercise on eating disorders published in March 2003. [193378]

Angela Smith: The Regional Eating Disorders Working Group was established in June 2003 to take forward the recommendations of the Eating Disorders Consultation document. This work is being progressed through a number of subgroups. Achievements to date include the creation of specialist teams in each Health and Social Services Board and the development of a communication strategy aimed at providing information, advice, treatment or support for those suffering from eating disorders, their families and carers. This strategy was informed by research which also assisted in the development of an agreed regional service model. Additional training has been commissioned from the University of Ulster. The first module commenced in April 2004 and an E-learning module will be available from September 2005.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what dates the Regional Eating Disorders Working Group has met since its formation in June 2003. [193379]

14 October 2003

14 January 2004

23 March 2004

4 June 2004

15 September 2004.

Education Boards (IT Equipment)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the policy is of each Northern Ireland Education Board regarding members of staff using Board IT equipment for personal use during office hours. [190657]

Mr. Gardiner: Individual Education and Library Boards operate under the Northern Ireland Education and Library Boards' Policy Document on Internet and E-mail usage, which has been agreed with the Trade Union Side of the Joint Negotiating Council for NI Education and Library Boards.

The policy permits restricted personal use of the internet and e-mail facilities. Staff may use the facilities in their own time, providing that such use does not compromise the security of official data, result in increased costs or delays or have any negative impact on the Board's network or on the effective discharge of official business.

Educational Underachievement

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will set up a task force to examine and report on underachievement in education in inner city areas in Northern Ireland. [192373]

Mr. Gardiner: There are no plans at present to set up a task force to examine and report on underachievement in education in inner city areas here. Programmes such as the School Improvement Programme and the Education Action Zone initiative aim to target underachievement, especially in urban areas.

Electricity Consumers (Aid Package)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to introduce an aid package for electricity consumers in Northern Ireland; who the main beneficiaries of the package will be; whether the European Union has approved a package for electricity consumers in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [192544]

Mr. Gardiner: The 2003 budget included a proposal for a Government intervention of some £30 million a year aimed at bringing about an average decrease in electricity prices across the business sector of at least 10 per cent. below the levels they would otherwise have been, commencing 2004–05.

The European Commission was informally consulted on the proposal and raised a number of concerns about its compliance with state aid guidelines.

The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment is exploring with legal advisers, the Northern Ireland Authority for Energy Regulation and the Department of Trade and Industry alternative options for securing the required EU support of the proposed intervention, with a view to its introduction at the earliest opportunity.

In the meantime, the £30 million budget proposal remains available pending the identification of an acceptable way forward.

Employment Discrimination

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost was of (a) awards against Northern Ireland Departments decided by tribunals and (b) settlements outside tribunals in respect of claims of employment discrimination in the past five years. [190505]

Mr. Pearson: During the five years (1 April 1999 to 31 March 2004), no awards were made by tribunals against Northern Ireland Departments (excluding Agencies and NDPBs) in relation to claims of employment discrimination. Over that same period, the total cost of settlements made by the Departments outside tribunals was £72,832.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what central mechanisms apply within Northern Ireland Departments in relation to evaluating the cost to public funds of defending or settling claims of employment discrimination. [190506]

Mr. Pearson: There is no central evaluation mechanism in place. Decisions on whether to defend or settle claims of employment discrimination are taken by the Northern Ireland Department or agency concerned, on a case-by-case basis, in the context of professional advice from legal advisers, and the likely settlement costs against the cost of contesting a claim.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases alleging employment discrimination were brought by individuals against each of the Northern Ireland departments in the past three years; how many of these were challenged at tribunals; and how many of these were settled out of court. [190507]

Mr. Pearson: During the past three years (1 April 2001 to 31 March 2004), 73 cases alleging employment discrimination were brought by individuals against Northern Ireland departments. Of those cases, 10 were challenged at tribunals and 18 were settled out of court. A breakdown by Department is as follows.

Table showing the number of tribunal cases brought by individuals against NI departments (excluding agencies/NDPBs) during 1/4/01 to 31/3/04, the number challenged at tribunals and the number settled out of court.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated additional cost is of processing a fixed penalty notice through the courts as compared with the cost of accepting payment of fixed penalty fines without court proceedings. [192532]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

Current systems do not apportion unit costs to these processes. However, a calculation has been undertaken based on staff and judicial salaries. No overheads such as accommodation and IT have been included in this calculation.

The cost of processing a paid fixed penalty is £1.61, while the cost of processing an unpaid fixed penalty through the courts is £19.28.

The additional cost of a fixed penalty being processed through the courts is therefore around £17.68.

Invalid Care Allowance

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are in receipt of invalid care allowance in Northern Ireland. [193440]

Mr. Spellar: Carers Allowance replaced Invalid Care Allowance in April 2003. At 26 August 2004 there were 43,031 people in receipt of Carers Allowance.

Invest NI

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps Invest Northern Ireland are taking to encourage the new owners of the old TK-ECC premises in Dundonald to attract employment opportunities to the area. [191284]

Mr. Gardiner: As the factory and its associated site are privately owned, Invest NI has no direct role in encouraging its use to be maximised.

However, Invest NI continues to be prepared, if requested, to work with the owners and their agents to market the property in line with the existing employment/industrial use for which it is currently zoned.

Nursery Places (North Belfast)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to fund full-time nursery places for children in (a) North Belfast and (b) Greater Shankill. [192375]

Mr. Gardiner: With the exception of pre-school places at Hazelwood Integrated Primary School, which were created under the Pre-School Education Expansion Programme, all nursery places in North Belfast and the Greater Shankill area are full-time.

Although full-time provision is often preferred by parents who have work commitments, extensive research, in both Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom, shows that there is no additional educational benefit of attending full-time over part-time.

The Pre-School Education Expansion Programme in Northern Ireland provides funding only for part-time provision. I have no plans to fund full-time nursery places at Hazelwood Integrated Primary School.

Pensions

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) female and (b) male pensioners in Northern Ireland are in receipt of the full basic state pension. [193748]

Mr. Spellar: There are 95.9 per cent. of female pensioners and 98.3 per cent. of male pensioners currently in receipt of the full basic state pension (state retirement pension).

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) female and (b) male pensioners in Northern Ireland are in receipt of pension credit. [193751]

Mr. Spellar: There are 30.5 per cent. of female pensioners and 35.1 per cent. of male pensioners currently in receipt of Pension Credit.

Priority Spending Budget

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what comparative bids were submitted by individual departmental Ministers for consideration in the negotiations which preceded the Northern Ireland draft Priority Spending Budget; what reductions were made by the Treasury against these bids; and whether any Priority Spending Budget, agreed and implemented by direct rule Ministers, will be binding on a newly appointed Northern Ireland Executive. [192547]

Mr. Pearson: In accordance with the Statement of Funding Policy between Treasury and the Devolved Administrations, the total sum available for the funding of public services in Northern Ireland is largely determined by the application of the population based Barnett formula to comparable Whitehall programmes. Within the Barnett-determined resource total the amounts allocated to individual spending programmes are at the discretion of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, with no Treasury involvement. Priorities and spending plans determined by the Secretary of State will not be binding on a restored Devolved Administration, and it will be open to that Administration to review and revise those plans within the framework of the Statement of Funding Policy.

Psychiatric Beds

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the level of occupancy of child and adolescent psychiatry in-patient beds in the Province. [192867]

Angela Smith: Child and adolescent psychiatry in-patient beds in the Province are operating at full occupancy at present.

Psychiatry Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what long-term work force planning has taken place for child and adolescent psychiatry services in the Province; [192877]

(2) if he will make a statement on (a) recruitment and (b) retention of qualified staff in child and adolescent psychiatry services in the Province. [192878]

Angela Smith: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety carry out an annual review of the consultant work force in each of the hospital-based specialties and the number in training are adjusted to meet the assessed need, subject to available resources. Work force plans for consultant child and adolescent psychiatrists indicate a need for sustained investment in training. As a result resources have been invested year on year in specialist training in this area, there are currently nine specialist trainees compared with four in 1999.

In addition in October 2002 the Department initiated a wide-ranging independent review of the law, policy and service provision affecting people with a mental health problem or a learning disability. Among other things, this review is examining child and adolescent mental health services. It is likely that many of the recommendations from this review will have work force implications. The review is expected to complete towards the end of 2005.

Regional Cancer Centre

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on staff recruitment for the new regional cancer centre. [192907]

Angela Smith: Belfast City Hospital Trust developed a work force plan for the new regional cancer centre as part of the Outline Business Case for the centre. The development of the work force plan, which is kept under review, involved full consultation and agreement with the clinical professional heads of each service and was shared with commissioners in each Health and Social Services Board.

Funding for the additional staff has been confirmed on a phased basis. In view of the lead-in time to train health professionals, funding has been secured to enable staff to be appointed and trained in time for the planned opening of the new cancer centre in 2006.

Regional Development Strategy

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Regional Development Strategy. [193746]

Mr. Spellar: The Regional Development Strategy sets out a spatial development framework for Northern Ireland up to 2025. The vision is to create an outward-looking, dynamic and liveable region and to sustain a high quality of life for all.

The Annual Report and Monitoring Report for 2003–04 on the progress in implementing the RDS are currently being prepared and will be published in November. Annual Reports and Monitoring Reports have been published for the periods 2001–02 and 2002–03. Copies are available in the House of Commons Library.

School Nurses

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many school nurses per head of population of school age there are in the Province. [192873]

Angela Smith: In Northern Ireland, there is approximately one school nurse per 2,900 children and young people of school age.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191413]

Mr. Pearson: The cost of theft and fraud is estimated as follows:

	Departments	Agencies	NDPBs
1997–98	18,364	104,495	53,055
1998–99	90,028	121,363	7,813
1999–2000	20,938	38,388	127,691
2000–01	79,311	83,708	154,975
2001–02	353,606	49,079	48,961
2002–03	107,985	40,469	328,387
2003–04	129,681	89,383	304,581

Water Charges

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of Northern Ireland's rate charge is made up of a charge for water use. [192543]

Mr. Pearson: The regional rate is an un-hypothecated tax, which means that no portion of it is a direct charge, or specifically earmarked, for any one particular service. Instead, the revenue raised is simply one component (around 6 per cent.) of the total amount available to the Secretary of State for allocation to public services provided at a regional level.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether there will be further consultation on the Government's proposed household water charges in Northern Ireland. [192989]

Mr. Spellar: An Integrated Impact Assessment on the proposals for Water Reform, including the basis for domestic water and sewerage charges, will be published shortly for public consultation. This will provide an opportunity for the public to comment on the impact of the policy proposals. The Government will take account of the responses to the consultation before producing draft primary legislation.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the proposed increase in the regional rate will be allocated to water charges. [192556]

Mr. Pearson: The regional rate is an un-hypothecated tax. Therefore, no portion of any proposed increases will be allocated to any one particular service.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the core costs for a new water services body for Northern Ireland in each of the next five years. [192557]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Member in response to this question.

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan to Lady Hermon, dated 21 October 2004:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about the estimate he had made of the annual core costs, in each of the next five years, for a new water services body for Northern Ireland. I have been asked to reply as Chief Executive of Water Service.

On 10 August 2004, the Minister of State, John Spellar, MP announced that Water Service was to become a Government Owned Company on, or as soon as practicable after, 1 April 2006. The costs outlined below reflect the figures for the three years to 2007–08 in the Draft Priorities and Budget announced on 10 October 2004. These are draft figures and as such could be subject to change. The Draft Budget process only covers the years 2005–06 to 2007–08 and figures are not available post 2007–08.

£ million

	Revenue	Capital	Total
2005–06	119.8	269.4	389.2
2006–07	121.3	224.5	345.8
2007–08	117.7	218.1	335.8

Water Metering

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what he expects the earliest possible date for the introduction of household water metering to be; and if he will make a statement. [193334]

Mr. Spellar: On 13 September 2004, I announced my proposals for the basis upon which household water and sewerage charges will be set. The announcement made clear that the new charges would be phased in from 2006–07, or as soon as practicable thereafter. In my statement I acknowledged the strong preference for metering by those who had expressed an opinion in the 2003 consultation exercise. In recognition of this, and despite the fact that metering was ruled out by the Northern Ireland Executive in its 2002 consultation on rating policy, I am proposing to make provision for household metering once charges are fully phased in—that is, the third year of charging. This will provide time to develop an approach to metering which promotes reduced consumption, is fair and affordable and which does not have unacceptable consequences for those on low incomes or vulnerable groups.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Beach Safety

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with (a) other Government departments and (b) local authorities on safety on beaches. [193432]

Phil Hope: The Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents organised the National Water Safety Congress held in Brighton in March 2004 at which the National Water Safety Forum was launched. An important part of the Forum is the establishment of an advisory group on beach safety. Water safety is a subject that cuts across many Government Departments. Therefore, an inter-governmental group with representatives from the relevant Departments and devolved administrations has been established to interact with the Forum. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is represented on this group.

The Maritime and Coastguard Agency has met regularly with representatives of local authorities, other Government Departments with an interest and the providers of rescue services to discuss coastal safety including the safety of people using local beaches.

Circular 1/94

Mr. Luff: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of large-scale and deliberate breaches of planning control by travellers in setting up large encampments on the integrity of the planning system. [193115]

Keith Hill: Local planning authorities have wide range of enforcement powers available to deal with breaches of planning control.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is however aware of the concerns surrounding the development of gypsy and traveller sites in breach of planning control. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is undertaking a thorough review of policy relating to gypsy and traveller accommodation needs including the advice given in circular 1/94 'Gypsy Sites and Planning' to ensure local authorities assess the accommodation needs of gypsies and travellers in their development plans and make provisions to meet those needs. This should help reduce instances where sites are developed without planning permission.

Council Housing

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applicants are on the waiting list for council properties in each local authority area in Tyne and Wear. [193327]

Keith Hill: The number of applicants on the waiting list for council properties in each local authority in Tyne and Wear are tabled.

Local authority	Current waiting list
Gateshead	10,037
Newcastle	15,312 = Number registered under 'Choice Based Letting'—some are existing tenants waiting for a move.
North Tyneside	5,664
South Tyneside	5,234
Sunderland	n/a as Large Scale Voluntary Transfer (LSVT) occurred in 2001.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council houses each local authority in Tyne and Wear has; and how many each had in 1997. [193331]

Keith Hill: The number of council houses in each local authority in Tyne and Wear at present, and in 1997, are tabled as follows.

Local authority	Stock at 1 April 2004	Stock at 1 April 1997
Gateshead	23,494	28,545

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has had with North Tyneside council regarding the council housing appraisal process. [193336]

Keith Hill: The Government Office North East Housing Team, including specialist staff from the Community Housing Task Force (CHTF) have been involved in an on-going discussion with North Tyneside metropolitan borough council (MBC) regarding the Option Appraisal process since June 2003 when the relevant guidance was published. Regular meetings with council officers, tenants and other interested parties are held and the Government Office's CHTF officer attends the Option Appraisal Steering Group in an advisory capacity. In recent times, meetings have been held at least monthly. Government Office is assisting all parties by facilitating training and encouraging positive action towards the evaluation of all available options in the lead up to a final decision in early 2005.

Council Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people have been convicted for non-payment of council tax in each year since 2000. [193316]

Mr. Raynsford: Non-payment of council tax is not a criminal offence. However, a local authority may apply to the magistrate for a person to be committed to prison if a bailiff has been unable to find sufficient goods to seize in order to meet the debt. The magistrate may only issue a warrant of commitment if the non-payment is due to wilful refusal or culpable neglect on the part of the council taxpayer.

The Government do not collect council tax enforcement statistics, but from information supplied by some local authorities to the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy it is estimated that the number of people in England committed to prison for non payment of council tax is as follows.

	Number
2000–01	65
2001–02	80
2002–03	72

Figures for more recent years are not yet available.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to increase the number of council tax bands pending the longer term review of local government finance. [193317]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government have accepted the Balance of Funding Review's conclusion that council tax in England should be retained but reformed. There is a statutory requirement for a revaluation in 2007, but no decisions have yet been made on what the reform should be. The Government now look to Sir Michael Lyons' Independent Inquiry to make recommendations on any changes that are necessary and how to implement them.

Decent Homes Standard

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities in England he expects to meet the Government's Decent Homes Standard by 2010; and if he will list those which are expected not to achieve the Standard. [193241]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects all stock owning local authorities to meet the Decent Homes Standard by 2010.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [192759]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister spent approximately £11.2 million centrally on outside information communication and technology consultants and contractors during the 2003–04 financial year.

Fire Service Pensions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the gap is in funding for Fire Service pensions. [192960]

Phil Hope: The Firefighters' Pension Scheme is an unfunded scheme and fire and rescue authorities pay pensions from revenue. Members' pension contributions are treated as revenue. The cost of pensions is increasing and the value of the benefits is now estimated to be 37.5 per cent. of pensionable pay. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware of the problems which the current arrangements cause and have already announced that we will be publishing proposals on future financing arrangements for consultation in early 2005.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Fire Brigades Union on pensions. [192961]

Phil Hope: The Fire Brigades Union is represented on the Firefighters' Pensions Committee, which provides a forum for discussion of pension issues and is the usual channel for the consultation required by section 34(5) of the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004. The Committee replaces a sub-committee of the former Central Fire Brigades Advisory Committee. The Committee meets quarterly.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans to raise the normal retirement age for firefighters to (a) 55 and (b) 65 years. [192962]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published proposals on 13 October for changes to the pension arrangements for firefighters, including proposals that the minimum pension age under the existing pension scheme should be raised to age 55 from April 2006; and that the normal pension age under a new pension scheme for new entrants to the Fire and Rescue Service should be age 65, with alternative options including a normal pension age of 60 and possibly allowing members to take their pension at age 55, at the discretion of the employer. Consultation will end on 14 January 2005 and we will take decisions on the structure of the new arrangements as soon as possible thereafter.

Gypsies/Travellers

Mr. Luff: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what role the Government expects (a) regional assemblies, (b) regional housing boards and (c) regional planning boards to play in the formulation and development of policies to deal with gypsies; [193118]

(2) what account local authorities will be required to take of the (a) national and (b) regional need for traveller sites when allocating land for such sites in their local development plans. [193120]

Keith Hill: The assessments of housing need that underpin Local Housing Strategies should include the accommodation needs of gypsies and travellers. Clauses in the current Housing Bill would give statutory force to this.

These assessments are an essential part of the evidence base that informs Regional Housing Strategies (RHSs) and Regional Spatial Strategies (RSSs). Regional Assemblies and Regional Housing Boards have an important role to play in working with authorities to ensure that these assessments are robust and consistent across the region.

There will be close co-ordination in the production of revised RHSs and RSSs to ensure that they reflect the need for gypsies' and travellers' pitches. The RSS will set out the level of pitch provision to be provided in each local authority area. The identification of where the sites should be in each authority's area or how "windfall" sites will be determined will be the responsibility of the local planning authorities in preparing their Development Plan Documents (DPDs). Under the 2004 Act, it is a requirement that DPDs are in general conformity with the Regional Spatial Strategy.

Homeless People (London)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many homeless people there were in Greater London in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) age and (b) borough. [193188]

Keith Hill: Information collected about local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is in respect of households, rather than persons. This is collected quarterly through P1E returns. Although a breakdown by age of head of household is not collected, the return does distinguish acceptances where the applicant's priority need category was recorded as being aged 16 to 17 years old, or formerly "in care" and aged 18 to 20 years old. These two categories were introduced as part of the extension to priority need entitlement under the 2002 Order; prior to the third quarter of 2002, the priority need groups distinguished "vulnerable young persons", which was applied at the discretion of authorities.

A summary of available information reported by London boroughs about the total number of households eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need, and of those how many were headed by a "young person" in each year since 1997 is in the table.

[1] All households eligible under homelessness legislation, and found to be unintentionally homeless and in a priority need category.

[2,3] From 2002 Q3, "young person" reflects acceptances of 16 to 17-year-olds, and 18 to 20-year-olds previously in care. Prior to this, authorities reported cases classified as "vulnerable young person". Data was not collected for either category in 2002 Q2.

House Prices

Ms Buck: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average price of a house in England was in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) 2000; and if he will estimate (i) the current price of the same dwelling if its value had risen at the rate of the retail price index and (ii) the current price of the same dwelling if its valuation had risen at the same average level as house prices over that period. [192030]

Keith Hill: The average price of a house in England in (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) 2000 was as shown in column A of the following table.

(i) Had property prices since 1980/1990/2000 then risen in line with the Retail Prices Index (RPI), their current value (as of August 2004) would have been as set out in column B.

(ii) If the average property in 1980/1990/2000 had risen in price by the same as the average rise in house prices then its current value (as of August 2004) would be the same as the average property in England in August 2004, namely £191,970.

Housing

Helen Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the demand for affordable housing (a) in Warrington and (b) in the north-west over the next five years. [193047]

Keith Hill: The information is as follows:

(a) In the case of Warrington, it is of course for the borough council to make an assessment of affordable housing needs. They have done so in their draft unitary development plan (UDP) which has recently been tested at a public inquiry. The council has identified a current shortfall of 42 dwellings per year. A policy has been included in the UDP to enable the council, when determining planning applications, to negotiate for an element of affordable housing on proposed schemes.

(b) The regional spatial strategy for the north-west does not quantify the overall need for affordable housing in the region, but identifies areas where there is likely to be the greatest need. These needs will then be addressed in local plans.

Helen Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applicants are on the waiting list for council properties in each local authority in the north-west. [193049]

Keith Hill: According to the Housing Strategy Statistical Appendices supplied by North West Local Authorities, the total number of applicants on the housing register as of 1 April 2004 was as follows.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the demand for affordable housing in (a) North Tyneside and (b) the North East over the next five years. [193330]

Keith Hill: The assessment of demand for housing is best carried out by those responsible locally for such matters. In February this year, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published a Housing Market Assessment Manual. This encourages local authorities to work in partnership with each other and other stakeholders to develop a more strategic view of housing need and demand at the sub-regional housing market level.

The North East Housing Board is currently considering the issue of affordable housing in the region as part of the work being carried out to update the regional housing strategy which will be submitted to the Government in May 2005. The local demand for affordable homes should therefore feature in the work currently being undertaken by the Tyne and Wear Housing Partnership.

Housing Renewal Pathfinder Areas

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what documentation he has received from Pendle Council concerning its willingness to participate in the housing renewal strategy for the area; and if he will make a statement. [193235]

Keith Hill: Pendle Borough Council accepted in 2002 the Government's invitation to establish, jointly with other local authorities in the East Lancashire sub-region, a market renewal pathfinder. As a participating authority, it expressed its support for the strategy and programme developed by the pathfinder, Elevate, earlier this year. The council continues to be a participating authority with membership of the pathfinder's governing body and has responsibility for the delivery of the programme in its area.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the funding requirement for local authority debt has been in each year since 1997; and what the projected requirement is for this financial year. [193811]

Mr. Raynsford: The amount as reported by local authorities since 1997–98 as the cost of their debt is tabled as follows.

	£ million
1997–98	3,936
1998–99	3,874
1999–2000	3,756
2000–01	3,650

2002–03	3,516
2003–04	3,553
2004–05	3,614

Note:

The data show actual outturn figures for all years except 2003–04 and 2004–05 which are budget estimates. The data are the sum of the amount of external interest payments made by authorities and their provisions for the repayment of principal.

Local Government

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on reform of local government since 1997; and what the costs of that reform have been. [191165]

Mr. Raynsford: The measures the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has taken to modernise local government are leading to an improvement in local authorities' performance. For example, the second year of Comprehensive Performance Assessment (CPA) results for single tier and county councils showed that councils are making real improvements in their delivery of key services. Nearly a third of all 150 authorities achieved a higher star rating for Social Services and only two local authorities failed to make any improvements in education. Furthermore, 55 per cent. of all single tier and county councils are now rated 'good' or 'excellent'.

Also, the interim findings of the Cardiff Business School's evaluation of the long-term impact of best value in English local authorities from 2001 until 2005 suggest that best value is having a positive impact on the internal culture of many local authorities and better outcomes for local people.

Furthermore, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has recognised the need to reduce unnecessary bureaucracy for councils and last year (2003–04) saw a reduction in inspection for local authorities of around one third and a reduction of 90 per cent. for top performers. We have also cut the number of plans authorities are required to produce by 75 per cent. Apart from the money that is set aside for schools, we are reducing the percentage of grant that is ring-fenced and expect this to be in single figures by next year.

Since 1997, the Government have undertaken a wide-ranging number of reforms as part of the Local Government modernisation agenda. However, information about the costs of these reforms is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has received from the Office for National Statistics the 2001 Census data for Worcestershire. [193239]

Mr. Raynsford: Yes. 2001 Census data were released in stages by the Office for National Statistics. It was necessary to specially commission a number of tables that were released later. The final indicator data used in the Local Government Finance Settlement that is derived from the 2001 Census was released on 21 October 2004.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate the financial impact of continued use of the 1991 Census data when calculating grants for Worcestershire county council. [193240]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Yeovil on 19 October 2004, Official Report, columns 570–71W.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what census data he uses to calculate the Standard Spending Assessment Grant to Herefordshire Council; and if he will make a statement. [193284]

Mr. Raynsford: The data indicators used to calculate the 2004–05 Local Government Finance Settlement are described in Annex D of "The Local Government Finance Report (England) 2004/2005". A copy of this document is available in the Library of the House.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191431]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created on 29 May 2002. Since then the number of mobile phones used by Ministers and Special Advisers, and the associated costs (including purchase, line rental, and call charges) are tabled as follows.

	Number of mobile phones used	Cost (£)
30 May 2002–31 March 2003	3	2,071
1 April 2003–31 March 2004	6	3,756
1 April 2004–30 September 2004	6	2,250

The number of these lost and stolen, and the cost of replacement, is as follows:

	Number lost	Number stolen	Cost of replacement (£)
30 May 2002–31 March 2003	0	1	213.56
1 April 2003–31 March 2004	1	0	82
1 April 2004–30 September 2004	1	0	82

Information on mobile phones used by officials is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Park Homes

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what assessment his Department has made of complaints regarding park homes; and what investigations have been made regarding such complaints; [192894]

(2) how many complaints regarding the operation of park homes were received by his Department in each of the last five years for which figures exist; and how many of these were (a) investigated and (b) substantiated; [192895]

(3) what proportion of park homes have been the subject of (a) multiple substantiated complaints and (b) any complaints over each of the last five years for which figures exist. [192896]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Complaints about the condition of a park home site will normally be dealt with by the local authority responsible for the issue, monitoring and enforcement the site licence conditions. Complaints about the terms of contract are handled by the courts or if agreed by both parties, an arbitration service.

The Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, has no locus in respect of such complaints. But in response to representations from the industry and park home residents we set up the park homes working party in 1998 and have acted on their recommendations through measures in the current Housing Bill. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will be consulting shortly on how best to take forward a number of the remaining recommendations of the working party.

Planning (Consultation)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the oral statement by the parliamentary Under-Secretary on 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 745, what form the public consultation exercise relating to part 24 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 will take. [193355]

Keith Hill: The public consultation exercise relating to part 24 of the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 will be initiated early next year by the publication of a consultation document on the Government's proposals for amending the Order and follow the Code of Practice on Consultation published by the Cabinet Office.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) pursuant to section 37 of the Draft Regional Assemblies Bill (Cm. 6285), what estimate he has made of the annual cost of the provision of pension benefits for north east regional assembly members and employees; and what plans he has to set limits on (a) the making of payments towards the provision of pension benefits and (b) the cost of the establishment and administration of schemes for the provision of pension benefits; [192757]

(2) what estimate he has made of what the total value of a regional assembly member's pension benefits will be after 30 years in post. [192756]

Mr. Raynsford: Assemblies will, as good employers, be expected to provide suitable pension benefits for employees and meet the reasonable costs involved. I do not propose to set any limits on payments to be made towards pension benefits or on the cost of administration of pension schemes.

Member salaries and pension benefits will be a matter for each assembly, although the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will ask the Senior Salaries Review Body to recommend initial salary levels. The north east assembly will have 25 members most of whom will be paid on a part-time basis. It is unlikely that many members would remain in office for 30 years, and any estimate of the likely value of pension benefits for anyone serving that length of time would be highly speculative.

Telecommunication Masts

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will take steps to ensure best practice and a common approach are adopted in relation to planning procedures relating to mobile phone masts. [193356]

Keith Hill: Best Practice in relation to planning for mobile phone network developments is set out in the Code of Best Practice for Mobile Phone Network Development. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is commissioning a study to assess the impact that the code has had since its introduction and how local authorities have implemented the code and how the public perceives its operation.

This will provide the Government with evidence on whether the code has been effective and whether there are any areas of weakness that need to be addressed. In light of this evidence the Government will consider whether any changes to the code are appropriate.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of telecommunication installations completed in the last 12 months have been allowed under the permitted development rights conferred under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995. [193358]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has made to the Mobile Operators Association on improving consultation with local communities on the development of telecommunication equipment in their area. [193359]

Keith Hill: Ministers in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister meet regularly with the Mobile Operators Association to discuss a range of issues including the operators' progress in meeting their commitments to improved local consultation.

Town and Country Planning Act

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to enhance the policing of agreements under section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990; and what advice he plans to offer to local authorities to ensure that developers deliver on their commitments. [192963]

Keith Hill: Section 106 agreements (Planning Obligations) are binding legal agreements between the parties involved, and as such are enforceable by the courts. It is therefore for local authorities to monitor the implementation of planning obligations and take action where appropriate. The Government are due to issue shortly a revised draft circular on planning obligations for consultation, which will include updated guidance on the monitoring and implementation of planning obligations. The final circular, due to be published in spring 2005, will be accompanied by Good Practice Guidance which will also cover this issue.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 26 October 2004

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Ecclesiastical Law

Miss McIntosh: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what recent representations he has received regarding updating ecclesiastical law, with particular reference to the employment of clergy. [193768]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Church Commissioners have received no such representations. The Archbishops' Council is, with representatives of other Christian bodies and faith communities, actively engaged in discussions with the DTI on this issue. The Church of England's review group, under the chairmanship of Professor David McClean, will bring its second report to the Archbishops' Council later this year and to the General Synod in February 2005. If Synod approves the group's proposals, the Church will begin to prepare the legislation necessary to implement them.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

REACH Proposal

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answers to questions 189034 and 189035, what proportion of the total direct costs across the EU for implementing the REACH proposal will fall on (a) industry and (b) the public purse. [190689]

Alun Michael: The Government have worked with industry and others to ensure that the benefits of the REACH proposals to human health and the environment are well focussed on achieving maximum practical benefit with a minimum of direct impact on industrial competitiveness. In particular our own proposals for "one substance, one registration" are intended to lower costs to industry as well as creating a level playing field across Europe and keeping animal testing to a minimum. We have presented proposals jointly with the Hungarian Government and received positive responses from other Governments to our proposals which will now be considered and discussed further within the EU. Estimates have to be based on proposals as they stand at any given stage and our suggestions are not yet part of the official proposals. Based on the Commission's proposals, the results from the UK partial Regulatory Impact Assessment referred to in the answers to questions 189034 and 189035 (i.e. an estimated direct cost of £515 million over the 11 year phase in period which is equivalent to total direct costs across the EU of approximately £2.4 billion) are estimates of the costs to be incurred by industry. This is in line with European Commission estimates published in October 2003 of a maximum overall cost of the revised proposal to be €7.5 billion. We are currently carrying out further impact assessment work to assess the indirect costs passed down the supply chain.

The European Commission estimates published in October 2003 indicate that, in addition to testing and registration costs, the chemicals industry is estimated to pay some €0.3 billion in fees to the new European chemicals agency. The costs of establishing and running the European chemicals agency under the REACH system were estimated at some €0.4 billion as a one-off cost over 11 years. This cost will be met from the fees paid by industry (€0.3 billion) and the remainder from the Community budget.

In the UK, the appointment of a Competent Authority or Authorities is a practical issue relating to the introduction of REACH and will be subject to a consultation exercise in the future.

Conservation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on nature conservation in urban areas. [192332]

Mr. Bradshaw*[holding answer 18 October 2004]*: Working with the grain of nature—a biodiversity strategy for England (Defra 2002) sets out the Government's vision for biodiversity in urban areas. The strategy recognises that a flourishing biodiversity makes a real contribution to the quality of life of urban residents and visitors alike. It aims to ensure that biodiversity conservation is integral to sustainable urban communities by enhancing biodiversity in green spaces and among developments in urban areas so that they are used by wildlife and valued by people. It aims to ensure that construction, planning, development and regeneration have minimal impacts on biodiversity and enhance it where possible. A workstream group has been established to develop and take forward a work programme to implement the goals.

The Department has been working closely with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the preparation of a draft planning policy statement which was published for consultation last month. The draft PPS9 sets out the Government's policy objectives on biodiversity and geological conservation in England. These policies are firmly rooted in working with the grain of nature, including the objectives for urban areas.

Dairy Cows

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what central records are kept on the incidence of mastitis in cattle; and if she will make a statement; [192732]

(2) what her Department's policy is on (a) monitoring and (b) addressing lameness in dairy cows; and if she will make a statement; [192733]

(3) how many dairy cows were culled due to lameness in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement. [192734]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no central records of the incidence of mastitis or lameness in dairy cattle. However, I am well aware of the seriousness of these welfare problems and their impact on the dairy industry.

That is why we continue to fund research in these areas. We are currently funding two research projects into the causes and control of cattle lameness at a cost of more than £800,000. Defra also has a contract with the Agricultural Development Advisory Service to run an advisory programme for farmers to encourage good welfare. A significant part of the contract is used for providing free advice to individual farmers, which often includes giving advice on ways they could help to alleviate mastitis and lameness levels in their herds. The most substantial part of the contract is used to fund awareness campaigns on topics of welfare concern. The campaigns aim to promote good practice, highlight the latest research and to discuss practical experiences. This year (and not for the first time) we are funding a series of meetings for farmers advising them on how to reduce the incidence of mastitis and promoting Defra's Mastitis Management Action Plan, which was developed in 1999. Lameness in dairy cattle has also been a major topic over the last few years. Last year, for example, we held a series of meetings on reducing injuries to dairy cows and produced an interactive CD-ROM aimed at helping farmers identify potential causes of injury to dairy cattle and provide guidance on minimising such risks.

The Code of Recommendations for the Welfare of Livestock: Cattle (which was revised last year) and its associated publications also provide advice on how to treat and prevent mastitis and lameness in dairy cows.

RAF Pershore

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on (a) the management of her Department's burial site at RAF Pershore and (b) its plans for the future use of the site and the land adjacent to it owned by her Department. [193094]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department continues to take a sensitive and constructive approach at Pershore. The landscape on the leased area has been improved and plantings are maturing. The addition of a water course has benefited drainage. The site and its impact on the environment is subject to close professional supervision and scrutiny by the Environment Agency, the local authority and Defra. Both ground water and surface water quality are closely monitored and remain normal. In addition, surface water drains into a reed bed designed to purify the water before it discharges to the brook on the south side of the site. Close monitoring of the whole site will continue.

The two freehold cottages are currently on the open market for sale. The Department has not yet settled on its strategy for the disposal of the remaining freehold land, but has appointed professional consultants to give advice.

Rural Transport Partnerships

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what plans she has for the future of rural transport partnerships after funding support transfers from the Countryside Agency to regional development agencies; [191098]

(2) what plans she has to allow rural transport partnerships to bid for community enterprise funds once funding from the Countryside Agency ceases; [191099]

(3) if she will make a statement on what funding sources she expects will be made available to help deliver the Countryside Agency's rural transport partnerships projects; [191100]

(4) how much money which was allocated in outline to rural transport plans by the Countryside Agency, but which was subsequently not spent, has been re-assimilated into her Department's budget; [191101]

(5) when her Department will be producing an evaluation of the effectiveness of rural transport partnerships; [191102]

(6) if she will make a statement on the withdrawal of the communities services grant from the Countryside Agency's Vital Villages programme; and what alternative sources of funding are available. [192683]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency funds Rural Transport Partnerships through their Vital Villages programme. The Agency will continue to fund existing projects and commitments until the Vital Villages programme closes on 31 March 2006. From 1 April 2005 Defra will devolve decision making on the delivery of economic and social regeneration policies to the regional development agencies. The regional development agencies are charged with contributing to the delivery of DEFRA's Public Service Agreement target to improve the accessibility of services for people in rural England. In recognition of their larger role in the delivery of DEFRA's policies, we have given the regional development agencies an additional £21.3 million per annum for the years 2005–06, 2006–07 and 2007–08.

These new arrangements will mean considerable changes for how DEFRA achieves its rural objectives. regional development agencies, working with their partners, will be responsible for deciding how to spend their resources and grants may not be available for the types of projects that have been supported through the Countryside Agency's Vital Villages programme hitherto. But I am confident that by devolving these responsibilities to the regional development agencies and increasing their resources, rural delivery will become more responsive to local priorities and better focused on areas and people that need it most.

From now until the closure of the Vital Villages programme the Countryside Agency is working to mainstream the work of the Rural Transport Partnerships and share good practice.

£14 million has been invested in the Vital Villages programme this year. Although separate figures for rural transport plans are not available, the larger Vital Villages programme underspent by £80,000 in 2003–04. This underspend was not reallocated to DEFRA expenditure. In June the Agency published a "Guide to Finding Funding for Rural Transport Partnership Projects" (available in hard copy from the Agency and on their website, www.countryside.gov.uk) and some funding for small scale community transport schemes, such as mini-bus links, is available through DEFRA's Rural Enterprise Scheme.

The Agency published an evaluation of the Rural Transport Partnerships in June 2004 (also available in hard copy from the Agency and on their website) and is holding a national conference on 27 October to publicise the Partnerships' work and achievements.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Catering Services

Norman Baker: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee if he will make representations to the Director of Catering Services to implement a strategy to minimise food miles. [193095]

Mr. Dennis Turner: I am sympathetic to the hon. Member's wish to reduce food miles by sourcing as much produce as possible locally. The Refreshment Department uses a great deal of British produce, selected on the basis of its quality and value for money. I have asked the Director of Catering Services to investigate the feasibility of implementing a strategy to minimise food miles as part of the Refreshment Department's food procurement objectives, so far as is consistent with the legal procurement framework within which all public purchasing operates, and the various regional promotions run by the Department.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee if he will make representations to the Director of Catering Services to increase the percentage of food sourced organically. [193103]

Mr. Dennis Turner: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 27 April 2004, Official Report, column 905–06W.

I have asked the Director of Catering Services to continue to be alert to opportunities to increase the percentage of food sourced organically, but I am aware that the Refreshment Department's ability to achieve this remains constrained by both supply chain limitations and by consumer price sensitivity.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Works of Art

36. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission how many paintings and works of art are held in store by the House. [193522]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The House of Commons Commission is responsible only for matters affecting this House. However, I understand that there are 6,791 works of art in the permanent collections of the House of Commons and House of Lords, of which approximately 1,900 are currently held in store. This number includes 35 paintings and 26 sculptures, which are in store only temporarily until they are relocated within the Parliamentary Estate. The other items in store are predominantly small prints and photographs. If the hon. Member wishes to visit the store, I am sure that the Curator would be delighted to arrange it.

Oriel Room

Kate Hoey: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the cost of (a) consultants, (b) materials, (c) labour, (d) design and (e) supervision of work was for the changes to the Oriel Room; and where the high desks have been stored. [193105]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The recent works in the Oriel Room were undertaken as part of two major projects: the tenth phase of the PDVN programme which includes the installation of automatic fire detection systems; and the installation of blast resistant glazing to the Principal Floor. These are extensive projects having total values of some £4 million and £1 million respectively; the latter being spread over three years. Owing to the complexities of both projects it is not possible to apportion the costs for the Oriel Room separately.

While the Oriel Room was disrupted, the opportunity was taken to introduce a new furniture layout. This was partly in response to adverse comments about the lighting and layout of the Members' Library in the "House of Commons Survey of Services in 2003", to underpin the Library's Change Project and to improve the ergonomic conditions for Library staff. The plans were reviewed by the Information Committee before the summer recess.

During the closure of the Library the Oriel and Reference Room ceilings were cleaned and other minor works undertaken.

The new furniture was designed by the PWSD Furnishings team after discussions with Library staff; no consultants were used.

The original desks, which were installed in 1986, have now gone into off-site storage.

Visitors

Lynne Jones: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) what mechanisms are in place to ensure that the new visitor passes are retrieved from visitors when they leave the Parliamentary Estate; and if he will make a statement on their introduction; [193351]

(2) if the Commission will take steps to ensure that photographs on parliamentary passes are checked at all entry and exit points on the Parliamentary Estate; [193352]

(3) how many visitor passes have been issued to date; and how many have been returned. [193353]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: It is not the practice of the House of Commons Commission to publish details of the operation of security arrangements on the Parliamentary Estate. I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to contact the hon. Member.

TREASURY

Child Accidents

Tom Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children died in accidents at home in the Greater London area in the last five years. [193156]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 October 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many children died in accidents in the home in the Greater London area in the last five years. (193156)

The latest available data are for 2003. Figures for children aged under 16 are given in the following table.

Deaths from accidents in the home[1] London,[2] 1999 to 2003[3]

	Number of deaths
1999	18
2000	13
2001	9
2002	15
2003	10

[1] Selected using codes E849-E928 excluding E870-E879 from the International Classification of Diseases Ninth Revision for 1999 and 2000 and codes W00-X59 from the International Classification of Diseases Tenth Revision for 2001 to 2003, where the place of accident was 'home'.

[2] Residents of London Government Office Region.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised by the withdrawal of advance corporation tax credit on (a) pensions and (b) charities in each year since it was introduced. [193802]

Dawn Primarolo: The abolition of payable tax credits was an essential part of a wider package of Corporation Tax reforms, including cuts in CT rates, designed to encourage investment. The estimated impact of the abolition of payable tax credits for pension funds, charities and others is quoted in the Financial Statement and Budget Report, July 1997. A separate figure for charities is not available.

Hospices (VAT)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT was paid by UK hospices in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [193364]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise data do not identify VAT registered hospices specifically and in any case would not identify any VAT incurred by hospices that could not be recovered. Therefore no figures for VAT paid by hospices are available.

Identity Card Scheme

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent research he has (a) conducted or (b) commissioned into the cost effectiveness of the proposed identity card scheme. [193996]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my predecessor on 21 April 2004, Official Report, column 505W.

Julie McEvoy

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the handling of the tax credits award for Miss Julie McEvoy of Buckfastleigh for the 2003–04 and 2004–05 tax years; and if he will make a statement. [193953]

Dawn Primarolo: I understand that the Inland Revenue has made a thorough investigation of Miss McEvoy's case and wrote to the hon. Member on 25 October 2004.

National Debt

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the national debt (a) is and (b) was in 1997. [193812]

Mr. Boateng: Public sector net debt at the end of September 2004 stood at 33.6 per cent. of GDP, whereas at the end of September 1997 it stood at 43.5 per cent. of GDP.

Police Funding

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will ensure that adequate funds are made available to the Home Office to ensure that Northampton Police Authority receives the grant for the financial year 2005–06 that the national funding formula indicates it needs; [193760]

(2) if he will make an additional grant to all police authorities for the financial year 2005–06 similar to the additional grant given to all local authorities in December 2003. [193761]

Mr. Boateng: The 2002 spending review provided for record growth in spending on crime, justice and communities, from £16.5 billion in 2002–03 to £20.5 billion in 2005–06. The 2004 spending review builds on this progress by embedding the Government's success in delivery and further increasing spending in these areas by £3.5 billion by 2007–08, compared to 2004–05. The Home Secretary is due to announce policing allocations for 2005–06 shortly.

Single Parent Households

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many single parent households headed by (a) mothers and (b) fathers there are, broken down by ethnic group. [192638]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 26 October 2004:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many single parent households headed by (a) mothers and (b) fathers there are, broken down by ethnic group. 192638

Figures from the 2001 Census indicate that there were 2,297,153 lone parent households in England and Wales, of which 1,979,295 households were headed by a female Household Reference Person and 317,858 households were headed by a male Household Reference Person. Specially commissioned table C0344 has been run to provide the ethnic group of the Household Reference Person. This has been placed in the House of Commons Library and can also be accessed on the National Statistics website at http://www.statistics.gov.uk/census2001/op15.asp

STEPS Agreement

Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much was paid to external commercial, legal and financial advisers in respect of the STEPS agreement; [178102]

(2) how much was paid by the Department to Mapeley STEPS Contractor Ltd. in each year to April (a) 2002 (b) 2003 and (c) 2004. [178131]

Dawn Primarolo [pursuant to my answers, 15 June 2004, Official Report, c. 835W]: I very much regret that my earlier answers inadvertently contained information which has subsequently proved to be incorrect.

I am advised that costs in respect of external commercial, legal and financial advice were:

	£ million
STEPS Project (pre-contract "go-live")	7.5
STEPS Contract	1.3

Payments made to Mapeley STEPS Contractor Ltd. were as follows:

Year to April	£ million
2002	234.7
2003	305.9
2004	311.2

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit awards had been stopped as at 30 September due to claimants' failure to supply income data by the 30 September deadline; and if he will make a statement. [191781]

Dawn Primarolo: None had been stopped as at 30 September.

Tsar Appointments

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tsars have been appointed with responsibilities which cover part of the work of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [191915]

Mr. Timms: None.

Unemployment (Greater London)

Tom Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of unemployment in the Greater London area is. [193796]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 October 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about unemployment in Greater London. (193796)

It is estimated that, for the three months ending in August 2004, the unemployment rate for people aged 16 and over resident in the Greater London area was 6.9 per cent. This estimate is seasonally adjusted.

This estimate from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) is, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Unpaid Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the total amount of unpaid tax, broken down by each available category, in each year from 1996–97 to 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [192143]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is as follows:

Inland Revenue

I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave on 4 March 2003, Official Report, column 912W, and 1 April 2004, Official Report, column 1697W. The NAO report, "The Recovery of Debt by the Inland Revenue", was published in March 2004 and can be found online at: http://www.nao.org.uk/publications/nao_reports/03-04/0304363.pdf

HM Customs and Excise

I refer the hon. Member to the HM Customs and Excise Annual Report and Accounts 2002–03, which was published in December 2003, and is available in the Library of the House.

Working Tax Credit

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people classed as disabled have claimed working tax credit in Coventry South. [192982]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Morley and Rothwell (Mr. Challen) on 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 589W.

WALES

Correspondence

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters he has received from hon. Members in the last four months; and if he will make a statement. [192216]

Mr. Hain: 26 letters were received from hon. Members from Wales from June to September 2004.

During that period the Wales Office also received 152 other letters and over 1,600 pieces of inter departmental correspondence.

Ministerial Expenses

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the Department spent on (a) maintenance, (b) renovation, (c) council tax and (d) running costs of residential properties used by Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [191398]

Mr. Touhig: None. The Wales Office does not provide residential properties for the use of either Ministers or officials.

Tsar Appointments

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many tsars have been appointed with responsibilities which cover part of the work of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [191928]

Mr. Hain: None.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Legislation

35. Simon Hughes: To ask the Leader of the House if he will carry out scrutiny of the number of offences (a) created and (b) repealed in the Government legislative programme in each session. [193521]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Information Technology

37. Barbara Follett: To ask the Leader of the House what recent discussions he has had about the provision of information technology equipment and access for hon. Members. [193523]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend has had discussions with both Members and officials of the House regarding the recommendations on information technology in the report of the Senior Salaries Review Body's review of parliamentary pay and allowances. He welcomes these recommendations and intends to propose to the House that IT equipment and support be increased as recommended.

Voters Guide

38. Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Leader of the House what proposals he has submitted to the Select Committee on the Modernisation of the House of Commons on sending a new voters guide to every 18-year-old. [193524]

Mr. Woolas: In its report on "Connecting Parliament with the Public", the Modernisation Committee, which my right hon. Friend chairs, recommended that the House devise a new voter's guide to be sent to all young people around the time of their 18th birthday. It envisaged that this might contain information on how to register to vote; the role and function of an MP, local councillor and other elected officials; how politics affects people's lives and a brief history of Parliament. This proposal is now under consideration by the House of Commons Commission.

September Sittings

39. Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House what representations he has received regarding the September sitting of the House; and if he will make a statement. [193525]

Mr. Woolas: A number of Members have expressed views on September sittings in evidence to the Modernisation Committee's inquiry on the sitting hours of the House, and in response to the letter which my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House sent to all Members on 29 June. The Modernisation Committee is considering these responses as part of its inquiry.

Child Care

40. Julie Morgan: To ask the Leader of the House what proposals he has made to the Select Committee on the Modernisation of the House of Commons on providing child care in the House of Commons. [193526]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend has made no proposals to the Modernisation Committee on child care in the House of Commons, but he has taken a close interest in discussions in the House of Commons Commission on this subject. He welcomes the increase in value in the child care vouchers paid to House staff, and their extension to Members' staff.

SCOTLAND

Pensions (Women)

6. Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has held with ministerial colleagues on the level of basic state pension received by women pensioners in Scotland. [192848]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friend and I are in regular touch with ministerial colleagues on a wide range of issues. The hon. Member will appreciate that pensions matters in general, and the particular position of women pensioners, are matters of great concern to the Government at the moment.

Army Recruitment

7. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Army recruitment to the Scottish regiments in Scotland. [192849]

Mr. Darling: Although this is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, Scottish soldiers have an important continuing role in the United Kingdom's defence plans.

9. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discussed recruitment to the Scottish regiments with the Secretary of State for Defence. [192851]

Mr. Darling: I am in regular contact with my right hon. Friend and discuss a wide range of issues.

Broadband

8. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will be making recommendations on rural broadband in Scotland during the telecommunications review. [192850]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office works closely with the Ofcom team in Scotland on a range of broadcasting and telecommunications issues. I am aware of the detailed consultation response from the Scottish Executive which places emphasis on the importance of getting rural aspects right.

Economy

10. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the Scottish economy. [192852]

Mr. Darling: I have regular discussions with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor on a range of matters.

Disability Discrimination Act

11. Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps the Scotland Office has taken since 1 October to highlight the new obligations on service providers following the introduction of part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [192853]

Mrs. McGuire: It has been Government policy to highlight new obligations on service providers as early as possible prior to the implementation date of 1 October. The Department for Work and Pensions has undertaken a major publicity campaign throughout the country to increase awareness of the Disability Discrimination Act and particularly the duties for employers and service providers, including a direct mailing to around one million small businesses.

In addition, in Scotland, the DRC worked closely with Scottish business organisations and my hon. Friend, the Advocate-General, addressed an awareness raising reception with guests representing disabled people, businesses and public sector organisations a few days prior to the implementation date.

Call Boxes (Rural Areas)

12. Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet BT authorities in Scotland to discuss call boxes in rural areas. [192855]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friend and I are aware of the issues but have no current plans to meet BT authorities.

Army

13. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Defence on the future structure of the Army in Scotland. [192856]

14. Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has held with the Secretary of State for Defence regarding the Scottish infantry regiments. [192857]

Mr. Darling: I am in regular contact with my right hon. Friend and we discuss a wide range of issues.

Jobcentres (Lanarkshire)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has met the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions to discuss closures of Jobcentres in Lanarkshire. [192854]

Mr. Darling: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my right hon. Friend the Member for Coatbridge and Chryston (Mr. Clarke).

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Diana Organ: To ask the Solicitor-General when she will issue the strategic plan and guidance for the Crown Prosecution Service's resources as a result of successful confiscation orders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. [191933]

The Solicitor-General: The 2004 Spending Review provided for a new scheme to incentivise criminal justice agencies to recover asset from criminals. The Crown Prosecution Service is working with colleagues from the Serious Fraud Office, the Customs and Excise Prosecution Office, the Home Office, and the Department of Constitutional Affairs to develop a scheme for agreement with the Treasury. Operational details of the new scheme have not yet been agreed, but it is proposed that it will become operative during 2006–07. At that stage guidance will be issued to the CPS and other agencies.

European Court of Human Rights

Tom Cox: To ask the Solicitor-General how many United Kingdom cases are awaiting hearing before the European Court of Human Rights. [191958]

The Solicitor-General: There are 351 cases against the United Kingdom pending before the European Court of Human Rights that have been declared admissible or partly admissible by the Court. There has been an oral hearing in five of these cases, but the Court has not yet delivered its judgment on the merits. None of the remaining cases is at present scheduled for an oral hearing; owing to the enormous backlog of cases before the Court, oral hearings are now the exception rather than the rule.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) on what date the Attorney-General (a) gave his advice to the Prime Minister about the legality of the war with Iraq and (b) officially examined Iraq's declaration of December 2002; what he considered to be material breaches in the declaration; on what date he made his opinion on these specific breaches known; whether he first expressed the opinion that there was material breach before he examined Iraq's declaration; and if she will make a statement; [190233]

(2) on what date the Attorney-General (a) gave his advice to the Prime Minister about the legality of the war with Iraq and (b) officially examined Iraq's declaration of December 2002; what he assessed as material breaches in the declaration; on what date he made his opinion on these specific aspects known; and if she will make a statement; [191011]

(3) if the Attorney-General will make a further assessment of whether Iraq was in major breach of United Nations resolutions to justify war based on the findings of the Iraq Survey Group report; and if she will make a statement. [190985]

The Solicitor-General: I refer the hon. Member to paragraphs 366–387 of the report of the Butler Review of Intelligence on Weapons of Mass Destruction (HC898) which describe the role of intelligence in assessing the legality of the use of force against Iraq. This section of the report sets out the legal process, including when advice was given by the Attorney-General.

The Butler Report also makes it clear that the advice concerned the legal interpretation of relevant UN Security Council resolutions and not WMD-related intelligence. In paragraph 1 of UNSCR 1441, the Security Council itself decided that Iraq was, and remained, in material breach of its obligations under relevant resolutions. In paragraph 4 of resolution 1441, the Security Council also decided that false statements or omissions in the declarations submitted by Iraq pursuant to the resolution and failure by Iraq at any time to comply with, and co-operate fully in the implementation of the resolution would constitute a further material breach of Iraq's obligations. It is a question of fact whether there were any such false statements or omissions in Iraq's declarations and whether Iraq did comply with and cooperate fully in the implementation of the resolution. As appears from paragraph 383 of the Butler Report, it was not for the Law Officers themselves to ascertain what those facts were. As stated in paragraph 385, the Prime Minister formed the view, based on information from a wide range of sources, including UNMOVIC reports, that there were false statements and omissions in the Iraqi declarations and also that Iraq had failed to comply with and cooperate fully in the implementation of resolution 1441.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Analogue Switch-off

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the planned dates for analogue switch-off are broken down by ITV region. [193677]

Estelle Morris: Much progress has been made in the discussions between the Government, Ofcom, and Public Service Broadcasters and other stakeholders on the detailed plans for switchover. However, decisions have yet to be made on the timetable for Switchover across the UK by ITV regions.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the planned dates are for analogue switch-off for the transmitters at (a) Durris, (b) Rosemarkie, (c) Knock More and (d) Rumster Forest. [193678]

Estelle Morris: Discussions are taking place between the Government, Ofcom, and Public Service Broadcasters and other stakeholders on the detailed plans for switchover. However, no specific dates have been set for the conversion of individual transmitters (with the exception of the Technical Trial transmitter in Ferryside which will be converted in March 2005).

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Central-Local Government Partnership

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost to public funds of the Central Local Government Partnership conference held at Leeds Castle on 14 and 15 October was; and how many Government Ministers attended. [193360]

Phil Hope: The event held at Leeds Castle was a meeting of the Central Local Partnership (CLP)—a forum for leading members from local government to hold discussions with Ministers. The CLP meets three times a year, two meetings are held at the offices of the Local Government Association (LGA) or at the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's offices in London, and the October meeting is an Away Day.

The cost of the event was approximately £23,000, shared equally between central Government and the LGA. Over the two days 14 Ministers attended from Departments that work closely with local authorities. The councillors attending were drawn from all parties represented in local government including the chairman of the LGA, Sir Sandy Bruce-Lockhart, Conservative leader of Kent county council. Following is a list of the Ministers and councillors who attended the event:

Ministers

Right hon. John Prescott MP, Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Right hon. Nick Raynsford MP, Minister of State for Local and Regional Government, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Right hon. Lord Rooker, Minister of State for Housing, Planning and Regeneration, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Right hon. Keith Hill MP, Minister of State for Housing and Planning, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

The hon. Phil Hope MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Right hon. Paul Boateng MP, Chief Secretary to HM Treasury, Her Majesty's Treasury

Right hon. Alun Michael MP, Minister of State for Rural Affairs, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs

The hon. Charlotte Atkins MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Department for Transport

The hon. Hazel Blears MP, Minister of State, Home Office

The hon. Rosie Winterton MP, Minister of State, Department of Health

Right hon. Charles Clarke MP, Secretary of State for Education and Skills, Department for Education and Skills

The Noble Lord Geoffrey Filkin, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Children and Families, Department for Education and Skills

The Noble Lord Andrew Macintosh MP, Minister for Media and Heritage, Department for Culture, Media and Sport

The hon. Chris Pond MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Department for Work and Pensions

Local Government Association Councillors

Sir Sandy Bruce-Lockhart, Chairman of LGA, Kent County Council, Conservative Party

Peter Chalke CBE, Vice-Chairman of LGA, Wiltshire County Council, Conservative Party

Simon Milton, Chairman of Improvement Board, Westminster City Council, Conservative Party

Margaret Eaton OBE, Deputy Chair of LGA, City of Bradford, Conservative Party

Sir Jeremy Beecham, Vice-Chairman of LGA, Newcastle upon Tyne City Council, Labour Party

Aiden Rave, Deputy Chairman of LGA Labour Group, Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council, Labour Party

Dame Sally Powell, Chair of Safety Communities Board, London Borough of Hammersmith and Fulham, Labour Party

David Sparks OBE, Chairman of Environment Board, Dudley Metropolitan Borough Council, Labour Party

Chris Clarke OBE, Leader of LGA Liberal Democrat Group and Deputy Chairman of LGA, Somerset County Council, Liberal Democrat Party

Richard Kemp, Deputy Leader of LGA Liberal Democrat Group, Liverpool City Council, Liberal Democrat Party

Chloe Lambert, Leader of LGA Independent Group and Deputy Chairman of LGA, Aylesbury Vale District Council, Independent Party

Baroness Ruth Henig, Chair of association of Policy Authorities, Chair of Lancashire Policy authority, Lancashire County Council, Labour Party

Council Tax (Yorkshire)

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of the (a) City of York council, (b) Ryedale district council, (c) North Yorkshire county council and (d) Scarborough borough council budget was met from council tax receipts in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 2004–05. [193905]

Mr. Raynsford: The proportion of each council's revenue expenditure met from council tax in 1997–98 and 2004–05 for the four authorities are tabled as follows:

Percentage

	1997–98	2004–05
City of York	28	29
Rydale district council	46	49
North Yorkshire county council	28	31
Scarborough borough council	28	41

The data are as reported by the local authority and use outturn data for 1997–98 and budget data for 2004–05.

Decent Homes Standard

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his estimate is of the cost of meeting the decent homes standard in each local authority area. [193242]

Keith Hill: Stock-owning local authorities report to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister the cost of meeting the decent homes standard in the council stock. This covers the cost to bring existing non-decent dwellings up to the decent homes standard, but does not cover work to prevent currently decent dwellings from falling into non-decency. This information has been made available in the Library of the House.

Disabilities Facilities Grant

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the cost of abolishing the means test on parents of disabled children for the disabilities facilities grant. [192893]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, jointly with the Department of Health and the Department of Education and Skills is undertaking a comprehensive review of the Disabled Facilities Grant programme. This will include a consideration of a number of changes to the means test including a full analysis of costs. The Review Group will report to Ministers in May 2005.

Disability Housing Registers

Paul Holmes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what steps he is taking to promote the use of disability housing registers; [193570]

(2) how many local authorities in England operate disability housing registers; and if he will make a statement. [193573]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recognises that it is extremely important that people with disabilities and access needs are housed appropriately and that they have the right level of priority for housing under an allocation scheme. Furthermore, the Government want to see housing authorities, and other social landlords, make the best use of our housing stock, and this includes stock which is accessible or has been adapted.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister considers that local authorities would find it useful to operate a disability housing register and should be encouraged to do so, but ultimately it should be up to the authority itself to decide whether it makes sense to do so.

(1) The statutory Code of Guidance on the Allocation of Accommodation (paragraph 6.11) recommends that housing authorities maintain lists of properties that are suitable for people with disabilities and other special needs groups and that these could be made available to relevant applicants of social housing, free of charge. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will consult with the Disability Rights Commission and other interested parties on how to strengthen the Code of Guidance to ensure that disabled people are housed appropriately and to make better use of properties which have been designed or adapted for disabled people. A revised Code of Guidance will be issued next year.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is developing a national standard for measuring accessibility through the National Register of Social Housing (NROSH) which should be available by September 2005. NROSH will be a central record of social housing and will collect information on the attributes of each dwelling including size, type and rent. These attributes include three measures of accessibility; first, whether the dwelling meets one of the recognised standards (Lifetime Homes, Housing Corporation Design Standards or Building Regulations—Part M); secondly, counts of the number of steps outside and within the dwelling or block; and finally a record of adaptations which have been carried out. By establishing a national standard for recording accessibility NROSH will assist local authorities in the setting up of local registers. The surveying of properties to collect accessibility information and provision of this to NROSH will be at the discretion of local authorities.

(2) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect this information.

Gypsies

Mr. Luff: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local plans the Government Office for the West Midlands has objected to on the grounds of their Gypsy policies. [193107]

Keith Hill: The Government Office has made a small number of objections to draft development plans prepared under provisions in the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 in relation to policies for Gypsy sites. The objections related to issues of compliance with current guidance contained in the Department's Circular 1/94, "Gypsy Sites and Planning". It asks local planning authorities to assess the need for Gypsy accommodation in their areas and, wherever possible, to identify in their plans locations suitable for Gypsy sites, whether local authority or private sites. Where this is not possible authorities are asked to set out clear, realistic criteria for suitable locations as a basis for site provision policies. No objections have been made to policies for Gypsy sites in draft local plans prepared by Wychavon district council in the hon. Member's constituency. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has announced a review of Circular 1/94.

Housing Bill

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of how many surveyors will be required as a result of the seller's packs provisions included in the Housing Bill; how many are available at the present time; and what estimate he has made of how long it will take to train sufficient surveyors. [R] [193781]

Keith Hill: The industry estimates that around 7,500 home inspectors (some working full time some working part time) will be needed to compile home condition reports for home information packs in England and Wales. As this new qualification is dependent on the passage of the Housing Bill, there are no qualified home inspectors yet. However, independent research by Asset Skills, the relevant sector skills council, shows that between 10,000 and 18,000 people working in property services or related industries are expected to convert to work as home inspectors. This indicates that there will be sufficient qualified inspectors available to provide the required number of home condition reports when the reforms are implemented in January 2007. All home inspectors will have to belong to a certification scheme and will have to obtain the required home inspection qualification before they can become members. The length of training will depend on the candidate's level of existing knowledge and experience. This could range between a matter of months for a RICS surveyor already doing similar work, to the equivalent of a full time two year course followed by a period of "on the job" training for someone with no previous experience.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what implementation date the Government plan for the provisions of the Housing Bill relating to seller's packs; and what assessment he has made of whether sufficient professional indemnity insurance will be available in the market by that date. [R] [193782]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister anticipates that the home information pack reforms will be implemented in January 2007. But we will not introduce compulsory home condition reports until we are satisfied that all the necessary elements are in place, including satisfactory indemnity insurance for home inspectors. This continues to be the subject of extensive research and discussion and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has established programme management arrangements involving consumer representatives and key industry stakeholders to provide help and guidance on this. Assisted by the Association of British Insurers and our industry working group, discussions with commercial insurers are taking place aimed at identifying options based on a commercial approach. The possible basis for an insurance regime will be published when this work is complete. Discussions with leading commercial insurers indicate that they are broadly comfortable with the proposals and that there is an appetite to insure home inspectors.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Government intend to establish a national database of the information contained in the seller's pack provided for in the Housing Bill; and whether the packs will have to be available in electronic form to purchasers. [193807]

Keith Hill: There will not be a national database of the information contained in home information packs. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is proposing to make provision in the Housing Bill for a register of home condition reports. Our intention is that the register will comprise an electronic databank of all home condition reports prepared by registered home inspectors. In order to respect privacy, and data-protection legislation, access to information obtained from the register would be strictly controlled. Home information packs may be in an electronic format but potential buyers will be entitled to ask for a paper copy of the pack (or part of the pack) if they prefer.

Housing Renewal Pathfinders

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what compensation packages are offered to home owners whose homes are to be demolished in each of the nine Pathfinder areas of England; and if he will make a statement. [193232]

Keith Hill: Compensation and relocation packages are determined by the individual market renewal pathfinders and participating authorities. In the case of properties acquired by a Compulsory Purchase Order, the local authority is obliged to pay the open market value for the property. In addition, they are also obliged to cover all reasonable disturbance costs incurred by the individual who has to move house. A home loss payment to an owner-occupier is also made which is set at 10 per cent. of the value of the house purchased, subject to a minimum of £3,400 and a maximum of £34,000. Tenants can claim a flat-rate home loss payment of £3,400 in addition to any disturbance costs payable.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many press officers are employed by each of the Housing Renewal Pathfinders in England. [193233]

Keith Hill: Staffing matters are for each individual pathfinder to decide to best meet their needs. However, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware that all but two of the pathfinders currently employ one Communications Officer each, for whom dealing with the press is part of their duties. Local authorities provide media support for the two pathfinders not employing press officers directly (Manchester Salford and Hull and East Riding).

Inter-departmental Co-operation

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress he has made towards working with other Government Departments to raise the levels of (a) social inclusion, (b) neighbourhood renewal and (c) regional prosperity. [191264]

Phil Hope: The Government strongly believe that the issues of social inclusion, neighbourhood renewal, and local and regional prosperity are tightly interlinked. A partnership approach—not only across Government Departments but also more widely with local and regional service providers and policy makers—are essential to tackle the difficult issues underlying deprivation and social exclusion. Both the Social Exclusion Unit and the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit work closely with all Government Departments, and this work has already produced tangible results:

on crime, where the average burglary rate in the 88 most deprived local authority areas has seen significant falls;

on education, where the average pass rate gap (for five good GCSEs—grade A-C) between the 88 local authority areas and the English average continues to narrow at a faster rate; on worklessness, where the rise in employment rates has climbed faster in the 88 areas than it has nationally; and through investing in children to break the cycle of disadvantage, with the Government increasing financial support for children by £10 billion since 1997.

The Government have also successfully strengthened the regional tier in order to draw together the policies, strategies and funding streams of many departments. The Government Offices for the Regions carry out work on behalf of 10 Government Departments, influence regional investment of around £9 billion and are involved in the delivery of 39 national Public Service Agreements. They play a key role in delivering the Government's policies for neighbourhood renewal, social inclusion and regional economic performance, using their programmes and influence to enable regions and localities to become better, more sustainable communities in which to live and work.

Local Authorities (Debt Collection)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice his Department has given to local authorities pursuing outstanding debts of (a) less than £3,000 and (b) more than £3,000. [193328]

Mr. Raynsford: No general guidance has been issued to local authorities by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the pursuit of outstanding debts. Authorities are required by section 151 of the Local Government Act 1972 to make arrangements for the proper administration of their financial affairs, and policies and procedures for pursuing debts would properly form part of those arrangements.

The Non-Domestic Rating Contributions (England) Regulations require authorities to have made proper arrangements for securing economy, efficiency and effectiveness in relation to the collection of non-domestic rates if they are to be permitted to make deductions for bad or doubtful debts from the payments they make into the national pool. Advice on this requirement was issued to local authority chief finance officers on 5 May 1993. This advice is in general terms, and makes no distinction between amounts under and over £3,000.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the combined local authority debt (a) is and (b) was in 1997; and what the average rate of interest paid on that debt is. [193810]

Mr. Raynsford: The information is as follows:

(a) At 31 March 2004 the total outstanding debt of local authorities in England was £37,659 million.

(b) At 31 March 1997 the total outstanding debt of local authorities in England was £37,934 million.

The average rate of interest paid on total outstanding debt is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Source:

ODPM monthly and quarterly borrowing returns, Public Works Loan Board.

Long-term borrowing to finance capital expenditure was regulated through the issue of credit approvals up until 31 March 2004 and, as from 1 April 2004, is subject to the Prudential System.

Local Government (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the funding of local government in Coventry South. [193313]

Mr. Raynsford: I will make a statement on the formula grant allocations for 2005–06 in due course.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the total cost of holding the referendum on an elected regional assembly in the North East. [193755]

Mr. Raynsford: The cost for the North East will be approximately £2.9 million—an average cost of £1.50 per elector. This covers the cost incurred by counting officers such as printing the ballot papers and conducting the count. The maximum amounts payable to a counting officer for a Regional Referendum were set out in The Regional Assembly and Local Government

Referendums (Counting Officers' Charges) Order 2004 (S.I. 2004 No. 2105), which was approved by Parliament on 22 July 2004.

The lead Yes/No campaign organisations—appointed by the Electoral Commission—have each received a grant of £100,000 from the Commission. They will also be entitled to a free mailing and free TV broadcast(s). The delivery costs of the mailing are drawn from the Consolidated Fund. The total cost of the mailing will not be known until the Royal Mail has submitted its accounts.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost has been of (a) visits made and (b) meetings hosted by Ministers in his Department relating to elected regional assemblies since May 2002. [193756]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister laid out the estimated costs of the launch of the information campaign in the answers to the right hon. Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry) on 5 January 2004, Official Report, column 150W and 23 April 2004, Official Report, column 694W; and in the answers to the hon. Member on 6 May 2004, Official Report, column 1687W; 21 May 2004, Official Report, column 1285W and 20 July 2004, Official Report, column 212W.

The current estimate of costs for all visits and meetings since November 2003 is £184,143.

Before the 'Your Say' campaign was launched in November 2003, costs for activities carried out were not recorded centrally.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of producing and publishing (a) the White Paper, "Your Region, Your Choice", Cm 5511 and (b) the Draft Regional Assemblies Bill, Cm 6285. [193780]

Mr. Raynsford: The cost of producing and publishing the White Paper, "Your Region, Your Choice, Revitalising the English Regions", May 2002 (Cm. 5511) was approximately £64,000.

The cost to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister of producing and publishing the Regional Assemblies Draft Bill, July 2004 (Cm 6285) was approximately £20,500. This figure does not include the costs of production to TSO (The Stationery Office) Ltd., which are commercial in confidence.

Vanessa Arscott

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he had at his recent meeting with the Thai Prime Minister on the death of Ms Vanessa Arscott of Ashburton. [193844]

Phil Hope: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister raised the murders of Vanessa Arscott and her partner Adam Lloyd when he met Prime Minister Thaksin on 8 October, and thanked the Thai authorities for their work in arresting the suspect.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Transponders

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what exemptions he will be introducing to the mandatory installation of Mode S transponders in aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [193032]

Charlotte Atkins: Legislation to require the carriage of Mode S transponders in aircraft will be introduced in two phases. The first of these will take effect from 31 March 2005 and will apply only to aircraft with a take off mass of more than 5,700kgs and a maximum cruising true airspeed of more than 250 knots that fly under Instrument Flight Rules. This does not include the majority of General Aviation aircraft. Exemptions to the carriage requirements are permitted for certain technical reasons and for those aircraft that infrequently operate under Instrument Flight Rules. The full details of the exemption criteria are available on the Eurocontrol website www.eurocontrol.int/mode_s.

The second phase of Mode S introduction is expected to take effect on 31 March 2008. The details of the widened mandate and the associated exemption policy have not yet been decided. The Civil Aviation Authority will conduct a wide-ranging consultation on these issues commencing next year.

Air Navigation Services

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to charge aircraft flying under visual flight rules for aircraft navigation services; and if he will make a statement; [193031]

(2) what plans he has to provide non-commercial air traffic with air navigation services without charge; and if he will make a statement; [193033]

(3) what plans he has to impose Eurocontrol charges on aircraft with maximum take off weight below 2,000 kilograms; and if he will make a statement; [193035]

(4) what plans he has to impose Eurocontrol charges on (a) gliders, (b) microlight aircraft, (c) hangliders, (d) paragliders and (e) balloons; and if he will make a statement; [193036]

(5) what plans he has to charge for air navigation services in airspace classified as (a) E, (b) F and (c) G; and if he will make a statement. [193037]

Charlotte Atkins: The Single European Sky (SES) Regulations, which came into force on the 20 April 2004, require the development of a transparent common charging scheme for the recovery of the costs of air navigation services provided by the member states. One of the underlying principles of the charging scheme is that air navigation service costs should be recovered according to the 'user pays' principle, that is airspace users should pay for the services they use.

The current draft of the European Commission's Implementing Rules on charging provides for member states to exempt certain categories of airspace users from the charges scheme. The costs for such an exemption would have to met by the state. The text has not been finalised so it impossible to make any decision on whether or not to grant exemptions.

Aviation (Emissions)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ensure air flights carrying only freight reflect to a greater degree in their costs the environmental impact of such flights, with particular reference to climate change. [193082]

Charlotte Atkins: "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper recognises the importance of ensuring that, over time, aviation meets its external costs, including its environmental costs. Specific proposals to address the climate change impacts of aviation are set out in the White Paper (paras 3.35–3.43).

Birmingham Airport

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the proposals for compensation to near neighbours of the suggested second runway at Birmingham International Airport; what the (a) noise and (b) physical distance parameters will be; what the personal circumstances of qualifying claimants will be; and if he will bring forward a compensation scheme funded by central Government. [193694]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Air travel is essential to the UK economy and we have set out in "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper (Cm 6046, December 2003) a balanced strategy that will deliver sustainable development of air transport. The Government's approach to the control and mitigation of aircraft noise impacts, which includes compensation, is set out in chapters 3 and 12. This makes it clear that it is for airport operators to develop schemes to tackle generalised blight. Birmingham International Airport (BIA) has developed a voluntary generalised blight scheme and is presently consulting on its terms. The consultation closes on 30 November.

Correspondence

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he responded to the communication from the Chief Executive of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association UK, dated 22 September; and if he will make a statement. [193029]

Charlotte Atkins: Martin Robinson wrote to a Department for Transport official on 22 September 2004. Department for Transport officials met with him on 5 October to discuss the issues raised by his letter and responded to the communication on 13 October 2004.

Cycling

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what progress against national targets has been made by local authorities on increasing cycling; [191866]

(2) whether he has evaluated the work of the English Regions Cycling Development Team; and if he will make a statement; [191874]

(3) how his Department will (a) assist and (b) assess progress after May 2005 of local authorities in (i) developing cycling, (ii) setting local targets for cycling and (iii) preparing the cycling element of local transport plans. [191877]

Charlotte Atkins: The number of cycling trips per person per year has remained broadly similar at a national level since 1996.

The Department for Transport is currently engaged in a review of the effectiveness of the National Cycling Strategy. This includes the work of the English Regions Cycling Development Team, which has been provided by AEA Technology under a contract that expires in May 2005. The Team carried out an important assessment of local highway authorities provision for cycling which has considerably improved our knowledge base. Its advice has also improved local and national practice. The Department is now looking for a more flexible resource than a single team to support the development of cycling and the contract will not therefore be renewed or extended.

Local authorities' provision for cycling will remain a key part of the second Local Transport Plans, which will be submitted to my Department in July 2005. Officials will be involved in the development of all aspects of those Plans and the advice of the English Regions Cycling Development Team will be sought on the elements related to cycling, including targets. Progress under the Plans will be measured through the established system of annual progress reporting.

East Coast Main Line

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much has been invested in East Coast Main Line infrastructure in each year since 1990; [192414]

(2) how much has been invested in railway infrastructure in Yorkshire and the Humber in each year since 1990. [192415]

Mr. McNulty: These are operational matters for Network Rail. The company will write to my hon. Friend in due course.

GNER

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers GNER has carried in each year since its franchise began. [192412]

Mr. McNulty: The number of annual passenger journeys is shown in the table.

	Passenger journeys (million)
1996–97	11.9
1997–98	13.7
1998–99	13.9
1999–2000	15.9
2000–01	13.6
2001–02	14.5
2002–03	14.6
2003–04	15.8

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains per weekday on average GNER has run out of York in each year since its franchise began. [192413]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not readily available in the form requested. However, in the summer 1996 timetable there were 29 northbound services and 28 southbound services out of York on weekdays. In the current timetable there are 32 northbound and 32 southbound services out of York on weekdays.

Hastings and Bexhill Link Road

Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the construction of the Hastings and Bexhill link road. [193189]

Charlotte Atkins [holding answer 25 October 2004]: East Sussex county council have submitted a bid for this major local transport scheme. We expect to announce our decision for this and other major scheme bids as part of the annual local transport capital settlement later this year.

Integrated Kent Franchise

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent to date on the Integrated Kent Franchise. [192195]

Mr. McNulty: Expenditure of approximately £2.2 million has been incurred to date on the tendering of the IKF and the total cost is expected to be £3.85 million.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191437]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department was created in May 2002. Since that date the number of mobile phones used by Ministers and special advisers was as follows:

	Mobile phones used by:
	Ministers	Special advisors
2002	3	2
2003	4	2
2004	4	2

There is no central record of mobile phones and information about their usage by Officials could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Rail Network

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding improvements to the rail network since Network Rail assumed responsibility. [192666]

Mr. McNulty: Network Rail has made significant progress in putting right the failings of its predecessor, Railtrack, since taking over the rail infrastructure in October 2002.

Achievements include:

one million fewer delay minutes in 2003–04 and over half a million further reduction in first half of 2004–05;

the public performance measure of total industry performance (moving annual average) has improved from 78.7 per cent. (September 2002) to 81.8 per cent. (September 2004);

2,672 miles of new rail installed since October 2002—replacing 13.5 per cent. of the entire network; broken rails at all time low of 334 in 2003–04 compared with 444 in previous year—25 per cent. reduction;

train protection and warning system installed throughout Great Britain, on time and budget;

Stage 1 of West Coast upgrade completed—125 mph railway to Manchester; integrated control centres operational at three locations;

16,000 maintenance workers seamlessly taken in-house as a unified national rail maintenance operation is created.

Strategic Rail Authority

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost has been to the Strategic Rail Authority of transferring the South Eastern Trains franchise from Connex. [192227]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) engaged external advisers on the transfer at a total cost of £2.757 million. All but approximately £150,000 of this cost was recovered from Connex as part of the negotiations of the termination. The costs of internal SRA staff effort on the transfer are not separately identifiable but were contained within the SRA's then existing total staff complement and budget.

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether all functions of the Strategic Rail Authority are due to transfer to the Department of Transport under the proposals outlined in "The Future of Rail" White Paper. [192600]

Mr. McNulty: The Rail White Paper, "The Future of Rail", proposes the abolition of the Strategic Rail Authority. The strategic and financial responsibilities of the SRA will pass to the Department for Transport. Implementing this will require primary legislation and we will introduce a Bill as soon as parliamentary time permits. Activities related to the operation of the railway will pass to Network Rail and consumer protection licensing conditions will pass to the Office of Rail Regulation. Further, additional responsibilities, for rail will be devolved to the Scottish Executive and the Welsh National Assembly.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191421]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Ashford (Mr. Green) on 15 September 2004, Official Report, column 1570W, which covered the Central Department and Agencies.

There were no frauds reported in the NDPBs for 2002–03. In 2003–04, only one NDPB reported fraud. This involved two involving fraudulent use of a stolen credit card. The value of these cases amounted to £14,270 and £3,865 respectively. Both were reported in the Treasury Fraud return for 2003–04.

CABINET OFFICE

Communication Equipment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the average spending on communication equipment for each Minister was in the Department in the last year for which figures are available. [193315]

Ruth Kelly: The average spend on communications equipment for each Minister and their Private Office in the Department during 2003–04 was £5,700.

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [192758]

Ruth Kelly: The Cabinet Office spent £13.9 million on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of antisocial behaviour have been reported to the police in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [192866]

Ms Blears: There are currently no data on the number of incidents of antisocial behaviour (ASB) due to the subjective nature of ASB itself. The latest data collected on ASB relate to the public perception of ASB in England and Wales and are measured by the British Crime Survey.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests and (b) convictions for antisocial behaviour there have been in (i) the Jarrow constituency, (ii) South Tyneside, (iii) Tyne and Wear and (iv) England and Wales in each year since 1997. [192882]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not available.

Information on arrests collected centrally is based on persons arrested for "notifiable" offences by main offence group and police force area only and therefore does not identify individual offences.

Information on convictions is available by offence, of which some may have involved antisocial behaviour. Such circumstances are not identified by the Home Office Court Proceedings database.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been taken out in each constituency in (a) England and Wales, (b) South Tyneside and (c) Tyne and Wear since the scheme's inception. [192880]

Ms Blears: Information on antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued at constituency level is not collected centrally. The table (which has been placed in the Library) shows the number of ASBOs issued, as notified to the Home Office by all courts, and where restrictions have been imposed for a specific local authority area.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the latest figure is for the number of antisocial behaviour orders issued. [193989]

Ms Blears: The number of antisocial behaviour orders issued, as notified to the Home Office by all courts, up to 31 March 2004 (latest available) is 2,455.

Breath Tests

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department (1) how many breath tests were carried out by police officers in each year since 1997 (a) in total and (b) broken down by police authority; and what proportion were found to be positive in each case; [192181]

(2) how many breath tests were conducted on male drivers aged between (a) 17 and 20 years and (b) 20 and 29 years in each year since 1999; how many of these tested positive; and how many were convicted of driving when under the influence of alcohol. [192182]

Ms Blears: The table shows the number of screening breath tests and the proportion that tested positive or were refused by police force area from 1997 to 2002 (latest available). 2003 data will be available in early 2005.

Data are not collected centrally on the number of screening breath tests by sex or age of the driver.

Civil Service (Job Losses)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which services within his Department will be (a) affected by and (b) subject to job losses consequent on the cuts in the Civil Service announced in the Spending Review. [189634]

Fiona Mactaggart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Mr. Boateng) on 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 1659W.

Full details of the workforce changes announced in the Spending Review are being worked through, and we are consulting all stakeholders including unions and staff.

Departments will come forward in due course with details of workforce changes once plans are finalised.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Community Support Officers have been recruited from ethnic backgrounds. [192643]

Ms Blears: The Home Office Statistical Bulletin number 13/04, "Police Service Strength in England and Wales 31 March 2004", published in September 2004, states that 591 Community Support Officers (CSOs) are from minority ethnic backgrounds. This figure represents about 17 per cent. of the total number of CSOs.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers have been allocated to community support officers. [192644]

Ms Blears: Community Support Officers (CSOs) may be designated by Chief Officers with any of the following powers:

Power to request a name and address for Fixed Penalty Offences and Offences that cause injury alarm and distress to another person or damage or loss of another's property;

Power to Request the name and address of a person acting in an antisocial manner; Power to request a person to stop drinking in a designated public area and to surrender open containers of alcohol;

Power to confiscate alcohol from Young Persons;

Power to confiscate cigarettes and tobacco products from young people;

Power of entry to save life or limb, or to prevent serious damage to property;

Power to seize vehicles used to cause alarm and distress;

Power to require the removal of abandoned vehicles;

Power to stop vehicles for the purpose of a road check;

Power to maintain and enforce a cordoned area established under Terrorism Act;

Power to stop and search vehicles and things carried by driver/passengers under Terrorism Act and things carried by pedestrians;

Power to regulate traffic for the purpose of escorting abnormal loads;

Power to stop a vehicle for testing;

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the recruitment requirements are for Community Support Officers. [192647]

Ms Blears: Section 38(4) of the Police Reform Act 2002 states that the chief officer of the employing force needs to be satisfied that a person designated as a Community Support Officer is suitable and capable of effectively carrying out their duties and has received adequate training to carry out the duties conferred by the designation.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he will reply to the letter to him dated 6 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Ms J. Lloyd; [192539]

(2) when he will answer the letter to him dated 6 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Ms J. Lloyd. [193935]

Mr. Blunkett: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 20 October 2004.

Departmental Press Officers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many press officers were employed by the Department in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 2003–04; and at what cost. [190982]

Fiona Mactaggart: Press officers within the Home Office are employed at the Information Officer (IO) and Senior Information Officer (SIO) grades. The costs for the years requested are in the table:

Financial Year	Press Officers	Cost (£)
1996–97	16	369,000
2003–04	39	1,900,000

Expansion of the Home Office press office followed an external consultant's review of its staffing and operation in 1999 and recommended the creation of the "Newsdesk" to meet the demands of the media. This improved efficiency from 'losing' in excess of 20 per cent. of the calls pre expansion, to a position where from June 2003 to June 2004 91.8 per cent. of the 67,070 press calls received by the Newsdesk were answered. The Home Office press office and the prison service press office merged in May 2001.

The £1.9 million cost for 2003–04 on press officers is 0.094 per cent. of the overall Home Office salary bill (£2,016,593,000)

Home Office departmental report 2003–04.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many meetings of the Ministerial Sub-Committee of Green Ministers were attended by the Department's Green Minister in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [190873]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 20 October 2004]: I am the Home Office Green Minister and a member of ENV(G). It has been established practice under successive Governments not to disclose information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees. This practice is now formalised by Exemption 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Impaired Drivers

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department how many convictions for drink-driving resulted in custodial sentences in each year since 1997 (a) in total and (b) broken down by police authority. [192180]

Ms Blears: Information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database on convictions and custodial sentences for drink-driving offences by police force area 1997 to 2002 is given in the table. Data for 2003 will be available early in 2005.

[1] Immediate custody includes sentences of secure training order, detention and training order, young offender institution and unsuspended sentence of imprisonment.

[2] Staffordshire police force were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted in the magistrates courts for the year 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robust enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Knives

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) household knives and (b) other types of knife were seized by the police in each of the last three years. [193992]

Ms Blears: This information is not collected centrally.

Long Baton

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances it would constitute a disciplinary offence for a police officer to strike an individual on the head with a long baton. [192693]

Ms Blears: The Police (Conduct) Regulations 2004 set out, at Schedule 1, a Code of Conduct, the 12 principles of which guide police officers' conduct. Code 4 specifically states:

> "Officers must never knowingly use more force than is reasonable, nor should they abuse their authority".

Therefore, if an officer goes beyond what is considered reasonable in the circumstances, this would constitute a breach of the Code. It would be up to the chief officer of the Police Service concerned to deal with that breach under the Police (Conduct) Regulations 2004.

Neighbourhood Watch

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many Neighbourhood Watch co-ordinator positions are funded (a) wholly and (b) partially by local authorities. [193054]

(2) what proportion of Neighbourhood Watch co-ordinator positions, or equivalent, are wholly or part-funded by (a) community safety partnerships, (b) crime reduction partnerships, (c) local authorities and (d) other funding sources. [193055]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 October 2004]: Local Neighbourhood Watch co-ordinators are primarily unpaid volunteers. Some are given training and are provided with office facilities in police stations. In addition, a proportion may also receive funding to cover other expenses or specific projects, but these are local arrangements for which information is not collected centrally.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to organisations seeking funding for a Neighbourhood Watch co-ordinator. [193056]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 October 2004]: No specific guidance is given to organisations seeking funding for Neighbourhood Watch co-ordinators, most of whom are unpaid volunteers.

Police Pay

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what salary police officers receive in (a) Havering and (b) Greater London on average. [192648]

Ms Blears: The Home Office does not collect information on average police salaries. There are national scales for ranks below Chief Officer, with higher rates of pay for Inspectors in London.

All officers in the Metropolitan Police Service also qualify for:

London Weighting at £1,938 a year.

London Allowance—at £4,338 a year if appointed on or after 1 September 1994 or £1,011 a year in other cases.

Metropolitan Police Officers may also qualify for:

Special Priority Payments of between which can be awarded to up to 40 per cent. of officers in posts identified by the force with the agreement of the police authority. Annual payments range from £500 to £3,000, and exceptionally up to £5,000;

If they are at the maximum of their pay scale and are able to demonstrate high professional competence, Competence Related Threshold Payments of £1,032 per annum;

A dog handler's allowance of £1,815 a year, where they care for a police dog at their home.

The current pay scales for officers in the Metropolitan Police Service are:

Racial/Religious Attacks

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent attacks perpetrated against Sikhs have been recorded in each of the last five years; and in how many of these attacks race or religion was deemed to be a factor. [192502]

Ms Blears: Information relating to the race or religion of victims of such offences is not available centrally. The information available centrally relates to offences which are racially or religiously aggravated and is given in the tables.

Table 1: Racially or religiously aggravated offences recorded by the police in England and Wales 1999–2000 to 2001–02[1]

Period	Racially or religiously aggravated less serious wounding	Racially or religiously aggravated common assault
1999–2000	2,687	4,275

RAF Fairford

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department what the final costs of policing anti-war protests at RAF Fairford in 2003 were. [192158]

Ms Blears: The Chief Constable informs me that the final costs of policing the anti-war protests at RAF Fairford were £7.723 million. The Home Office has provided a special grant of £7.29 million to Gloucestershire Constabulary to cover most of these costs.

Safer Neighbourhoods Programme

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the initial roll-out of the Metropolitan Police Service's Safer Neighbourhoods Programme. [192535]

Ms Blears: An evaluation of the National Reassurance Policing Programme has been commissioned. This study will assess the impact of police activity on public feelings of safety and security, community engagement, confidence in, and satisfaction with, the police in 16 pilot sites around the country. Two of the sites, Bexley and Enfield, are also part of the Safer Neighbourhoods Programme in the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) area. The evaluation is based upon a repeat survey of residents in pilot and control areas during Winter 2003–04 and Winter 2004–05. The respondents were randomly sampled to render the findings more robust. The results should be available in autumn 2005.

The MPS are conducting their own internal assessment of the Safer Neighbourhoods Programme for operational purposes. They are rolling out a public attitudes survey across the 96 wards involved in the programme. Residents in the first six wards were interviewed in April using a quota sample. A second quota sample of residents in the same six wards was taken in August.

The Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis reports that the introduction of Safer Neighbourhoods Teams is making a discernible impact across London. The feedback is extremely favourable: the public, the business sector and police partners are supportive of the programme. It is placing an increased uniform presence on the streets, increasing accessibility to policing services, galvanising community cohesion, impacting on crime, providing benefits to the wider community and providing the necessary familiarity to increase public confidence in the police service.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

AIDS Epidemic

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the need for short-term emergency funding, in addition to funding in the medium and long-term, to combat the AIDS epidemic. [190993]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID agrees with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) assessment made in their 2004 global report, that:

> "AIDS is an exceptional disease with exceptional and wide-ranging impact, which requires an exceptional response. It has the characteristics of both a short-term emergency and of a long-term development crisis".

"Taking Action, the UK's Strategy for tackling HIV and AIDS in the developing world" launched last July, takes account of both characteristics.

For example, DFID will assist countries to develop both short-term 'emergency' solutions to address the current shortage of health and education personnel, and to take a longer-term view of human resource planning and management in the light of the impact of the HIV and AIDS epidemic.

It is important to develop long-term solutions. HIV and AIDS require long-term predictable funding, which is why the UK is proposing to increase aid through the International Finance Facility. DFID has committed £1.5 billion to AIDS over the next three years from 2005 to 2008.

CDC Actis Capital

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 16 September, Official Report, column 1713W, on CDC/Actis Capital, if he will break down the amount owed to CDC by quarter since 1999. [192793]

Hilary Benn: Total debt owed to CDC at the end of each year from 1999 is as follows:

	£ million
1999	985.6
2000	731.2
2001	682.9
2002	552.1

This information is not retained on a quarterly basis and the cost of disaggregating it would be disproportionate.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) pursuant to the answer of 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 1709W, on CDC/Actis Capital, if he will list the (a) contractor, (b) subject studied, (c) cost and (d) date of each independent environmental study contracted by Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd. since 1999; [192794]

(2) if he will list audits of Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd.'s environmental management practices since 1999, broken down by auditor. [192811]

Hilary Benn: The studies and audits contracted and undertaken since 1999 are listed as follows.

The costs of these contracts are commercially sensitive. They have generally been in the range US$10,000 to US$50,000, depending on the scope and terms of reference.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who has performed external audits of environmental management at the (a) Higaturu Oil Palm, (b) Poliamba, (c) Milne Bay Estates, (d) Asiatic and (e) Harapan plantations since 1999; and whether such audits involved on-site monitoring. [192795]

Hilary Benn: Audits have been undertaken by LTS Indonesia, Environmental Management and Monitoring, Mott MacDonald Ltd., SGS Australia and local statutory bodies. Audits have generally involved onsite visits. Otherwise, onsite monitoring is part of the companies' internal environmental management systems which are audited at least every year by SGS Australia.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 16 September, Official Report, column 1709W, on CDC/Actis Capital, what assessment he has made of Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd.'s environmental assessment in its bi-annual investment valuation reviews. [192796]

Hilary Benn: DFID has made no assessment of Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd's environmental assessment. Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd. is required to comply with CDC's business principles and their environmental assessment is audited to the ISO 14001 standard.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 16 September, Official Report, column 1709W, on CDC/Actis Capital, if he will list the environmental matrix risk level of each (a) CDC/Aureos and (b) CDC/Actis Capital investment project. [192808]

Hilary Benn: CDC's Business Principles require Actis and Aureos to manage environmental risks, and the matrix system is a management tool used in this process. The risk levels of individual investments are commercially sensitive.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what CDC/Actis Capital investment there has been in Afghanistan Capital Partners; and if he will make a statement. [192809]

Hilary Benn: CDC has made no commitment to invest in Afghanistan Capital Partners.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the objectives of CDC/Actis Capital's partnership with Aviva plc. [192810]

Hilary Benn: CDC and Aviva are co-investors in a fund in China now managed by Actis. The fund contributes to poverty reduction by mobilising private capital and investing in viable Chinese businesses.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has received about (a) compliance and (b) non-compliance with business principle standards by Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd. [192797]

Hilary Benn: I refer to my answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1778W. The Department has received no specific representations about Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd.'s compliance or non-compliance with CDC's responsible business principles.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when the last environmental quality study was commissioned at (a) Higaturu Oil Palm, (b) Poliamba, (c) Milne Bay Estates, (d) Asiatic and (e) Harapan plantations. [192817]

Hilary Benn: Each of the plantations in the Pacific Rim Palm Oil Ltd. group—Higaturu Oil Palm, Poliamba, Milne Bay Estates, Asiatic and Harapan—was subject to an environmental audit in 2004.

Child Protection

Mike Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's support for development of solar energy projects in Angola; [R] [192606]

(2) what plans he has to increase support for development of solar energy projects in Angola. [R] [192607]

Hilary Benn: The British Embassy in Luanda, in partnership with British Petroleum (BP), co-funded a pilot project to give the village of Paranhos communal lighting, power supply to the school and clinic, potable water and some domestic lighting. Paranhos was selected in part because it houses roughly equal numbers of families from both sides of Angola's civil war. The project, as well as demonstrating the viability of renewable energy, is also an important part of the process of national reintegration.

This small pilot project and BP's interest in setting it up are welcome. I hope that BP and the Government of Angola are able to follow this up to ensure that the equipment continues to operate properly, providing a useful service to the selected village. No doubt, there are valuable lessons that can be learnt from this project, not least how best it might be replicated on a larger scale to provide permanent, reliable services.

In general, while solar energy can deliver useful benefits, it does have limitations, notably its inability to provide heat for cooking, the main energy requirement for most households in Africa. Other issues, such as the need to periodically replace expensive batteries, were taken into account in the design of the Paranhos project. This experience and the lessons learnt from this pilot need to be properly understood before there is any consideration of expanding it to other communities.

DFID is not providing support for renewable energy sources in Angola. However, more generally, DFID has funded some 75 energy projects since 1992 through our Knowledge and Research Programme (47 of which were started since May 1997) with a total value of £10 million, of which £3.6 million was spent on the development and promotion of renewable energy, especially for rural communities in developing countries. These have covered a wide range of technologies, including wind, small hydropower, solar photovoltaic, solar thermal and biomass.

DFID has recently signed a Programme Partnership Agreement with an international UK-based NGO, Intermediate Technology Development Group (ITDG) for £750,000 per year. Much of their work is the promotion of small-scale renewable energy technologies in developing countries to improve access to energy services, especially for poor communities.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on financial and technical assistance and economic co-operation with developing countries in Asia and Latin America met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were

(i) proposed and (ii) taken by the (A) EU and (B) UK as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [192496]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Greek Presidency of the European Union occupied the first six months of 2003. During that period the Asia and Latin America Management Committee met twice on 27 February and on 3 April. All meetings were held in Brussels. Officials represented the UK from the Department for International Development (DFID) and the United Kingdom Representation in Brussels.

The Asia and Latin America Management Committee operates independently of the Presidency. It is convened and chaired by the Commission and is constituted for Member States to assist the Commission with implementation of Council Regulation No 443/92 of 25 February 1992. The EC's Asia and Latin America programme determines the strategy framework for technical assistance and economic co-operation with developing countries in Asia and Latin America, and approves annual and multi-annual allocations to country and regional programmes. The details of discussions in the Committee are confidential and are covered by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, Part II, exemption 2. This exemption covers internal discussion and advice where the disclosure would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion. However, under Council Decision 1999/468/EC, the EC publishes an annual reports on the workings of the Committee.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on implementation of the programme of assistance to promote the transition to a market economy and to strengthen democracy and the rule of law in the partner states of eastern Europe and central Asia met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee made during the Greek presidency; and if he will make a statement. [192501]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Greek Presidency of the European Union occupied the first six months of 2003. During that period, the Phare Management Committee met four times during the Greek Presidency: 7 February; 7 March; 11 April; 12 June. All meetings were held in Brussels and the UK was represented by officials from DFID, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), and the United Kingdom Representation in Brussels (UKREP).

The Phare Management Committee oversees the implementation of Council Regulation 1266/1999 of 21 June 1999. The Phare Management Committee is convened and constituted by Member States to assist the Commission with the implementation of the Community's Phare Programme. It operates independently of the Presidency. Phare is the programme of EC pre-accession Assistance to applicant countries. The programme has three objectives: to strengthen public administrations and institutions; to promote convergence with European Union legislation and to promote economic and social cohesion. The Committee determines the strategy framework for the Phare Programme, and approves annual and multi-annual allocations to country and regional programmes The detail of the discussions in the Committees are confidential and are covered by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, Part II, exemption 2. Under Council Decision 1999/468/EC, the EC is required to publish an annual report on the workings of the Committees.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the committees on (a) co-financing operations with European non-governmental organisations in fields of interest to the developing countries and (b) food security and food aid met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the committees produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [193009]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Greek Presidency of the European Union occupied the first six months of 2003. During that period the NGO Co Financing Committee met twice on 21 January and on 3 June. The Food Aid and Food Security Management Committee met once on 28 February. All meetings were held in Brussels. The UK was represented in both Committees by officials from the Department for International Development (DFID).

The Non Governmental Organisations (NGO) Co Financing Committee operates independently of the Presidency. It is convened and chaired by the Commission and is constituted for Member States to assist the Commission with implementation of Council Regulation No 1658–98 of 17 July 1998. The European Community's (EC) NGO Co Financing programme considers co-financing operations with European NGOs development organisations in fields of interest to the developing countries.

The Food Security and Food Aid Management Committee operates independently of the Presidency. It is convened and chaired by the Commission and is constituted for Member States to assist the Commission with implementation of Council Regulation No 1292/96 of 27 June 1996. The EC's Food Security and Food Aid programme consists of identification, planning and implementation of food aid operations and operations in support of food security in developing countries.

The detail of discussions in the Committees are confidential and are covered by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, Part II, exemption 2. This exemption covers internal discussion and advice where the disclosure would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion. However, under Council Decision 1999/468/EC, the EC publishes annual reports on the workings of the Committees.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the (a) European Development Fund Committee and (b) Advisory Committee on the special system of assistance to traditional ACP suppliers of bananas met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (i) technical and (ii) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the committees produced during that period; what actions were (A) proposed and (B) taken by (1) the EU and (2) the UK Government as a result of the committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [193016]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Greek Presidency of the European Union occupied the first six months of 2003. During that period the European Development Fund (EDF) Committee met twice on 12 February and on 7 May. The Advisory Committee on the special system of assistance to traditional ACP suppliers of bananas did not meet in this period. All meetings were held in Brussels. The UK was represented by officials from the Department for International Development (DFID) and from the UK's Permanent Representation in Brussels.

The EDF Committee operates independently of the Presidency. It is convened and chaired by the Commission and is constituted for member states to meet with the Commission and the European Investment Bank (EIB). Its role is to scrutinise and approve financing proposals and allocation of EDF funds, serve as a forum for exchange of views on country and regional strategies and approve multi-annual allocations to country and regional programmes.

Operations financed from the European Development Fund are governed by the provisions of the Partnership Agreement between the African, Caribbean and Pacific States and the European Community (ACP-EU) signed in Cotonou, Benin on 23 June 2000 (known as the Cotonou Agreement).

Details of discussions in the Committee are confidential and are covered by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, Part II, and exemption 2. This exemption covers internal discussion and advice where the disclosure would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion. However, the 15 December 2000 Internal Agreement applicable to the Cotonou Agreement specifies that the Commission produces an annual report. This report is subject to parliamentary scrutiny in the normal manner.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on implementation of humanitarian aid operations met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what (a) technical and (b) financial issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee produced during that period; what actions were (i) proposed and (ii) taken by (A) the EU and (B) the UK Government as a result of the Committee's recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [193024]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Greek Presidency of the European Union occupied the first six months of 2003. During that period the Humanitarian Aid Committee met six times, on a monthly basis. Five meetings were held in Brussels, and one in Athens (May 2003). The UK was represented by officials from DFID's Conflict and Humanitarian Affairs Department.

The Humanitarian Aid Committee operates independently of the Presidency. It is convened and chaired by the Commission and is constituted for Member States to assist the Commission with implementation of Council Regulation No 1257/96 of 20 June 1996 concerning humanitarian aid. The EC's humanitarian aid programme provides assistance, relief and protection to victims of natural disasters and man-made crises in third countries, as well as preparedness for risks of natural disasters. It approves annual allocations ('global plans') to countries suffering chronic humanitarian crises, as well as emergency response to disasters.

The details of discussions in the Committee are confidential and are covered by the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, Part II, exemption 2. This exemption covers internal discussion and advice where the disclosure would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Green Ministers

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many meetings of the Ministerial Sub-Committee of Green Ministers were attended by the Department's Green Minister in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [190848]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: None.

Humanitarian Accountability Partnership International

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what input his Department had into the establishment of the Humanitarian Accountability Partnership International (HAP-I); what programmes his Department is funding to encourage membership of HAP-I by (a) UK and (b) EU non-governmental organisations; and if he will make a statement. [193018]

Hilary Benn: Between 2001 and 2003, DFID has contributed almost £650,000 towards the establishment of the Humanitarian Accountability Partnership International (HAP-I). DFID was also involved in the initial design of HAP-I through its steering committee membership of the related accountability initiative, Humanitarian Accountability Project. DFID is now an Associate member of HAP-I.

Through accountable practice and example, DFID believes that confidence in and support for HAP-I's member agencies will be enhanced. This approach is consistent with HAP-I's own ethos of improving the quality, effectiveness and accountability of humanitarian work through example, as well as through programme design and implementation.

Illegal Logging

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is for dealing with illegal logging; and if he will make a statement. [193509]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID's policy is to tackle illegal logging and its associated trade, in partnership with timber-producing countries. This requires action on demand as well as supply. The UK, as a significant consumer of timber products, shares responsibility with these countries to find solutions to this global problem.

DFID supports regional forest law enforcement and governance processes in Asia and Africa that help build awareness of the problems of illegal logging and the political commitment to tackle them. DFID has also recently started work with Russia on a forest law enforcement and governance process covering Eastern Europe and North Asia. In Indonesia DFID has a programme of work under a Memorandum of Understanding that commits both governments to tackle illegal logging and associated trade.

The UK Government are playing an active role in implementing the EU Forest Law Enforcement and Governance and Trade Action Plan. This includes development of EU legislation to prevent imports of illegally logged timber into the single market and support for timber producing countries to improve their forest governance. UK Central Government are also working towards ensuring that timber and timber products are procured from legal and sustainable sources.

In all of this work, DFID co-operates closely with other parts of Government, particularly Defra and FCO, as well as the private sector and NGOs.

International Development Assistance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the 20 countries with the lowest GDP per capita; how much the international development assistance per capita was made available by the UK in each case in the latest year for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [192071]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The following table includes a list of the 20 countries with the lowest recorded GDP per capita (the country with the lowest GDP is at the top of the list). In addition DFID has included Afghanistan, which is expected to be in this group although GDP data is currently unavailable.

The following table also shows the bilateral development assistance provided by the UK to these countries in 2003–04 (on a per capita basis) and an estimate of the UK's share of multilateral aid to these countries in 2002 (the latest year for which we have data).

The UK has a commitment to increase the share of our bilateral programme going to low income countries to 90 per cent. by 2005–06. In deciding where to allocate bilateral resources the UK is keen to work in partnership with countries where we have long-standing relationships and is able to have the most impact. DFID also prioritise countries that are able to display evidence of good governance to ensure that our funds are spent appropriately.

In examining the figures in the table, it is worth noting that while the aid per capita is quite small in some highly populated countries such as Nigeria, the total aid allocated to these countries is substantial.

Kenya

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the Department's priorities for working with the Government of Kenya. [193473]

Hilary Benn: DFID's assistance is designed to support long-term change in Kenya that will lead to improved governance, and to help Kenya make sustainable progress towards the Millennium Development Goals. The Country Assistance Plan (CAP) launched in June, outlines our commitment to support the implementation of the Government of Kenya's Economic Recovery Strategy (ERS).

DFID's priorities in the CAP include support to the Government's drive towards universal free primary education, HIV/AIDS prevention and care, reproductive health care, malaria prevention, private sector development, land and agriculture reform, environmental governance, public sector reform, initiatives to promote civic education and improved access to justice for poor people. DFID plans to provide £37 million of assistance this year.

The faster and more credible the pace of reform, the more DFID can support the Kenyan Government's own priorities through their own systems, and the faster progress we will make.

Latin America

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the aid budget for Latin America was in the years (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02, (c) 2002–03 and (d) 2003–04; and what it is for 2004–05. [190303]

Gareth Thomas: DFID's Latin America bilateral aid budget was as follows:

Bilateral

(£ million)

	Latin America dept budget allocation	Total[1] DFID Actual expenditure in Latin America
2000–01	31.0	31.2
2001–02	36.0	37.6
2002–03	28.3	36.1
2003–04	23.2	27.2
2004–05	19.0	—

[1] These figures include central DFID funding, such as humanitarian assistance, debt relief and NGO activities supported by the Civil Society Challenge Fund, which have benefited the region. £7 million per year, from 2005–06 onwards, was recently approved for selected non-government organisations that have Programme Partnership Agreements with DFID.

Share of Multilateral:

DFID provided the following concessional funding through multilateral to specific countries (ie World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank, European Community and UN organisations):

£ million

	Latin America specific	Americas regional (including Caribbean)
2000	51.4	12.2
2001	92.0	9.0
2002	36.0	5.5

Figures are not yet available for 2003.

Relief Work (SPHERE Standards)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the SPHERE standards for relief work; and if he will make a statement. [193017]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not undertaken its own assessment of SPHERE standards. However, DFID values the work of SPHERE, with its aim of improving the quality of assistance, and enhancing the accountability of the humanitarian system in disaster response. DFID has supported the project with £20,000 since 2001. Many partner that DFID supports or with whom we collaborate are signed up members to SPHERE, and we would expect them to adhere to the Humanitarian Charter and Minimum Standards in Disaster Response.

Somalia

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with (i) the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, (ii) members of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (iii) the Secretary of State for Defence and (iv) members of the Ministry of Defence concerning (A) the humanitarian situation in Somalia and (B) Somalia's President Abdullahi Yusef's call for international intervention on 14 October; and if he will make a statement. [193010]

Hilary Benn: DFID is in close and regular touch with relevant Whitehall Departments—at both Ministerial and official level—to discuss UK and international support for the envisaged new Transitional Federal Government in Somalia. In addition the UK is committed to providing assistance to address the most urgent humanitarian needs in the country. DFID has recently agreed an additional £2 million in humanitarian allocations to meet urgent needs in Somalia.

Sugar

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his assessment is of the effects of the Common Agricultural Policy sugar regime on local sugar production in developing nations in (a) Africa and (b) Asia; and if he will make a statement. [192869]

Hilary Benn: The EU's CAP regime for sugar is a heavily regulated, highly protected and discriminatory one. It is also extremely costly to the consumer and taxpayer. By maintaining high guaranteed prices for production which are well above world market prices, high tariffs on most imports, and heavily subsidising exports, the regime encourages over-production in the EU and dumps millions of tonnes of subsidised sugar onto world markets each year. It has the effect of depressing world prices, and it crowds developing countries out of local markets which they would otherwise be able to supply. Some traditional suppliers from the African, Caribbean and Pacific regions (ACP), do have preferential access to the EU market under an arrangement called the Sugar Protocol. Most of the countries in Africa and Asia who are sugar producers or potential sugar producers are currently denied preferential access to the EU market. For these and other reasons, reform of the regime is both necessary and desirable, and long overdue.

The European Commission presented a Communication to the Agriculture Council on 19 July that set out their preferred approach to reform. The Communication proposes to substantially reduce sugar exports and export refunds, abolish intervention, restructure EU production at a lower level, reduce the internal sugar price and grant a de-coupled payment to sugar beet farmers. The reform process would start in July 2005. This should make the regime more market oriented and reduce the quantity of EU sugar exported to third markets. If the option were to be agreed, the Commission estimate that the combined, aggregate effect of the proposals on support price and quota reduction would be a significant reduction in the level of EU production under quota, from 17.3 million to 14.5 million tonnes per year. In turn, as a consequence of the substantial reduction in the overall level of EU production, EU subsidised sugar exports—dumping—are projected to fall by around 2 million tonnes. The Commission Communication will be the subject of discussion between the EU member states over the coming months.

However, there will be winners and losers from this reform, just as there are winners and losers from the current regime. Those preferential suppliers to the EU who receive prices very similar to EU producers will see these prices fall. DFID has always stressed the need to take account of the impact that reform of the EU sugar regime will have on our developing country preferential suppliers. We are conscious that substantial reform will give rise to transitional problems for the ACP counties, and for Least Developed Countries (LDC) seeking to develop an export trade to Europe under the Everything But Arms initiative.

In order to help inform the debate and ensure the impact on developing countries is taken sufficiently into consideration, DFID commissioned a study last year with LMC International and Oxford Policy Management, 'Addressing the Impact of Preference Erosion in Sugar on Developing Countries'. The study is divided into two sections. The first part assesses the economic and social impact on the ACP Sugar Protocol countries of the various reform scenarios suggested by the European Commission. The latter part of the study assesses alternative options for addressing the impact of preference erosion in sugar. The purpose of this analysis was to identify various options for debate by the ACP and the EU.

DFID has recently commissioned two further pieces of work on this issue. The first report has been commissioned with LMC International, 'EU Sugar Reform: the Implications for the Development of LDCs' and should be finalised very soon. The second report has been commissioned from the Overseas Development Institute, 'Forthcoming changes in EU sugar/banana markets: a menu of options for an effective EU transitional assistance package' and should also be finalised very soon. This report should help those countries affected by reform determine their priorities for a transitional package. This report will include some analysis of alternative uses for sugar.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) monetary and (b) non-monetary assistance the Uzbek Government receive from the United Kingdom Government; and if he will make a statement. [193171]

Mr. Gareth Thomas [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Approximately 90 per cent. of United Kingdom development assistance to Uzbekistan has been in the form of DFID funded technical assistance, focusing on supporting the Government of Uzbekistan's efforts to improve the quality and accessibility of primary health care to the rural poor. Support has also been given to targeted local civil society organisations to help strengthen capacity, independence and effectiveness. In monetary terms this amounted to £559,000 in financial year 2003–04. The planned figure for 2004–05 is £500,000. Additionally, the UK's attributed share of multilateral assistance (including EC) to Uzbekistan in calendar year 2002 (the most recent year figures are available) was £1,700,000.

Other UK Government Departments have provided support to civil society organisations and the British Council and through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool; the Home Office and FCO have funded a small amount of anti-drug training. The Ministry of Defence has been providing non-development assistance, through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, in the form of defence reform and helping build regional capacity for peace support operations.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Regulation

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many reviews of the working and impact of major pieces of regulation affecting business put forward by (a) her Department and (b) regulatory agencies sponsored by her Department since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [190000]

Nigel Griffiths: There have been six reviews of the working and impact of major pieces of legislation. Review is an important element of the Government's Better Regulation programme.

Consultants

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193424]

Ms Hewitt: This information is not held centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Brazier: Export Credits Guarantee Department cover for ventures in Iraq since the end of the recent Gulf War; and which have (a) been accepted, (b) been rejected and (c) not yet been dealt with. [192272]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 21 October 2004]: An overall US$100 million ECGD short-term credit facility was available between 5 December 2003 and 28 June 2004, to assist exporters to finance contracts by providing guarantees to UK based banks issuing letters of credit for the purchase of UK goods and services.

During this period, 15 exporters with contracts or potential contracts approached ECGD regarding the facility. No applications were received. The Banks continued to issue Letters of Credit without requiring ECGD cover.

No formal applications for cover have been received outside of these dates.

Icelandic Water Trawlermen's Scheme

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many claimants have received payments from the Icelandic Water Trawlerman's Scheme (a) under the scheme, which closed in 2002, and (b) under the extension to the scheme announced by her Department; [193682]

(2) what the average payment made to each claimant from the Icelandic Water Trawlerman's Scheme was (a) under the scheme which closed in 2002 and (b) under the extension to the scheme announced by her Department. [193683]

Nigel Griffiths: Payments based on the enlarged list of vessels commenced in May 2004. Some claimants who had not previously qualified now did so and some who had already received a payment qualified for a further sum. The table shows the available information:

	(a) Up to April 2004	(b) May 2000 to September 2004
Number of claimants receiving a payment	4760	395
Average payment	8,567	3,096

Jaguar Cars

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effects the closure of Jaguar Motor Production sites in Coventry will have on small business in Coventry. [192156]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 20 October 2004]: The company indicated on Friday 17 September 2004, that it intends to move production from Brown's Lane to Castle Bromwich in Birmingham, a distance of some 16 miles. It is anticipated that the small businesses in the supply chain would be largely unaffected.

Jaguar's headquarters and administrative centre will remain in Coventry, as will the company's historic Wood Veneer Manufacturing Centre. It is likely the companies providing services direct to the workforce would be affected, though the impact would be minimal.

Shareholder Executive

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the members of the Shareholder Executive by (a) title and (b) date of appointment; and what other (i) corporate and (ii) governmental positions they hold. [192744]

Ms Hewitt: The Shareholder Executive is staffed by civil servants and secondees from the private sector who are employed in line with departmental remuneration guidelines: they were all appointed over the last 14 months. It is not the DTI's policy to publish staff lists in parliamentary questions.

Richard Gillingwater, Chief Executive of the Shareholder Executive, is non-Executive Chairman of Faber Music Ltd. (and also non-Executive Director of two Faber related businesses) and a non-executive director of Kidde plc and QinetiQ plc; Christina McComb, Director of Postal Services, is a non-executive director of Partnerships UK plc; and Steve Wheeler is company secretary of Precis (2424) Ltd.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what compensation members of the Shareholder Executive receive. [192745]

Ms Hewitt: Members of the Shareholder Executive are either civil servants or private sector secondees and are paid in accordance with departmental remuneration policy. It is not departmental policy to publish salary levels of individual members of staff.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff are employed by the Shareholder Executive. [192746]

Ms Hewitt: 56.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by what measures the Government will assess the performance of the Shareholder Executive. [192747]

Ms Hewitt: The performance of the Shareholder Executive will be assessed on the basis of the performance of its portfolio in the context of a clearly defined policy framework, both at an aggregate portfolio and individual business level. Specific targets and performance measures are currently being considered.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when planning for the reorganisation of the Shareholder Executive began. [192755]

Ms Hewitt: The Shareholder Executive was established in the Cabinet Office in September 2003 with a remit to advise Departments on their shareholder responsibilities. It transferred to the DTI in June 2004: planning for the move began in March 2004.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1864W, on public shareholdings, if she will list the public shareholdings for which the Shareholder Executive (a) provides advice and (b) is directly responsible by (i) department, (ii) quality of owned shares, (iii) aggregate value of shareholding and (iv) proportion of owned shares. [192779]

Ms Hewitt: The Shareholder Executive advises officials in Government Departments on the management of certain Departmental shareholdings, ownership or other finance interests. These entities, and their responsible Departments, are set out in the table.

Entity	Responsible Department	Legal status
ABRO	Ministry of Defence	Trading Fund
BBC (certain aspects of the Charter Review)	Department for Culture, Media and Sport	Public corporation
British Waterways	Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs	Statutory corporation
CDC Group plc.	Department for International Development	Companies Act Company (100 per cent. of shares Government owned, shares not publicly traded)
Channel 4	Department for Culture, Media and Sport	Statutory corporation
Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA)	Ministry of Defence	Trading fund
Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (DSTL)	Ministry of Defence	Trading fund
Forensic Science Service	Home Office	Trading fund

Entity	Responsible Department	Legal status
Met Office	Ministry of Defence	Trading fund
National Air Traffic Services	Department for Transport	Companies Act company (48.87 per cent. of shares Government owned, shares not publicly traded)
Northern Ireland Water Service	Department for Regional Development, Northern Ireland	Agency
QinetiQ plc.	Ministry of Defence	Companies Act company (58.1 per cent. of shares Government owned, shares not publicly traded)
Tote	Department for Culture, Media and Sport	Statutory Corporation
United Kingdom Hydrographic Office	Ministry of Defence	Trading fund

The Shareholder Executive directly advises Departmental Ministers (or in some cases senior departmental officials) on certain shareholding, ownership or other finance interests. It also directly manages the day-to-day relationship with that entity. These entities and their responsible Departments are set out in the table as follows.

Entity	Responsible Department	Legal status
Actis Capital LLP	Department for International Development	Limited liability partnership (40 per cent. Government ownership interest, 80 per cent. Government economic interest for 10 years)
British Energy plc.	Department of Trade and Industry	Companies Act company (the Government does not own any share capital but would acquire certain economic rights and obligations under the proposed company restructuring)
British Nuclear Fuels plc. (BNFL)	Department of Trade and Industry	Companies Act company (100 per cent. of shares owned by Government, shares not publicly traded)
Export Credit Guarantee Department (ECGD)	Department of Trade and Industry	Government Department and expected to be a trading fund by 2007
Partnerships UK	HM Treasury	Companies Act company (49 per cent. of shares owned by Government including 4.44 per cent. owned by the Scottish Ministers)
Royal Mail Holdings plc.	Department of Trade and Industry	Companies Act company (100 per cent. of shares owned by Government, shares not publicly traded)
Royal Mint [1]	HM Treasury	Trading fund
United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA)	Department of Trade and Industry	Statutory corporation

[1] Responsibility for directly advising Ministers will take effect from the completion of the Royal Mint review.

Each of the entities listed in the tables publish annual reports containing details of their financial and operational performance. The Shareholder Executive has not carried out a formal valuation of the portfolio.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1864W, on public shareholdings, what are the Shareholder Executive's advice-giving responsibilities concerning public shareholding. [192780]

Ms Hewitt: The Shareholder Executive provides advice to Ministers and officials on all aspects of Departments' shareholding roles, including corporate governance frameworks, setting objectives, scrutinising business plans, monitoring performance, making appointments and approving remuneration frameworks.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1864W, on public shareholdings, what the Shareholder Executive's (a) operational, (b) budget and (c) appointment authority over public shareholdings for which it is directly responsible is. [192781]

Ms Hewitt: For those shareholdings for which it is directly responsible, the Shareholder Executive's role is to advise relevant Ministers or senior departmental officials on all shareholder issues, including corporate governance frameworks, setting objectives, scrutinising business plans, monitoring performance, making appointments and approving remuneration frameworks.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her plans to include (a) public sector stakeholder, (b) quango, (c) NGO and (d) devolved territory input into the oversight of the Shareholder Executive. [192775]

Ms Hewitt: The Shareholder Executive is responsible to each individual Department for the quality of the advice it provides, and consults, as appropriate, other organisations inside and outside Government as part of its work.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what codes of conduct apply to members of the Shareholder Executive. [192776]

Ms Hewitt: They are all subject to the Civil Service Code.

Sutherland Commission

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what submission the British Government have made to the Sutherland Commission. [191865]

Mr. Alexander: Dr. Supachai, the Director-General of the World Trade Organisation (WTO), asked Peter Sutherland and a group of leading trade experts to examine possible reforms of decision-making and representation in the WTO and report back to him. The group has not requested submissions from Governments, and the UK has made none. The Government have set out their views on the issue in the recent Trade and Investment White Paper: Making Globalisation a Force for Good (Cm 6278).

Work Opportunities

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures her Department is taking in conjunction with the Department for Work and Pensions and other Departments to encourage and enable the economically inactive to return to work through social enterprises; and if she will make a statement. [192020]

Nigel Griffiths: The cross Government strategy on social enterprise, published in July 2002 recognises the role social enterprise can play in offering work and training for those seeking employment.

Through New Deal, Job Centre Plus enables individuals to seek meaningful employment through social enterprise as a transitional phase before entering the open labour market or as an ongoing sustainable option.

Social enterprises can also offer employment opportunities for disabled people. The Department for Work and Pension's WORKSTEP programme offers help for those who require more long term support and aims to provide disabled people with a better range of opportunities in employment, by tailoring support to individual needs in supported environments, including social enterprise.

In DTI's Small Business Service, social enterprises are at the forefront of our forthcoming support to help people with mental health issues explore ways into employment or self-employment. Many social enterprises will act as partners in supporting mental health clients through the process, and it is envisaged that a number of new social enterprises will be created across the country as a direct result of this initiative.

DTI in partnership with DfES and the Home Office has piloted a Support for Enterprising Communities Project focussed on investigating approaches to supporting social enterprises to be more sustainable. The project resulted in a range of benefits including developing the skills of local people, a more diverse local social enterprise sector and creation of new employment opportunities.

We also think social enterprise can play a role in the delivery of ODPM's recent report on Jobs and Enterprise in Deprived Areas which contains measures to improve the delivery of support to those considering self-employment, such as through better joint work between the various relevant agencies, better availability of information and work to improve access to small-scale finance.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Archaeology Qualifications

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the future of GCSE Archaeology following the decision taken by AQA not to offer this qualification from 2006. [193138]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 21 October 2004]: I would refer the hon. Member to the written answer given by the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Braintree (on 15 September 2004, Official Report, column 1606W). I must reiterate the point made by the Secretary of State in his answer that awarding bodies such as AQA are independent organisations and as such Ministers have no powers to dictate which subjects they offer.

Class Sizes

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average (a) primary school and (b) secondary school class size in the West Suffolk constituency was in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 2003–04. [193667]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is shown in the table.

Maintained primary and secondary schools[1]: average size of classes taught by one teacher[2]

West Suffolk parliamentary constituency[3]

Position as at January each year	Number of pupils	Number of classes	Average class size

Departmental Consultants

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [192763]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The amount of administrative expenditure incurred during 2003–04 financial year on outside information technology and communication specialists, consultants and engineers amounts to £2,290,000.

The Department also incurred Programme expenditure relating to the above but it would be a disproportionate cost to provide this information.

Education Budget (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the budget for (a) York College and (b) York Sixth Form College was in (i) cash and (ii) real terms in (A) 1997 and (B) each year since. [191242]

Dr. Howells: The Department allocates funds for education and training in the post-16 learning and skills sector to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). The LSC decides the funding allocations at individual college level. Information about these allocations is not collected by the Department. This is an operational matter and the responsibility of the LSC. Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive, will write to my hon. Friend with details of the budget for (a) York College and (b) York Sixth Form College in (i) cash and (ii) real terms in (A) 1997 and (B) each year since. A copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Education Funding

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the capital funding available to schools for (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03, (c) 2003–04, (d) 2004–05, (e) 2005–06 and (f) 2006–07, broken down by (i) devolved capital expenditure, (ii) Building Schools for the Future funding and (iii) specific capital programmes. [190910]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 14 October 2004]: The table includes the information requested on the allocation of capital available to schools from 2001–02 until 2005–06. We have not yet announced details of allocation to capital programmes for 2006–07.

Capital funding

£ million

	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
(i) Devolved formula capital to schools	295	438	685	775	805
Delegated to local education authorities[1]	620	1,111	1,401	1,542	1,292
(ii) Building schools for the future					2,115
(iii) Specific capital programmes	1,402	1,755	2,117	2,455	1,294

[1] Delegated allocations to authorities include Basic Need, Condition and Modernisation and School Access Initiative programmes.

Education Standards

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of 11-year old pupils in Carlisle reached level 4 in (a) mathematics and (b) English in each of the last seven years. [191598]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested was placed in the House Library in response to Parliamentary Question 167566, on 10 May 2004, Official Report, column 34W.

First Degree Courses

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the proportion of the projected non-completion rate for full-time first degree students reported by the Higher Education Statistics Agency which is accounted for by students transferring to different courses at the same institution. [191979]

Dr. Howells: HESA's non-completion rate has not been disaggregated to separately identify students who transfer to a different degree course and then fail to complete it. Students who transfer to a different degree course and successfully complete it are recorded under "Obtain a degree" in the following table; students who transfer from a degree to a different level of course (such as an HND) and successfully complete it are recorded under "Obtain other award". Only students who started a degree course and failed to obtain any HE qualification are classed as non-completers under "No award or transfer".

Projected outcomes, full-time first degree students starting courses in 2001/02

	Percentage
Obtain a degree	77.9
Obtain other award	1.2
Transfer to another institution	6.4
No award or transfer	14.1
Not known	0.4

Further Education Funding

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of the extra funding given to further education in June (a) has been and (b) will be allocated to (i) school sixth forms, (ii) work-based learning providers, (iii) sixth form colleges and (iv) further education colleges. [190574]

Dr. Howells: It is for the LSC to determine the distribution of funding to the learning and skills sector. Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

GCSEs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of students taking (a) GCSE mathematics, (b) GCSE history, (c) GCSE English, (d) GCSE French and (e) GCSE physics received an (i) A grade, (ii) C grade and (iii) pass or better in each year from 1989 to 2004; and if he will make a statement. [192133]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is shown in the following table.

[1] GCSE/GNVQ results are reported as standard as the results of pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year i.e. 31 August, and therefore reaching the end of compulsory education at the end of the school year.

Green Minister

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many meetings of the Ministerial Sub-Committee of Green Ministers were attended by the Department's Green Minister in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [190849]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Secretary of State for Education and Skills is DfES's Green Minister and in this role is a member of the Ministerial Committees of Green Ministers. However, it has been established practice under successive Governments not to disclose information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees. This practice is now formalised by Exemption 2 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the financial situation of higher education institutions. [190583]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows the overall financial position of the publicly funded higher education sector in England.

HESA

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of working age people in the Buckingham constituency hold a qualification at degree level or equivalent or above; and what the national average is. [191052]

Dr. Howells: The latest available figures from the Local Area Labour Force Survey 2002 show that the proportion of people of working age resident in the constituency of Buckingham who hold a qualification at NVQ level 4 or above is 31.9 per cent., with a 95 per cent. confidence interval of 25.9 per cent. to 37.9 per cent.

This compares to a figure of 24.2 per cent. for Great Britain, with a 95 per cent. confidence interval of 24.0 per cent. to 24.4 per cent. NVQ level 4 covers degrees, HMDs and other undergraduate qualifications.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of each age cohort entered higher education in each year from 1985/86 to 2004/05; and if he will make a statement. [191308]

Dr. Howells: The individual year of age entry rates derived from the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR), for academic years 1999/2000 to 2002/03, are shown in the first table below. The HEIPR was developed to monitor progress towards the Government's goal of 50 per cent. participation in HE by 2010 and was not calculated prior to 1999/00. The available participation rate data for these earlier years, which show participation in terms of age bands rather than single ages, are shown in the second table.

[1] Age as at 31 August before the beginning of the academic year (e.g. 31 August 1999 for 1999/00).

[2] HE entrants in academic year as a percentage of separate age population; excludes entrants with previous HE experience and excludes students who enrol on (and complete) courses of less than six months. The overall HEIPR is the sum of the unrounded full-time and part-time initial participation rates, calculated using student records collected by HESA and LSC, and ONS population estimates.

[3] The individual rates are rounded to the nearest 0.1 per cent. and so do not sum exactly to the totals which are rounded to the nearest whole number.

Note:

Figures for 2002/03 are provisional. The figures have been updated with revised figures from all sources. Further revisions, in particular to the 2002/03 provisional figure, may be necessary following any revision to the relevant source data.

[1] The API is the number of young (under 21) UK domiciled initial entrants to full-time and sandwich undergraduate courses, expressed as a percentage of the averaged 18–19 year old population.

[2] The YMEI is the number of initial entrants aged 21–24 expressed as a percentage of the numbers of potential entrants in the age group i.e. those who obtained one or more A levels or equivalent qualification at the ages of 18–20 but who did not then enter higher education.

[3] The OMPI is the number of initial entrants aged 25 and over expressed as a percentage of the population aged 25–34 in that year.

Increased Flexibility Project

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how his Department proposes to continue supporting the Increased Flexibility Project for 14 to 16 learners to work with further education colleges. [192024]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 19 October 2004]: No decision has been taken by Ministers at this stage, but the question is currently under consideration.

Knives

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many reported (a) incidents and (b) accidents involving knives there have been in schools over the last 12 months. [193071]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We believe there have been very few incidents or accidents. The YJB published a survey which suggests that 1 per cent. of pupils carried a knife in school for offensive reasons at some time, and 2 per cent. defensively, last year. The survey suggests that knife use is much rarer than knife carrying. HSE data on work-related accidents involving cutting tools do not give specific figures for schools.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191429]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The total number of mobile phones in use at September 2004 is 1,120. Information on the number of mobiles in use in any given year, as opposed to the number purchased in each year, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The information on use of mobile phones by Ministers, special advisers and officials on a year-by-year basis could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

We have been unable to distinguish between those phones lost and stolen and the combined number is shown in the following table as is the cost of mobile services for each year.

	Lost/stolen	Cost of mobile phones (£)
1997–98	1	170,045.78
1998–99	0	168,298.72
1999–2000	1	218,889.09
2000–01	3	329,196.99
2001–02	3	374,248.87
2002–03	4	353,955.78
2003–04	9	270,547.63

New Deal

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many personnel the Department has recruited under the New Deal in each of the past five years. [194026]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on 25 October.

Office for Fair Access

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the costs of (a) establishing and (b) running the Office for Fair Access (OFFA); what the salary is of the director general of OFFA; how many staff he expects to be employed by OFFA; and what funds OFFA will have available (i) to raise standards in schools and (ii) to promote applications to universities. [192929]

Dr. Howells: The Office for Fair Access will have an average annual budget of £500,000. Staffing will vary according to the demands of overseeing access plans, but we expect it to consist of the Director of Fair Access and 4–6 staff, some of them part time. The Director's remuneration is £100,000 pro rata, as originally advertised.

OFFA will ensure that universities wishing to charge higher fees than current standard levels put some of their own resources into encouraging applications and supporting students.

Overseas Students (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of overseas students who are studying in the City of Glasgow. [190995]

Dr. Howells: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive and my hon. Friend may wish to write to them about this issue.

Private Language Schools

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reason he decided to introduce voluntary registration for private language schools; and if he will make a statement. [191811]

Dr. Howells: The Register of Education and Training Providers has been established as a voluntary scheme following consultation with the sector.

The register will consist of education providers who are able to provide evidence of their legitimate business. It will be made available to the Home Office to support them in making decisions on granting leave to study. The Home Office have proposed that once the register is established, leave to study will not be granted to a student wishing to attend a provider not on the list.

To avoid unnecessary bureaucracy, those education providers who receive public funding or who are currently accredited by an existing accreditation scheme and have already undergone robust assurance measures will automatically be added to the register. Private English Language Schools have been encouraged to seek accreditation with existing accreditation bodies such as the British Council, the British Accreditation Council, or the Association of British Language Schools.

The Department will look to review the operation of the scheme once it is fully operational.

Religious Schools

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) membership is and (b) terms of reference are of the joint working party with the churches and others on the financing of religious voluntary aided schools; when its report is expected; whether the report will be published; and if he will make it his policy to maintain a maximum level of contribution from public funds towards the costs of such schools at 100 per cent. of running costs and 90 per cent. of building costs. [193611]

Mr. Miliband: The terms of reference are—The Voluntary Aided Capital Working Group exists to provide a consultative forum for identifying, discussing and advising on all issues relating to voluntary aided capital.

Given that most, but not all, voluntary aided schools are linked to a faith, membership consists of the Anglican and Catholic Churches, the Foundation and Aided Schools National Association, the Board of Deputies of British Jews, the Seventh Day Adventist Church, and the Association of Muslim Schools (UK), together with departmental civil servants. There is no expectation that a report will be published, and any recommendations from the working group will be considered by Ministers in the usual way.

The flexibility to pay capital grant above 90 per cent. already exists and I have agreed that it can be applied where absolutely necessary, and on production of a rigorous business case, in respect of the small number of voluntary aided schools in the first group of areas to benefit from funding under Building Schools for the Future. This will ensure that there is no delay in procurement for all of the schools in those areas. The working group is to look at the options for funding future waves of investment.

Resources for Children and Learners

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his written ministerial statement of 16 September 2004, Official Report, columns 153–54WS, on Resources for Children and Learners, at what level he expects the gap between per-pupil funding for 16 to 19 year olds in schools and those in colleges to be in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–7 and (c) 2007–08. [191812]

Dr. Howells: On 16 September, the Secretary of State announced that total funding for the post-16 learning and skills sector, excluding Higher Education, will rise to £11 billion by 2007–08. We are doing further work in partnership with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) on the details of our spending plans for further education. Details will be published at the time of release of the grant letter to the LSC. It is therefore not possible at this stage to say what impact this will have on funding for 16 to 18 year olds in school sixth forms and further education colleges.

School Internet Access (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of City of York (a) primary and (b) secondary schools were connected to the internet in (i) 1997 and (ii) October. [191243]

Dr. Howells: Figures for England, derived from a sample of schools, are shown in the following table. Figures at sub-national level are not available as the sample was not large enough to provide reliable estimates.

The available information on the percentage of schools connected to the Internet is shown in the following table.

Percentage of schools connected to the Internet. Primary, secondary and special local authority maintained schools—England—as at 31 March (financial year end)

	1996	1998	2003
Primary	5	17	>99
Secondary	47	83	>99
Special	8	31	>99

The latest information on maintained schools connected to the Internet was published in Statistical Bulletin 'Survey of Information and Communications Technology in Schools 2003', which is available on the Department's web-site www.dfes.gov.uk/rsqateway

Schools

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the effects in Stroud constituency of (a) abolishing grant-maintained schools, (b) changing school admission arrangements and (c) balloting parents on grammar schools. [193502]

Mr. Miliband: We have made no such assessments. Although we monitor national implementation of policies, it is for local education authorities to assess the impact of any changes on their individual areas, and to plan accordingly.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations he has received regarding secondary school capacity on Canvey Island; and if he will make a statement. [193511]

Mr. Miliband: In addition to the representations made previously by the hon. Member, we have received correspondence from one parent from Canvey Island in respect of Essex Local Education Authority's (LEA) initial consultation about secondary education on the island.

It is for each LEA to balance the supply of places in its area, to ensure schools serve the needs of their local communities and provide good quality education in the most cost effective way.

If the LEA decides to proceed with a reorganisation of local schools it will have to publish statutory proposals, and there will be an opportunity for those affected to submit objections and comments for consideration. The final decision on any proposals would be for the local School Organisation Committee (SOC) or, if the SOC cannot reach a unanimous decision, an independent schools adjudicator. The Secretary of State has no role in such matters.

Sixth Forms

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evidence his Department has evaluated which demonstrates public support for new school sixth forms as proposed in the Five Year Plan issued in July; and if he will make a statement. [191817]

Dr. Howells: We are not aware of a formal study of community preferences for school sixth forms. However, area inspections, for example, show that there is oversubscription at popular and successful school sixth forms across the country. They also report a substantial exodus of 16–18 students from areas where there is little choice of good 16–19 provision to independent or out-of-borough maintained school sixth forms.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to align college and school sixth form funding. [192025]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 19 October 2004]: For the academic year 2003/04, base funding rates per qualification increased by 3 per cent. for school sixth forms and by 4.5 per cent. for further education colleges on a broadly comparable basis. In 2004/05, funding rates for colleges meeting their targets increased by 5 per cent., while those for school sixth forms rose by 4 per cent. Details of our spending plans for further education between 2005–06 and 2007–08 will be published at the time of release of the grant letter to the Learning and Skills Council.

Student Loan Company

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students applied for loans from the Student Loan Company for the current academic year prior to July; [191624]

(2) how many students who applied for loans from the Student Loan Company prior to July are yet to receive their loans for the current academic year; [191625]

(3) how many students who have applied for loans from the Student Loan Company are yet to receive their loans for the current academic year. [191626]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 15 October 2004]: Some 521,000 applications from new and continuing students were made on or before 2 July 2004 (which is the published deadline for new applications).

All applicants who submitted a fully and properly completed application form on or before 2 July should receive, shortly after their university or college has confirmed their attendance, either a fully-assessed loan payment or an interim payment (under our contingency arrangements for continuing students).

Over 275,000 applications have been received after the 2 July, of which 96,000 are still being processed. As is the case every year, a significant number of students have applied after the published deadlines (some 90,000 applications have been received since early September). Local authorities and the Student Loans Company have never been able to guarantee payment at the start of term to late applicants. As in previous years, the Department has written to higher education institutions asking them to be supportive of students who do not have loans in place at the start of term.

Theft and Fraud

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his estimate is of the cost of theft and fraud to (a) his Department, (b) its agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies in each year since 1997. [191427]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The estimated cost of theft and fraud to the Department (excluding the Department's non-departmental public bodies) for the years 2001–02, 2002–03 and 2003–04 is as follows:

Theft and Fraud

2001–02	249,732
2002–03	234,138
2003–04	213,037

All cases of fraud or alleged fraud were investigated by the Department's Special Investigations Unit. This unit is staffed by fully trained, professionally qualified fraud investigators.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total fee income from (a) tuition fees and (b) top up tuition fees was in (i) 1999–2000 and (ii) 2000–01; and if he will make a statement. [191307]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows estimated income to English higher education institutions from standard fees:

Financial year	£ millions[1]
1999–2000	697
2000–01	714

[1] The fee income estimates do not include income from postgraduate students funded through the Research Councils.

Provisions in the Higher Education Act 2004 permit higher education institutions to vary the fees they charge full-time undergraduates to a maximum of £3,000 per annum with effect from the 2006 academic year. Fees for part-time and postgraduate students are currently unregulated; nothing in the Act changes that.

University Admissions

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what use he expects the Office for Fair Access to make of the benchmarks for university admissions published by the Higher Education Statistics Agency; and if he will publish the guidance he has given to the director general of the Office for Fair Access. [192931]

Dr. Howells: It is up to the director of Fair Access what use he makes of the benchmarks published by the Higher Education Statistics Agency. We first published the draft letter of guidance from the Secretary of State to the director in February 2004, with a revised draft in July 2004. The final version will be available shortly.

University Drop-out Rate

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students studying first degrees dropped out of their studies (a) at university and (b) in the first year of their studies at university in each year since 1997; [191496]

(2) what the (a) drop-out rate and (b) number of students dropping out in the (i) first, (ii) second and (iii) third year of study at each university was in each year since 1997. [191497]

Dr. Howells: The available information on the non-continuation of students beyond the first year in each university, and the projected course non-completion rate in each university is contained in "Performance Indicators in Higher Education in the UK". The publication was produced by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) up until the current year when the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) took over publication. The latest edition was published by HESA in September 2004.

The figures cover full time first degree courses only and show, for each individual HE institution in the UK, the numbers and proportion of entrants who fail to complete their course. Copies of the publication are available for students starting courses in each year from 1996–97 to 2001–02. Copies of the publication covering data up to 1999–2000 are available from the House Library. Additionally, the publications up to and including figures for 2000–01, can be found on the HEFCE website (http://www.hefce.ac.uk/pubs) and the publication for the most recent year can be found on the HESA website (http://www.hesa.ac.uk/press/pr78/pr78.htm). For full time first degree entrants at UK institutions in 2001–02, table 3a shows that around 27,000 (9.0 per cent.) students did not continue beyond the first year and table 5 shows the number of students projected to not complete over the whole course is around 42,000 (14.1 per cent.).

No data are held covering those students who drop out of their course after two or three years.

Figures published in 2004 by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) show that the UK has one of the lowest non-completion rates among OECD countries.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to improve course completion rates for first degrees at universities. [191503]

Dr. Howells: The national rate of non-completion for those full-time students starting first degree courses in 2001–02 is 14. per cent. compared with 15 per cent. for the cohort starting in 2000–01. This represents one of the highest completion rates amongst OECD countries and we are determined to maintain this level of performance.

We have asked the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) to bear down on non-completion and their national co-ordination team, Action on Access, is working with institutions to improve retention rates and to spread good practice from those institutions with low drop-out rates and good access figures. In addition, the £273 million which HEFCE has allocated to institutions in 2004–05 for widening access and improving retention recognises some of the additional costs of supporting students from non-traditional backgrounds and those who are less well prepared for higher education.

Research indicates that the reasons for non-completion are many and varied, but one factor is incompatibility between the student and their course or institution. It is vital that potential higher education (HE) students have the right information on which tobase sound decisions. This is why we have worked with the National Union of Students to develop a new guide to HE, linked to the new Aimhigher portal, which will help students search for information about any aspect of HE. We are working with HEFCE to develop a range of published information about the quality and standards of institutions' programmes and a National Student Survey. Both will give students better information to help them make informed choices about where and what to study.

Another factor which has been associated with non-completion is financial hardship. In addition to statutory student support, discretionary support through the Access to Learning Fund is also available as a safety net for vulnerable students. The Access to Learning Fund is administered by Higher Education Institutions and provides additional non-repayable grant support to help students access and remain in higher education.

From 2006–7, as a consequence of commitments made during the passage of the Higher Education Bill, we propose to ensure that students entering higher education will receive up to £2,700 in up-front support. We also intend to raise the levels of maintenance loan to meet the basic living costs of the mid-range student, in response to the recent Student Income and Expenditure Survey. Additionally, institutions will, under the terms of access agreements, be required to provide further financial help to poorer students in the form of bursaries.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes in the methodology for the compiling of data for the non-completion rate for full-time students starting first degree courses were made between 2001–02 and 2002–03; and what the effect of those changes was. [191505]

Dr. Howells: Full details of the changes to the methodology for non-completion are available from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) website at www.hesa.ac.uk/pi in the documents "Changes to PIs 2002/03" and "Annex C: Projected Outcomes". In summary, non-completion is one of the categories of the projected outcomes. These outcomes are derived by linking students from one year to the next to create a matrix of possible outcomes which is then used to calculate the projected outcomes. For the most recent projected outcomes, which cover students starting first degree courses in 2001–02, changes were made to (a) the method of linking students and (b) the categories used in the matrix. The effect of the changes to the linking on the national figures is quite small. Some institutions show changes that appear relatively large, but these are mainly the small institutions where relatively large fluctuations are common. Similarly, the effect of the changes to the matrix at national level is small, and for most institutions there is no discernible effect.

University Funding

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding he plans to make available to universities to enable them to promote applications. [192924]

Dr. Howells: The 'Aimhigher' programme provides funding to universities, colleges and schools in order to raise the aspirations and attainment of young people. The aim is to increase the number of applications from groups which are currently under-represented in higher education. Aimhigher is jointly funded by the Department for Education and Skills, the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and the Learning and Skills Council.

HEFCE also provides funds through its widening participation allocation to assist universities with the additional costs of recruiting and retaining non-traditional students.

Announcements about future funding levels will be made in the new year, once the funding councils have received and considered their annual grant letters.

University Performance

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he was consulted by the Higher Education Statistics Agency on the university performance indicators it produced in September; whether these indicators were subject to his approval;

when he or his Ministers were first informed what the performance indicators were; and what assessment he has made of the impact on university admissions of the indicators relating to state school intake. [191980]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State does not approve the higher education performance indicator statistics for publication. The Secretary of State and Ministers were informed by departmental officials of the broad results of the sixth annual set of performance indicators a few days before their publication. The Secretary of State has made no explicit assessment of the impact on university admissions of any of the indicators; admissions are for individual institutions to determine. However, the Government believe it is right to publish data which allow comparison between individual institutions, enable institutions to reflect on their own performance, and indicate to potential students the position in each institution.

University Teachers/Teaching

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice he has given to universities about employing university teachers beyond the statutory retirement age. [191794]

Dr. Howells: I have given no advice to universities on this issue. As independent and autonomous bodies, higher education institutions are responsible for their own employment matters. Like other employers, higher education institutions will have to take account of future legislation in this area, such as the age strand of the European Employment Directive, which the Government intend to implement in 2006. The Equality Challenge Unit, a sector body which provides advice on equality issues, will provide guidance to institutions on the implications of this legislation. This will be in consultation with other relevant organisations, such as the Universities and Colleges Employers Association and the pensions bodies that operate in higher education.

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the teaching infrastructure of UK universities; and what plans he has for changes to the infrastructure. [192507]

Dr. Howells: We have made no recent assessment of the 'teaching infrastructure' of UK universities, and have no plans to make any such assessments, or make any changes. In terms of funding support for institutions, Government expenditure on higher education will increase by around £2 billion between 2004–05 and 2007–08, taking total investment to almost £9.5 billion. On top of all this, HE institutions will receive in full the extra income they generate from charging variable fees—in steady state (i.e. by 2010) this will be around £1.2 billion extra. Institutions will be free to spend this as they see fit, including on improvements to the institutional infrastructure, which supports their teaching.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Boon Chanh

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Laos about the health and treatment of evangelist Boon Chanh, serving a sentence in Udomsay Province. [193578]

Mr. Alexander: British Government contacts with the Laos Government are limited, but Ministers and senior officials regularly raise our human rights concerns either in bilateral contacts, or through the EU. Most recently, we raised the case of Mr Boon Chanh in particular and the treatment of Christians in general with the Lao Ministry of Foreign Affairs at official level on 14 October. Our ambassador to Laos (resident in Bangkok) also raised the treatment of Christians with the Lao authorities in June; and we again raised general human rights issues, including prisoners, at official level in September. The EU Mission in Vientiane also monitors human rights developments and religious freedom in Laos.

We are aware of reports of the mistreatment of Christians in Laos. Since the introduction of a Religious Freedom decree in Laos, we understand there has been some limited progress, with a number of churches being allowed to re-open and an overall drop in the number of believers detained.

We will continue to raise our concerns with the Lao Government when opportunities arise; and to encourage it to implement recent reforms on religious freedom.

British Indian Ocean Territory

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has collated on the living standards of British Indian Ocean Territory citizens normally resident in (a) Mauritius, (b) the Seychelles and (c) UK; and if he will make a statement. [192719]

Mr. Rammell: Information on the living standards of members of the Chagossian communities in Mauritius and Seychelles is not formally collated, but I am kept informed about this by officials and by visitors to these two countries. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is not responsible for collating information on the living standards of people resident in the United Kingdom.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the ministerial meetings concerning the British Indian Ocean Territory which have been held with (a) representatives of the Chagos Islanders and (b) hon. Members in the last five years. [192720]

Mr. Rammell: There have been numerous such meetings over the last five years. However, a comprehensive list of such meetings is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cayman Islands

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit the Cayman Islands in the next three years. [192603]

Mr. Rammell: It is not our practice to announce visits until they are firm. Because of the unpredictable nature of world events, final decisions on overseas visits are often not possible until very shortly before the day of travel.

I have no immediate plans to visit the Cayman Islands.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on civil disobedience in the Cayman Islands after Hurricane Ivan. [192610]

Mr. Rammell: There were reports of looting immediately following Hurricane Ivan. There is no evidence known to the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force of any organised burglary or theft. The majority of crimes reported were opportunistic, which targeted unoccupied homes that were badly damaged and stores which had become insecure.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the legislative body of the Cayman Islands in the last six months; and if he will make a statement. [192613]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any discussions with the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands in the last six months. Members of the Legislative Assembly form part of the Cabinet of the Cayman Islands. On 7 October, following the recent hurricane damage, I met the Leader of Government Business and other Members of the Cabinet for discussions.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political effects of Hurricane Ivan on the Cayman Islands. [192623]

Mr. Rammell: The devastation and subsequent recovery and reconstruction efforts has meant that a General Election due in November this year has had to be postponed until 2005. A precise date has yet to be agreed.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation the UK Government will be sending to the Cayman Islands Tourism Conference. [192639]

Mr. Rammell: The Cayman Islands Tourism Conference was due to take place on 15 November on Grand Cayman. Following the devastation caused by Hurricane Ivan, this is now subject to confirmation. This is an annual event which the Governor of the Cayman Islands usually attends.

China

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Government policy on the embargo on arms exports to the People's Republic of China. [192635]

Mr. Rammell: As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, South (Mr. Chapman) on 21 June 2004, Official Report, column 1449W, the European Council on 12 December 2003 invited the General Affairs and External Relations Council (GAERC) to re-examine the EU Arms Embargo on China. The issue was last discussed by EU Foreign Ministers at the 11 October 2004 GAERC, and will revert to a future GAERC.

The Government continue to implement the Arms Embargo as set out by the then Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the late Derek Fatchett, in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Reading, East (Jane Griffiths) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 246–47.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans to raise human rights concerns with Chinese representatives at the EU China Summit on 8 December; and if he will make a statement. [192636]

Mr. Rammell: The EU China Summit will be chaired by the Dutch presidency. No other EU member states are expected to attend. We do anticipate that human rights issues will be discussed.

We regularly raise human rights issues with the Chinese Government, through our biannual UK/China Human Rights Dialogue and through ministerial meetings. I raised human rights issues with Vice Foreign Minister, Zhang Yesui, during my visit to China in July.

Conflict Resolution (Women)

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department has taken since 2000 in relation to section 21 of the European Parliament Resolution (2000–2025 (INI)) on the participation of women in peaceful conflict resolution. [192231]

Mr. Rammell: The UK strongly supports the principles laid out in European Parliament Resolution 2000–2025 (INI). The UK is systematically looking for opportunities to ensure that gender concerns are properly addressed in resolutions, mission mandates and progress reports at the UN and other international organisations.

The UK works closely with bilateral partners and NGOs that support activities in countries where there are multinational peacekeeping operations.

The UK is providing financial assistance to programmes that support victims of rape and sexual violence, for example in the Democratic Republic of Congo, and programmes to strengthen approaches to protection and assistance to women affected by conflict.

The UK is active in providing assistance to empower women so they can play a greater role in building peace and strengthen democratic justice, for example in Iraq, which focuses on strengthening women's groups at Governorate level. The UK has also hosted workshops for women on democracy and democratic values, combining women's rights with long-term conflict prevention.

The UK also provides support to the United Nations Development Fund for Women's Women, Peace and Security Programme, which aims to strengthen national and international approaches to protection and assistance of women affected by armed conflict and to support their role in conflict prevention, resolution and peace building.

The Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court gives victims, including women, a role in the Court's proceedings and the possibility of reparations. In September, the United Kingdom gave a donation of £25,000 to the Trust Fund for Victims established by the court to be used for reparations.

Consultants

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total amount is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193419]

Mr. Rammell: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Craig Murray

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the United States about Mr. Craig Murray's speech at Freedom House on 17 August 2002. [192933]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is unaware of having received any representations from the US on this matter.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on the development and consolidation of democracy and the rule of law and on the respect of human rights and fundamental freedoms met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; what issues were raised by the UK Government expert at each meeting; what recommendations the Committee made; what action was (a) proposed and (b) undertaken by (i) the EU and (ii) the UK; and if he will make a statement; [192497]

(2) if he will list the five main (a) issues and (b) countries discussed by the Committee on the development and consolidation of democracy and the rule of law and on the respect of human rights and fundamental freedoms during the Greek presidency of the EU; and if he will make a statement. [192498]

Mr. Rammell: The European Commission convenes quarterly meetings of the Human Rights and Democracy Committee to consult member states about projects it intends to fund under the European Initiative for Democracy and Human Rights and to discuss priority funding areas. The UK is represented at official level by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department for International Development. During the first half of 2003, meetings took place on 11 March and 18 June in Brussels.

Details of the thematic and geographical scope of the initiative, plus full details of the projects recommended by the Commission and approved by member states during this period are available at: http://europa.eu.int/comm/europeaid/projects/eidhr/index_en.htm

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times during the Greek presidency of the EU the Committee on the arrangements for implementing Europe agreements with the countries of central and eastern Europe and free-trade agreements with the Baltic states met; when and where these meetings took place; which UK Government expert was present at each meeting; and if he will make a statement. [192493]

Mr. MacShane: Various EU bodies handled Europe agreements with countries with whom accession negotiations were under way under the Greek presidency, namely EU/Association Committees, Sub-Committees, Association Councils and Council Working Groups.

Details for EU/Association Committees under the Greek presidency were as follows:

13 June 2003: EU/Association Committee with Lithuania, Vilnius (not attended by a UK official);

16 June 2003: EU/Association Committee with Estonia, Tallinn (attended by an official from the UK Permanent Representation to the European Union);

18 June 2003: EU/Association Committee with Latvia, Riga (ditto);

24 June 2003: EU/Association Committee with Czech Republic, Brussels (ditto); and 26 June 2003: EU/Association Committee with Hungary, Budapest (ditto).

Details for Association Councils under the Greek presidency were as follows:

19 May 2003: Association Council with Romania, in the margins of the General Affairs and External Relations Council in Brussels (attended by an official from the UK Permanent Representation to the European Union); and 30 June 2003: Association Council with Bulgaria, in the margins of the General Affairs and External Relations Council in Luxembourg (ditto).

Sub-Committees for each country met regularly in Brussels under the Greek presidency on a variety of topics. There was normally no attendance by HMG at these meetings.

Council Working Groups (Central Europe Working Groups) discussed the relevant Europe Agreements approximately once a week in Brussels under the Greek presidency. These were also attended by an official from the UK Permanent Representation to the European Union.

Further information on the Greek presidency can be found in Command Paper Cm6097, "Developments in the European Union, January to June 2003, the Greek Presidency", which was laid before Parliament in January 2004 and is available on the FCO website at: www.fco.gov.uk/commandpapers

European Constitution Treaty

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications of the clause in the proposed European Constitution Treaty, Cm 6289, which prevents terrorists from being sent to the nation where the crime is committed if the death penalty is in force in that nation; and what action he would seek to take to deal with such alleged terrorists. [190642]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

HMG do not consider that there will be any changes to the current situation regarding expulsion of terrorist suspects. In that respect the provisions of the Charter simply reflect existing ECHR provisions. Article II-52(3) of the Charter makes clear that rights in the Charter that correspond to rights in the ECHR shall have the same meaning and scope as the ECHR rights.

Iran

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the destruction of cultural heritage of the Bahá'í faith that has taken place in Iran, with particular reference to the (a) Resting Place of Quddus and (b) House of Mirza Buzurg. [193130]

Mr. Rammell: We have serious concerns about the persecution of the Bahá'ís in Iran, and about the destruction of Bahá'í property including at these two sites. We have raised our concerns with the Iranian authorities, both bilaterally and with EU partners, on many occasions. We have also urged the authorities to return the remains of Quddus to the Bahá'í community for reburial elsewhere.

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart in respect of charging or releasing the senior members of Saddam Hussein's former Government detained without charge or trial by the United States. [191666]

Mr. Rammell: We are in regular contact with the US about detention issues. The cases of those senior regime members interned by the US in Iraq will be reviewed by the joint US-Iraqi Review Panel as with all other cases. Those who no longer pose an imperative threat to security will be released, unless they are suspected of having infringed Iraqi or international law, in which case they will be passed to the Iraqi authorities. 12 senior former regime members were charged on 1 July 2004 in the Central Criminal Court of Iraq. All 12 are being held by the Iraqi authorities as criminal detainees. The charges against them are currently being investigated.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to his oral statement on Iraq of 12 October 2004, Official Report, columns 151–55, what evidence caused him to accept reports in July 2000 in the Iraq Ba'ath party newspaper Al Thawrak that claimed victory over UN sanctions; [191784]

(2) what evidence caused him to accept the claim in August 2001 by the then Iraqi Foreign Minister that UN sanctions efforts had collapsed. [191798]

Mr. Rammell: These were direct quotations from the report of the Iraq Survey Group, Key Findings. Regime Finance and Procurement, page 3, a copy of which was attached to the copies of the Statement by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, deposited in the Vote Office on 12 October.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had with the Secretary General of the UN during his visit to London on 19 October on alleged corruption at the UN during the Oil for Food Programme in Iraq. [193175]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed a number of Iraq-related issues with the United Nations Secretary-General, during his visit on 19 October. They did not discuss the allegations of corruption in the Oil for Food Programme, since these are being investigated by an independent inquiry appointed by the UN Secretary-General in April. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials maintain regular contact with the inquiry team.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 469W, on Iraq, if he will make a statement on the length of time between the start of the UK and US occupation of Iraq and the official withdrawal of the 45-minute claim. [193591]

Mr. Straw: Coalition forces crossed the border into Iraq on 20 March 2003. The intelligence referred to was formally withdrawn on 7 October 2004 and I notified the House in my statement of 12 October 2004, Official Report, column 152.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funding (a) has been and (b) is planned to be disbursed by the occupying powers in Iraq to (i) the Iraqi Federation of Trade Unions and (ii) other trade union bodies; and if he will make a statement. [192715]

Mr. Rammell: In February this year the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) organised a fact-finding mission, partly funded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office which looked at the state of trades unions in Baghdad, Basra and northern Iraq. We understand that ICFTU is now developing proposals for assisting the fledgling trade union movement. The Department for International Development has also received requests to support trade unions in Iraq from UNISON and from the Iraqi Federation of Trade Unions and is in discussion with them over possible assistance.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Iraqi Interim Authority concerning rights of trade union membership and activity in the public sector; and if he will make a statement. [192716]

Mr. Rammell: The transitional administrative law, which came into force on 28 June, made provision for the right of all Iraqis to join unions. We understand that 12 unions have already been set up and four open conferences have been held.

Israel

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK abstention at the UN Security Council concerning Israeli military action in northern Gaza. [192721]

Mr. Rammell: The UK abstained on the Security Council Resolution on Israeli military action in Gaza because the text on which we were called to vote gave the impression that fault lies only on the Israeli side. It is our view that the responsibility for taking steps to end violence lies with both sides. We proposed amendments that would have seen the Security Council resolution acknowledge Israel's right to defend itself against terrorism and make clear that the international community's concerns are about actions disproportionate to the threat. We also proposed that the resolution call on the Palestinian Authority to take firm action against acts of terrorism and their perpetrators. Unfortunately the sponsors of the text refused to accept our amendments.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government on flights by its military aircraft over Lebanese territory; and if he will make a statement. [192752]

Mr. Rammell: We raise the issue of overflights regularly with both the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs and with the Israeli Defence Forces, including the Israeli Air Force.

The UK Government have called on all parties to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon under the control of the Government of Lebanon, and to honour their commitments under UNSCRs 425, 1553 and 1559.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli authorities regarding the deaths of Palestinian schoolgirls Ghadir Mokheimer and Iman Al-Hasan. [192753]

Mr. Rammell: We have made representations at every level to the Israeli authorities of our concern over the disproportionate use of force by the Israeli Defence Force in Gaza, and the number of civilian casualties, particularly children, which have resulted. Our embassy in Tel Aviv has raised specifically the case of Iman Al-Hasan, who was shot 20 times on her way to school. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary also mentioned this tragic case in his statement of 13 October on the ongoing violence in Gaza. A copy of the press release is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website: www.fco.gov.uk/policy/news/press-releases. We have not raised the case of Ghadir Mokheimer specifically.

Mercenaries

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to ensure there is transparency in joint projects between the UK Government and governments who are using, or whose agents are using, mercenaries. [192957]

Mr. Rammell: There are clear guidelines for officials who come into contact with "Private Military and Security Companies", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House pursuant to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's written ministerial statement of 12 July 2004, Official Report, column 53WS. These require transparency, both by requiring officials to gain authorisation for contacts with private military companies and by keeping records of those contacts.

The Government do not support the use of military personnel, whether privately contracted or not, for purposes which are unethical or contrary to international law.

Uzbekistan

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last raised human rights concerns with the Government of the Republic of Uzbekistan. [192162]

Mr. Rammell: Throughout 2004, we have regularly and repeatedly drawn our deep concern about the human rights situation in Uzbekistan to senior level attention within the Uzbek Government. We have done this in ministerial and official contexts and together with EU partners.

Both the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and our Embassy in Tashkent will continue to raise human rights concerns, including individual cases, with the Uzbek Government.

As recently as 19 October, our acting Head of Mission in Tashkent drew attention to reports of the secret execution of prisoners who still have appeals pending with the UN Human Rights Committee. He received assurances of an immediate official response.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Uzbekistan's decertification by the United States State Department for receipt of financial aid because of its human rights record. [192934]

Mr. Rammell: The US State Department made clear on 13 July 2004 that the decision to decertify Uzbekistan was taken because of lack of progress in meeting its commitments under the Strategic Partnership Framework agreed in 2002 between Uzbekistan and the US.

We have been forthright in our criticism of the Uzbek Government's human rights record. The US Government have also expressed similar concerns. We regularly discuss human rights issues in Uzbekistan with the US. Both the US and UK Governments have a policy of constructive but critical engagement to try to improve the human rights situation in that country.

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the United States about Mr. Craig Murray's reports that the (a) British and (b) US intelligence services were using information extracted from prisoners in Uzbekistan under torture; and if he will make a statement. [192935]

Mr. Straw: We have regular discussions with the US on Counter Terrorism and human rights.

The UK abides by its commitments under international law, including the UN Convention Against Torture. The British Government, including the intelligence and security agencies, never use torture in order to obtain information. Nor would we instigate others to commit torture for that purpose. We are active in pressing other countries to live up to their human rights obligations and to deliver on human rights commitments they have made.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the (a) provenance and (b) reliability of the intelligence that the UK has received on Uzbekistan from (i) the CIA and (ii) other sources. [193025]

Mr. Straw: All intelligence is validated and assessed. It is not the Government's policy to confirm or deny details of specific intelligence reporting.

The UK intelligence agencies evaluate the reliability of all intelligence they receive before it is passed into the assessment process. This evaluation takes account of the possible motivation of the source as well as what kind of reporting record the source may have and the circumstances in which it was obtained.

Western Sahara

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he is having with other governments about the replacement of Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara when the UN's mandate comes to an end. [192992]

Mr. Rammell: The UK is in contact with other governments to discuss the extension of MINURSO when its mandate expires on 31 October.

The UK continues to support UN efforts to resolve the conflict in the Western Sahara and to urge all parties to work towards a mutually acceptable solution that provides the people of the Western Sahara with an opportunity to exercise their right to self-determination.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives from the Polisario Front. [192993]

Mr. Rammell: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met representatives of the Polisario Front in London in September 2004.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has never met representatives from the Polisario Front.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will recognise the Saharwi Arab Democratic Republic as the sovereign state in Western Sahara. [193297]

Mr. Rammell: The UK continues to support UN efforts to resolve the conflict in the Western Sahara. The UK has no plans to recognise the Saharwi Arab Democratic Republic as a sovereign state in Western Sahara.

WORK AND PENSIONS

52-Week Linking Rule

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost of administering the 52-week linking rule was in each year since 1998. [193842]

Mr. Pond: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 26 October 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the annual cost of administering the 52 week linking rule in each year since 1998. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Information specifically relating to the cost of administering the 52 week linking rule is not available. The Department now accounts for its administration and benefit expenditure by Strategic Objective, as set out in its Public Service Agreements (PSA), and by individual Requests for Resources (RfRs), as set out in the Departmental Estimates and Accounts.

I'm sorry I can't be more helpful.

Benefits (Telephone Inquiries)

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the service standard is for the time within which calls to the national telephone inquiry lines for (a) attendance allowance and (b) disability living allowance should be answered; and what the latest figures are for performance against these standards. [193231]

Maria Eagle: The combined disability living allowance/attendance allowance helpline aims to answer 90 per cent. of calls received within 30 seconds. Currently it is answering between 40 to 50 per cent. within this target. Additional staff are presently being trained to help move closer to the target figure.

Departmental Buildings

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what competitive processes were followed leading up to the sale of former Department of Social Security buildings to LandSecurities Trillium; and which other bidders were involved. [189415]

Maria Eagle: In April 1996, the Departmental Board of the former Department of Social Security agreed a feasibility study to identify and examine a range of options for the future management of the DSS Estate. The study, known as PRIME (Private Sector Resource Initiative for Management of the Estate), concluded that greater efficiency could be achieved if both ownership and management of the Estate was transferred to the private sector.

The opportunity was advertised on 28 June 1996 in the Financial Times and in the European Journal in accordance with EEC/GATT rules. Thirty initial written response were received, and a sift exercise was completed, from which six candidates were chosen. Three consortia were selected to go forward to the final selection process. However, all three consortia had placed a lot of conditions on their tender submissions which could have had a material effect on the final price.

It was agreed, therefore, to extend the procurement process to a fourth stage. Consequently, two consortia, Mapeley Holdings Ltd. and PPM (Partnership Property Management Ltd.), now known as LandSecurities Trillium, were invited to submit best and final offers which removed all conditions.

Following evaluation of the tenders, Trillium was chosen as preferred supplier. This was endorsed by the Departmental Board at their July meeting and, after obtaining Ministerial agreement, an announcement was made on 31 July 1997. The finer details of the contract were negotiated through to December and an agreement was formally signed at mid-day on Christmas Eve.

The evaluation process was a tightly controlled three stage procedure and included eight review groups with technical and operational representatives from across DSS, and who were independent from the project team.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions his Department is having with Land Security Trillium concerning the (a) vacation and (b) alternative use of the Department's buildings. [190882]

Maria Eagle: DWP has established a range of forums at different levels of management, where the nature and timing of the vacation of accommodation is discussed with LandSecurities Trillium. In addition to these discussions Office of Government Commerce (OGC) is advised of the Department's intention to vacate such accommodation.

The policy of disposing of all surplus accommodation as early as possible is in keeping with the Department's Estate Strategy and seeks to deliver cost savings with minimum delay.

Where the property concerned is ineligible for surrender to LandSecurities Trillium, due to Contractual constraints, the department reports the available space to OGC for inclusion on their register of vacant Civil Estate. This is then circulated to those departments seeking accommodation who also register their requirement with OGC.

In its discussions with LandSecurities Trillium the Department explores, wherever possible, the possibility of alternative Planning use if that would enhance the sale price.

Departmental Redundancies

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) organisations and (b) agencies with whom his Department consulted before deciding upon the locations for (i) office closures and (ii) job reductions. [190676]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 26 October 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the organisations and agencies with whom his Department consulted before deciding upon the locations for office closures and job reductions. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus has consulted at a national level with a number of key stakeholders concerning service delivery planning in Jobcentre Plus. These stakeholders included:

Confederation of British Industry

MIND (National Association for Mental Health)

Royal National Institute for the Blind

Child Poverty Action Group

National Council for One Parent Families

National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux

Royal National Institute for the Deaf

Third Age Employment Network

Homeless Network

Centre for Economic and Social Inclusion

Trades Union Congress

Local Government Association

Carers UK

The other parts of the Department for Work and Pensions have been kept informed of the plans for change in Jobcentre Plus, and there has been liaison with the Countryside Agency and DEFRA on the rural impact of our plans.

At a local level District Managers consult with local stakeholders on early plans for changes to service delivery arrangements. Local managers are required to consult widely as an integral part of the planning process, and the guidance to managers includes a suggested list of stakeholders:

Local MPs/MEPs/MSPs/Members of the National Assembly of Wales

Local Authorities—both councillors and officials of various departments (for example, Benefits, Social Services)

Programme Providers/service delivery partners

Employers

A sample of key employment providers and their representative bodies, such as the local chambers of commerce

Citizens Advice Bureaux

Welfare rights organisations and organisations representing specific client groups (RNIB, RNID, DIAL, Gingerbread, representatives of local ethnic minority groups and other local organisations)

Other Government Agencies (the Probation Service, Connexions, Careers Wales/Scotland, Inland Revenue, and especially the Countryside Agency)

Health Authorities/primary care trusts/local GPs

Learning and Skills Councils

Local Colleges

Government Regional Offices

Housing Associations

Police

Landlords/Joint Tenants

Groups of customers directly if wished

This list is not exhaustive and local managers should identify any other local stakeholders. The views and concerns received are addressed before approval is granted to progress to more detailed planning.

I hope this is helpful.

Designated Accommodation

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many rooms are set aside for (a) the use of smokers, (b) worship, broken down by religion, and (c) nursing mothers and pregnant women in each building and set of offices for which his Department is responsible. [187311]

Maria Eagle: Information on the number of rooms set aside by the Department for the use of smokers or nursing mothers and pregnant women is not available. Information on facilities for pregnant women and nursing mothers is contained in the DWP Health and Safety Guidance which is available to our staff via the departmental intranet site.

We prefer to use the term quiet rooms rather than prayer rooms, to ensure inclusion for all staff. The Department holds information on 12 dedicated prayer rooms or quiet rooms. However first aid rooms, which can be used as quiet rooms, are available in all locations.

Departmental guidance on The Employment and Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2003 includes a section regarding religious observance in the workplace and is available to our staff via the departmental intranet site.

Funding Allocation Formula

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which funding streams have been allocated by his Department using a funding formula which includes rankings or scores on the Index of Multiple Deprivation 2000; and if he will list the amount of funding allocated in such a way (a) nationally by the Department and (b) to all Government sponsored bodies reporting to the Department. [191530]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not allocate any funding using the Index of Multiple Deprivation 2000. However, the index is considered, alongside a range of factors, when determining where to place initiatives such as Working Neighbourhoods Pilot and Action Teams for Jobs. These factors can include measures such as the proportion of the population in receipt of benefits, potential conflict with other programmes and geographical spread.

Health Projects

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what feedback his Department has received on the progress of the Engaging Physicians, Benefiting Patients pilot; and if he will make a statement. [193259]

Maria Eagle: Data capture for the Engaging Physicians, Benefiting Patients pilot and qualitative research with general practitioners is still continuing. An interim report is due by the end of this year, and the full evaluation report is scheduled for spring 2005.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of incapacity benefit claimants have undergone a medical examination in each year since 1990. [193596]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Information on the percentage of incapacity benefit (IB) recipients who have undergone a medical examination is not available. This is because IB case-load data are based on a snapshot while the examination data are cumulative. The available information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit recipients who have undergone medical examinations

Period	Examinations performed
September 1999 to August 2000	397,284
September 2000 to August 2001	402,302
September 2001 to August 2002	509,831
September 2002 to August 2003	524,894
September 2003 to August 2004	467,256

Note:
Information on the number of examinations performed is available only from September 1999.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Jobcentre Plus flexible service delivery sites are based in higher education institutions. [191978]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Michael Foster, dated 26 October 2004:

> The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding how many Jobcentre Plus Flexible Service Delivery sites are based in higher education institutions. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.
> There is currently one Flexible Service Delivery site based in a higher education institution:
> University College Worcester, Henwick Grove, Worcester, WR2 6AJ
> I hope this is helpful.

Pathway Pilots

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have gained work after entering the Pathway Pilots; and how many remained in work after 13 weeks. [193843]

Maria Eagle: We are already starting to see very encouraging signs of an increase in off-flow rates from incapacity benefit in the first three Pathways to Work pilot areas.

We estimate that, up to the end of July 2004, over 5,000 people had been helped into work as a result of entering the Pathways to Work pilots. This number represents those directly supported by the new reform programme and is double that achieved at the same time last year in those areas. The rate of improvement in Pathways areas is twice that of the rest of the country.

Information is not yet available on the number of people remaining in work after 13 weeks.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Information Commissioner

25. Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will bring forward proposals to include Network Rail within the statutory responsibilities of the Information Commissioner. [193534]

Mr. Lammy: Network Rail is not presently subject to the Freedom of Information Act. However, Network Rail is required to provide information to the Office of Rail Regulation about its public functions. The Office of Rail Regulation is subject to the Act, and the hon. Member will be free to approach them.

Witness/Victim Evidence

26. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Department for Constitutional Affairs what measures the Department is investigating to encourage witnesses and victims to come forward and give evidence in court. [193535]

Mr. Leslie: The Government are determined to deliver improved services to victims and witnesses in the Criminal Justice System in a variety of ways. For example, the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Bill with its Commons Report Stage on 27 October 2004, contains a range of measures aimed at encouraging more witnesses to come to court and give evidence.

Equality and Human Rights Commission

27. Miss Begg: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposals for a commission for equality and human rights. [193536]

Mr. Lammy: The proposals for a Commission for Equality and Human Rights were made in the White Paper "Fairness for All" on 12 May 2004. The Government hopes to legislate soon on this subject.

House of Lords

28. Chris Bryant: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on the future composition of the House of Lords. [193537]

Mr. Leslie: The Government are determined to proceed with further reform of the House of Lords. It is important to consider its proper role and functions before looking at questions of composition. Policy will be developed in the context of the Labour party manifesto.

Legal Aid

29. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Department for Constitutional Affairs how much the Department spent on independent research into the operation of the legal aid system in the last year for which figures are available. [193538]

Mr. Lammy: The Department spent a total of £450, 530.75 on independent research into the legal aid system in 2003–04. Some £237,895.47 was paid to Frontier Economics Ltd. for reports on the economics of the legal aid market. £212,635.28 was spent on the Independent Review of the Community Legal Service, undertaken by Matrix Research and Consultancy Ltd. The legal aid system is also considered as part of much wider studies, such as the "Clementi" Review.

Domestic Violence

30. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on the availability of legal aid in domestic violence cases. [193539]

Mr. Lammy: Domestic violence proceedings are a priority area for legal aid funding. The Legal Services Commission's Funding Code Criteria for funding domestic violence cases are wider than for most other family and non-family areas. Those who need financial assistance with their legal costs are able to obtain legal aid to go to court.

Judiciary

31. Julie Morgan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans the Department has to make the judiciary more representative of the general public. [193540]

Mr. Leslie: We published a consultation paper entitled "Increasing Diversity in the Judiciary" on 13 October. The paper invites views on how to widen the pool from which applicants for judicial appointment are drawn, while maintaining the principle that merit must remain the sole criterion on which judicial appointments are made. The results of the consultation exercise and a programme for change will be announced next spring.

Money Claim Online

32. Mr. Soley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Secretary of State's plans to extend the operation of Money Claim Online. [193541]

Mr. Lammy: Since the successful introduction of Money Claim Online in February 2002, I am pleased to say that it has been extended to enable defendants and their representatives to file electronically a response to a claim and to view an electronic record of the progress of a claim. While there are currently no plans to further extend its operation, we continue to meet with stakeholders such as the Law Society who are keen to see the service extended.

Civil Legal Aid

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what percentage of civil cases in England and Wales were legally assisted in (a) 1980, (b) 1990, (c) 2000 and (d) 2003. [193531]

Mr. Lammy: The number of civil legal aid certificates issued for representation in the civil courts rounded to the nearest thousand, was as follows:

	Number
1979–80	192,000
1989–90	391,000
1999–2000	246,000
2002–03	164,000

It is impossible to say what percentage of total civil cases this represents, since no record is kept of civil cases which do not go to court.

The reduction in the number of publicly funded cases in the final year is due to the reforms introduced by the Access to Justice Act which introduced a more rigorous merits test and made personal injury and other money claims a matter for the private sector.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what level of equity in a main dwelling the Government assesses as sufficient to deny a person the benefit of civil legal aid in the absence of any other capital assets or income. [194033]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to his question on 7 September 2004, Official Report, column 1052W. The responses are currently being analysed and the Government will announce the way forward on this and the other proposals detailed in the consultation paper, in due course.

New Deal

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many personnel the Department has recruited under the New Deal in each of the past five years. [194030]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office on 25 October.

Tsar Appointments

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many tsars have been appointed with responsibilities which cover part of the work of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [191929]

Mr. Lammy: No tsars have been appointed within the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

HEALTH

Alzheimer's Disease

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures have been taken to assist carers of patients with advanced Alzheimer's disease in North Southwark and Bermondsey. [193956]

Dr. Ladyman: All carers, including those caring for people with dementia, are entitled to an assessment to determine their needs as carers and eligibility for support. The new Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004 introduces new provisions that will ensure that carers are made aware of this right.

The carers grant, worth £125 million this year, provides money for local councils to provide short breaks and services to carers to enable them to continue in their caring role. Carers are also entitled to cash payments for carers' services to enable them to purchase the type of support they require and promote a better quality of life.

The Department has also revised and updated, "Who cares? Information and support for the carers of confused people." At a local level, a range of services exist to support carers of patients with Alzheimer's disease or dementia. Southwark Carers provide funding for breaks, travel cost support, counselling provision and advice, which includes welfare rights support, and housing issues. They also run a taxi scheme.

In addition, carers who are in need of help or support, can access secondary mental health services directly via the North Southwark Community Mental Health Team for Older Adults. This ranges from informal advice and support, direct work with carers to enhance their understanding of dementia and caring abilities and access to specialist psychiatric and medical advice when required.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Alzheimer's disease patients are being treated by primary care trusts in North Southwark and Bermondsey. [193958]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not held centrally.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHS on drug treatments for advanced Alzheimer's disease patients in North Southwark and Bermondsey in each year since 1997. [193959]

Dr. Ladyman: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), on behalf of the Licensing Authority, grants marketing authorisations for medicinal products provided that satisfactory quality, safety and efficacy data have been submitted for the medicinal product for use in the proposed indication and that the risk benefit is deemed favourable. According to the MHRA records, there is one licensed product, Ebixa (memantine hydrochloride), which is indicated for the treatment of moderately severe to severe Alzheimer's disease.

Information on Ebixa dispensed at primary care trust (PCT) and strategic health authority level is not publicly available, due to the small numbers involved. However, it is known that Ebixa was dispensed in the community within Southwark PCT in 2002–03.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the availability of drugs for patients with moderately severe to severe Alzheimer's disease in North Southwark and Bermondsey. [193960]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has made no assessment. It is for primary care trusts, in conjunction with strategic health authorities, to ensure that services meet local needs.

Anti-cancer Drugs

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress the strategic health authorities have made in the execution of their responsibilities in respect of the take-up of new anti-cancer drugs authorised by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence. [193067]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The national cancer director's report on the uptake of cancer drugs approved by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence was published on 14 June 2004. Strategic health authorities were asked to consider the findings and develop robust plans setting out action they intend to take for those drugs where uptake was significantly below the national average. The deadline for submitting plans was 30 September. All plans have been received and are currently being considered.

Breast Cancer

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of women diagnosed with breast cancer were treated within 31 days in (a) 1997 and (b) the last year for which figures are available. [191241]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Data on waiting times from diagnosis to treatment of breast cancer were not collected centrally in 1997. A maximum wait of one month from diagnosis to treatment for breast cancer was introduced in 2001. Performance data for the whole period collected are shown in the table.

	Quarter	Total patients treated	Patients treated within one month	Percentage of patients treated within one month
2001–02	4	6,315	5,950	94.2
2002–03	1	6,496	6,133	94.4
2002–03	2	7,023	6,642	94.6
2002–03	3	6,941	6,695	96.5
2002–03	4	7,320	7,048	96.3
2003–04	1	7,630	7,395	96.9
2003–04	2	7,808	7,626	97.7
2003–04	3	7,961	7,798	98.0
2003–04	4	7,758	7,507	96.8

Chemical Exposure

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to (a) monitor and (b) reduce exposure to (i) biocumulative chemicals and (ii) hormone and endocrine disrupting chemicals. [191336]

Miss Melanie Johnson: With regard to reducing human and environmental exposure to chemicals identified as of potential risk, the United Kingdom Government have for some time recognised the need to develop a fast, efficient and workable process for testing, screening and tackling those of most concern first, while minimising animal testing. To this end, the Government strongly supports the proposals by the European Commission for a new system to gather hazard information, assess risks, classify, label, and restrict the marketing and use of individual chemicals and mixtures. This is known as REACH—registration, evaluation and authorisation of chemicals.

In the REACH negotiations, led by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the Government supports the aim of the authorisation process to ensure that the risks from substances of high concern are properly controlled and that these substances are eventually replaced by suitable substances or technologies, with the aim of reducing risks to human health and the environment. The Government also supports the inclusion in REACH, of persistent, bioaccumulative and toxic chemicals, very persistent and very bioaccumulative chemicals and substances of equivalent concern, such as endocrine, also known as hormone disrupters, when scientifically validated test methods have been developed and criteria established.

The Department also considers the potential effect of endocrine disrupting natural substances in the diet and has provided, for example, advice on soy-based infant formula as a result of an extensive review of oestrogen-like compounds in plants by its expert committee (published in May 2003).

Children's Hospices

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met interested groups to discuss core funding for hospices for children; and if he will make a statement. [192221]

Dr. Ladyman: I met with representatives of the Association of Children's Hospices and the Association for Children with Life Threatening Illnesses on 21 July 2004.

Children's hospice services are funded from a number of sources, including services commissioned by primary care trusts (PCTs) based on their assessment of the needs of their child population and their priorities. It is for children's hospices to enter into a dialogue with their local PCT, or the lead commissioning PCT where a hospice serves a wide area, who may seek to place a child with them and so establish the level of demand for their services.

The disabled child module of the children's national service framework, which was published on 15 September, acknowledged the importance of palliative care services for children and recommended that high quality palliative care services should be available for all children and young people who need them.

The funding of children's hospices in Wales is a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

Dentistry

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated to (a) North East Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust and (b) North Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust for dental services in the past two years. [193499]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Expenditure in dentistry in North East Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust (PCT) and North Lincolnshire PCT areas for general dental services (CDS) in 2002–03 and 2003–04 is shown in the table. Net expenditure is after deductions of patient charges.

GDS expenditure in North East Lincolnshire PCT and North Lincolnshire PCT areas for 2002–03 and 2003–04

GDS expenditure is made up of GDS fee payments plus other costs. These other costs comprise: commitment payments; seniority payment; maternity, paternity and adoptive pay; long-term sick pay; continuing professional development allowance (CPDA); CPDA travel hours; business rates; training grant; clinical audit convenor, clinical audit secretarial support, clinical audit travel expenses, clinical audit payment and vocational dental practitioner salary and national insurance contributions. Some other PCT payments have also been included.

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists there were in (a) North East Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust, (b) North Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust and (c) Lincolnshire Primary Care Trust in each year since 1997. [193500]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The number of general and personal dental service dentists in the North and East Lincolnshire area by primary care trust (PCT) at September each year from 1997 to 2004 is shown in the table.

Number of general and personal service dentists at September each year

PCT	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
North East Lincolnshire	46	46	50	54	51	50	48	49

Dentists are counted in each PCT in which they practise.

PCTs were established in 2002 and therefore the areas have been defined using practice postcodes within the existing PCTs.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were registered with an NHS dentist in Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust in each year since 1997. [192938]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of registrations in the general dental service for the Sutton and Merton Primary Care Trust (PCT) area at September 1997 to 2004, is shown in the table.

General dental service: number of adult and child registrations in the Sutton and Merton PCT area at September each year, 1997 to 2004

September each year	Adult and child registrations (thousand)
1997	173.6
1998	147.8
1999	151.8
2000	148.5
2001	155.4
2002	146.2
2003	159.1
2004	156.1

Notes:

1. The high registration figure for 1997 reflects the 24-month registration period. For 1998 onwards, the figures reflect a 15-month registration period.
2. Registration numbers are live registrations on the Dental Practice Board's computer at the end of the month.
3. Sutton and Merton PCT was established in 2002. Registrations are based on contract postcodes within the Sutton and Merton PCT area.

Doctors (Training Costs)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost of training a doctor was in the last period for which figures are available. [192792]

Mr. Hutton: In the period between entry to medical school and full registration, it is estimated that training a doctor costs between £200,000 and £250,000. Doctors generally continue training after full registration. As the duration and nature of post-registration training varies greatly, and as service and training costs are closely related, it is not possible to provide a meaningful estimate of the total cost of training.

EMIS System

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to general practitioners who do not wish to change clinical system under the National Programme for IT and who wish to carry on using the EMIS system. [192767]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's policy with regard to local choice about information technology (IT) provision remains as stated in the guidance agreed jointly with the British Medical Association. Each general practitioner practice should have a choice of more than one system so long as these have been accredited against national standards and can deliver the required functionality. Guidance published on the national programme for IT (NPfIT) website makes it clear that existing suppliers play an important role in current and future national health service IT service provision.

Local service providers have also been informed of the NPfIT position that GPs must not be forced to change system, and individual practices will continue to be supported where they have expressed a wish not to begin migrating in the short term to the preferred local system.

Glycogen Storage Disease

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many recorded in-patient episodes of glycogen storage disease type one there have been in each year since 1989, broken down by primary care trust. [192663]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Counts of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) for glycogen storage disease by strategic health authority (SHA) of residence in England NHS hospitals for 1996–97 to 2002–03 are shown in the table. Comparable data prior to 1996–97 are not available centrally, nor is information giving counts of episodes specific to glycogen storage disease type one. It is not possible to provide figures by primary care trust due to the risk of breaching patient confidentiality.

Notes:

1. Diagnosis (primary diagnosis)

The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

2. Finished Consultant Episode (FCE)

An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

3. Grossing

Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2002–03, which are not yet adjusted for shortfalls.

Health Services (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated at the NHS walk-in centre in York in each year since it opened. [191155]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Recorded attendances each year at York national health service walk-in centre since its opening on 24 April 2000 are shown in the table. However, the figures for 2002 are incomplete as data for July, October and November were not provided to the Department.

York NHS walk-in centre

	Number of attendances
2000	10,276
2001	27,241
2002	25,129
2003	39,027
2004 (To date)	28,985

Health Spending (Islington, North)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average per capita spending on (a) primary care, (b) mental health and (c) hospital care in Islington North constituency was in each year since 1996–97. [194009]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is not available in the format requested. Expenditure per weighted head of the population in the North Central London Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area, which includes the constituency of Islington North, has increased from £623.57 in 1997–98 to £1,190.39 in 2002–03. This does not represent the total expenditure per head, as an element of health expenditure cannot be identified by SHA area.

Hepatitis C

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the treatment rates of hepatitis C; [193387]

(2) if he will make it his policy to conduct research on treatment rates for hepatitis C in other EU countries. [193388]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We do not collect information centrally on the number of patients receiving national health service treatment for hepatitis C. We are putting arrangements in place to improve access to treatments recommended by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE), including antiviral drug therapy for hepatitis C. This will include the provision of data on hospital prescribing of NICE-recommended drugs to allow strategic health authorities to compare their own treatment rates with the national distribution and to take any necessary action locally.

We have no current plans to conduct research on hepatitis C treatment rates in other European Union countries.

HER2

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the uniformity of availability of human epidermal growth factor receptor 2 (HER 2) testing across the country;

and what steps he is taking to ensure that there is equitable provision of HER2 testing across the country; [193064]

(2) what measures are being put in place by his Department to ensure that the quality of human epidermal growth factor receptor 2 (HER2) testing is of a uniformly high standard across England; and what plans his Department has to collect data on HER2 testing; [193065]

(3) what plans his Department has in place for auditing and monitoring the uptake of human epidermal growth factor receptor 2 (HER2) testing. [193066]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department does not collect information about the availability or quality of testing for human epidermal growth factor receptor 2 (HER2) and has no plans to collect such data or audit and monitor the use of this test.

Influenza Vaccine

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the areas affected by the withdrawal of supply of Chiron influenza vaccines; [191500]

(2) what delays will occur in the influenza vaccination programme as a consequence of the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency announcement on the Chiron vaccines; [191501]

(3) whether there will be sufficient stocks of influenza vaccine in England to carry out the full vaccination programme this winter for (a) over 65s and (b) other at risk groups. [191502]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has made available vaccine to surgeries most affected by the suspension of Chiron vaccines licence, from stock already purchased as part of our contingency measures.

General practitioners order supplies of vaccine from the supplier of their choice.

There are more doses of 'flu' vaccine available this year than ever before.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the adequacy of influenza vaccine supplies; [190810]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of general practitioner clinics which (a) have had to and (b) will have to cancel immunisation clinics due to the shortage of influenza supplies; and if he will make a statement; [190811]

(3) how many influenza vaccines which were intended to be administered by early November he estimates will be delayed; [190812]

(4) what action he is taking to ensure adequate influenza vaccine supplies in all areas of the country this autumn and winter; and what support he is giving to (a) vaccination clinics and (b) general practitioner surgeries to assist them in finding new sources from which to acquire vaccines. [190814]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 14 October 2004]: There are more doses of 'flu' vaccine available this year than ever before.

To minimise the disruption to clinics, we made available vaccine to surgeries most affected by the suspension of Chiron vaccines licence from stock already purchased as part of our contingency measures.

General practitioners are not set targets to vaccinate patients at set times but arrange their influenza clinics, usually throughout October and November.

As soon as we were made aware of the problem, we made contingency arrangements with other suppliers to ensure that adequate stocks would be available to meet any shortfall and to minimise the impact any delay would have on the 'flu' programme.

We wrote to all 'flu' immunisation co-ordinators in England on 28 September, 5 October and 21 October asking them to ensure surgeries in their area were aware of the issue and with details of how and where additional stocks of vaccine can be sourced.

Intravenous Chemotherapy Suites

Dame Marion Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of IV chemotherapy suites; and what plans he has to increase their availability. [193063]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department does not collect information about the availability of intravenous chemotherapy suites.

The national cancer director is chairing a review of chemotherapy services to facilitate the development and delivery of high quality chemotherapy services. This will address issues such as chemotherapy facilities and the infrastructure needed to support them.

Maternity Services

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many obstetricians have performed an external cephalic version in an NHS hospital in each of the last five years; [193276]

(2) what plans the Department has to promote wider use of external cephalic version by obstetricians. [193277]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the number of obstetricians who have performed an external cephalic version in a national health service hospital in each of the last five years is not collected centrally.

In order to improve the safety and well being of mother and baby, the Department asked the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) to issue clinical guidelines on routine antenatal care. The guidelines, "antenatal care—routine care for the healthy pregnant woman", published in October 2003, recommend that all women who have an uncomplicated singleton breech pregnancy at 36 weeks of gestation should be offered external cephalic version. Exceptions include women in labour and women with a uterine scar or abnormality, fetal compromise, ruptured membranes, vaginal bleeding and medical conditions. Where it is not possible to schedule an appointment for external cephalic version at 37 weeks of gestation, it should be scheduled at 36 weeks.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department is taking to improve the quality of maternity services; [193339]

(2) what funding his Department has made available for maternity services in the last five years; [193340]

(3) what steps his Department is taking to increase choice for mothers in maternity services. [193341]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is committed to improving the quality of maternity services and extending choice in maternity services for all women.

Maternity services were included in the national consultation exercise "Choice, responsiveness and equity"—to improve patient and user experience in the National Health Service (NHS). The results of the consultation were published on 9 December 2003 in "Building on the Best: Choice, Responsiveness and Equality in the NHS".

On 15 September the Department published the children, young people and maternity services national service framework (NSF). The maternity module of the NSF looks at how to make maternity services more flexible, accessible and appropriate. The maternity module of the NSF builds on the work contained in "Building on the Best", including the emphasis on direct access to midwives and the development of birth plans.

The Department has worked with the organisation Dr. Foster to produce local "You're Pregnant" maternity guides, which were published on 22 December 2003. The guides give women and their families information about a range of maternity services in their area.

In addition to a 6.2 per cent. per annum increase in funding to primary care trusts over the last five years, specific funding has been allocated for maternity services. £100 million capital investment was made available over two years (2001–02 and 2002–03) to refurbish and modernise over 200 maternity units in England to improve the environment in which care is provided and better to meet the needs of women and their families. The £100 million was allocated on the basis of individual bids submitted by maternity units after consultation with local staff and users.

MRSA

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many women contracted MRSA after giving birth in an NHS hospital in each of the last five years; [193274]

(2) how many women contracted MRSA after giving birth by Caesarean section in an NHS hospital in each of the last five years. [193275]

Miss Melanie Johnson: These data are not collected centrally.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what he envisages the role of patient and public involvement forums will be in future, with regard to particular renewed efforts to control MRSA bloodstream infections and increasing hospital hygiene inspections; and if he will make a statement. [190029]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Patient forums have a statutory function to monitor the national health service from the patient perspective. Through this role, forums can contribute towards the raising of cleanliness standards in NHS premises. Forums are being invited to undertake cleanliness inspections and report their findings. Training will be provided to members of forums to ensure inspections are effective and consistent. Trust boards and their chief executive remain responsible for controlling methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus bloodstream infections.

National Patient's Safety Agency

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the National Patient Safety Agency's reporting system will (a) begin to invite reports from the NHS and (b) publish information collected from reports on patient safety in the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [192740]

Mr. Hutton: The National Patient Safety Agency's (NPSA) national reporting and learning system is already receiving reports of patient safety incidents from the NHS.

The system was launched on 25 February 2004 and NHS organisations in England and Wales should be connected to it by the end of 2004.

The NPSA will publish a report that includes data from the national reporting and learning system set in the context of data from other sources, during 2005.

NHS Professionals

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the total value of outstanding invoices over 90 days old owed by NHS Professionals to private recruitment agencies has been in each quarter since its inception; [190486]

(2) how many placements for (a) doctors, (b) nurses and (c) corporate staff have been filled by NHS Professionals with (i) NHS Professionals staff and (ii) staff sourced from private recruitment agencies; and what the total value of placements was in each case. [190487]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is not collected centrally.

NHS Professionals meet the best payment practice in the NHS, which requires at least 95 per cent. of suppliers to be paid within 30 days. NHS Professionals has confirmed that it currently has no invoices for private sector agencies outstanding over 90 days.

NHS Staff

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of staff in the NHS are of each ethnic group. [193072]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Hospital, public health medicine and community health services (HCHS): medical and dental staff and non medical staff by ethnic category[1]

Number (headcount) and percentage

England at 30 September 2003	Number	Percentage

All ethnic minority classifications[2]	132,121	13.2

n/a = Not applicable.

[1] From 1 April 2001, newly appointed staff have been asked to classify themselves using the ethnic categories listed in the 2001 population census. Existing staff will be reclassified over time but data returns currently include a mixture of 2001 categories and older information based on 1991 population census categories.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what powers the newly-appointed NHS Equality and Human Rights Tsar will have to ensure that the NHS employs a fair number of people from all backgrounds; [193073]

(2) what the terms of reference of the NHS Equality and Human Rights Tsar are; what targets he is expected to meet; and what powers he will have to enforce his remit. [193074]

Dr. Ladyman: The role of the national director for equality and human rights, Mr. Surinder Sharma, is to promote the Government's equality and human rights agenda across the health and social care system, including taking forward the Department's action plan on leadership and race equality; act as the chief executive's advisor and champion in the national health service; and work in partnership across Government, with equality and human rights organisations and other key stakeholders, including health and social care inspectorates, and the new NHS employers organisations.

The director's brief is to deliver change at a national level, within the context of the NHS improvement plan, to help ensure health and social care services are available on an equitable basis and support the NHS in integrating equality and diversity into its corporate strategies and actions. Through this, the director will assist the Department and NHS in complying with their legal duties in relation to equality and human rights, and developing good practice, but he will not have legal enforcement powers.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average full-time equivalent gross pay of NHS (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) professions allied to medicine, (d) administrative and clerical staff and (e) ancillary staff in York was in each year since 1997. [192430]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested is not held centrally.

NHS Wheelchair Services

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will adopt the service standards developed by industry for NHS wheelchair services. [R][192864]

Dr. Ladyman: Local wheelchair services should develop their own policies and procedures in accordance with local need and in consultation with local stakeholders.

North Cheshire Hospital Trust

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people have received treatment for (a) type I diabetes and (b) type II diabetes and associated conditions in North Cheshire Hospital Trust during the last 12 months; [193629]

(2) how many people have received treatment for coronary heart disease and associated conditions in North Cheshire Hospitals Trust during the last 12 months; [193630]

(3) how many people have received treatment for stroke and associated conditions in North Cheshire Hospitals Trust during the last 12 months. [193631]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 25 October 2004]: This information is not currently available. The hospital episode statistics (HES) data is held by the Department and provides information on admitted patient care for England. HES will publish data for the 2003–04 financial year alongside the national health service chief executive's report in December 2004.

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people have received support from NHS dieticians in Warrington in the last 12 months; [193632]

(2) how many people with chronic pain have been referred to North Cheshire Hospital trust in the last 12 months; what services are available to them; and how many specialist staff, broken down by grade, are providing the services. [193645]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Nurses

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses have been trained in the UK in each year since the launch of the NHS plan in 2000; and how many he anticipates will be trained in the UK in each of the next 10 years. [193106]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the number of students entering pre-registration training in England each year since 1999–2000, the NHS plan target baseline, is shown in the table.

Pre-registration nursing and midwifery training places

	Number
1999–2000	18,707
2000–01	20,021
2001–02	21,770
2002–03	22,956
2003–04	24,284

Source:
Quarterly Monitoring Returns.

The NHS plan target for increasing the number of training places for nurses has been achieved. Between 1999–2000 and 2003–04, the number of nurses and midwives entering training in England each year has increased by 5,577. Information on the number of training places anticipated in each of the next 10 years is not available, though latest figures for the current financial year show that there will be further increases.

Information for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the devolved Administrations.

Nursing Homes (Variation Certificates)

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost is of a variation certificate from the Commission for Social Care Inspection for a nursing home with (a) five beds increasing to six, (b) 10 beds increasing to 11, (c) 20 beds increasing to 22, (d) 40 beds increasing to 49 and (e) 50 beds increasing to 100; and what the equivalent costs were in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2002. [191148]

Dr. Ladyman: I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection that the fee for the increase in bed numbers set out in the Fees and Frequency of Inspection Regulations 2004 is £792. The cost in 2003 was £660 and in 2002 it was £550.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what a variation certificate from the Commission for Social Care Inspection for a nursing home covers, that is not the responsibility of a local authority's planning and building control officer. [191167]

Dr. Ladyman: I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that the CSCI will consider the suitability of the premises for the purposes of providing a care home and the adequacy of arrangements to provide the service, for example, staffing.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the longest period is that may elapse between inspections of a nursing home by the Commission for Social Care Inspection. [191180]

Dr. Ladyman: Care homes are required to be inspected by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) a minimum of twice in the 12 month period from April to March. This means that the gap between inspections may be up to almost a year, but will typically average six months.

Prosthetics/Limb Replacement Courses

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people attended publicly-funded specialist courses in prosthetics and limb replacement in each of the last 10 years; and how many of these are employed (a) in the UK and (b) by the NHS. [192739]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not hold information on the number of people attending publicly funded specialist prosthetics and limb replacement courses in each of the last 10 years or on the number of prosthetists employed in the National health service in England.

Between 1996–97, the first year information is available, and 2003–04, the number of NHS funded training places for prosthetists and orthotists in England increased from 28 to 30.

Information for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the devolved Administrations.

Resistant Bacteria (Pet Transmission)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been undertaken by his Department into the risks of antibiotic resistant bacteria transmission from pets to their owners. [192784]

Miss Melanie Johnson: No projects on this specific topic are included in the Department's antimicrobial resistance research programme.

Sexual Health

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to implement the recommendation of the Independent Advisory Group for Sexual Health and HIV to abolish the VAT levy on condoms. [192368]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The Government keep all taxes under review and any changes are announced as part of the normal Budget process. However, under our agreements with our European partners, we are not able to extend our existing VAT zero rates or introduce any new ones.

Speech and Language Therapy Services

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications for speech and language therapy services of 'Agenda for Change'. [192394]

Dr. Ladyman: 'Agenda for Change' will facilitate service modernisation for speech and language therapy services, like other services. It provides an employment framework that is fair, consistent and transparent across all national health service staff. It creates better links between career and pay progression and greater scope to create new kinds of jobs in the interests of providing better patient care. The new knowledge and skills framework, which is part of the new system, will ensure that all NHS staff will go through an annual development review, which includes appraisal, measured against a knowledge and skills framework outline for their role.

Stab Wounds

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated for stab wounds in each year since 1997 for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [193042]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department's Hospital Episode Statistics data records admissions to hospitals of patients who have been injured by a sharp object including treatment for stab wounds. The number of admissions for this reason since 1997 are:

	Number
1997–98	3,908
1998–99	3,701
1999–2000	4,152
2000–01	4,351
2001–02	4,673
2002–03	4,218

Data on treatment in hospital accident and emergency departments, that does not result in hospital admission, are not held centrally.

Vulnerable Adults List

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the operation of the protection of vulnerable adults list. [191899]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government are committed to tackling and cracking down on those who abuse vulnerable adults and has introduced on 23 July 2004, the protection of vulnerable adults (POVA) scheme. This scheme effectively bans people who have abused a vulnerable adult in their care from ever working in a care position again.

The scheme places a statutory duty on care providers to check whether a potential employee is on the POVA list before allowing them to work in a care position.

Currently, some 573 people have been referred for inclusion on the list. Of these, some 244 people have been provisionally listed and 14 people have been confirmed on the list. These figures include cross-referrals from the Protection of Children Act list.

I am aware, that there have been initial delays in issuing POVA First checks. I am pleased to say that there has been a significant improvement in criminal records bureau's performance, but there is still room for improvements and officials will be monitoring the situation.

The provisions of the POVA list are set out in Part VII of the Care Standards Act 2000 and will also be implemented in the national health service as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

Airborne Stand-off Radar

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects the Airborne Stand-Off Radar (ASTOR) to enter service; [193125]

(2) when he expects the engineering difficulties with the Airborne Stand-Off Radar (ASTOR) to be corrected; and what effect this will have on ASTOR's in-service date. [193126]

Mr. Ingram: We have been informed by the prime contractor for the ASTOR project of difficulties associated with development of the radar and their plans to resolve these. We await firmer schedule details from the company that we shall then subject to detailed risk analysis to enable us to make an informed judgement on any potential impact on ISD.

Armed Forces Recruitment

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the recruiting figures for the (a) Army, (b) Royal Air Force and (c) Royal Navy have been for each of the past 10 years. [191663]

Mr. Caplin: Figures for 'intake from civilian life' are available monthly in Tri-Service Publication 1 (TSP1), a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Chaplains

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) chaplains and (b) vergers are employed and paid by his Department; and on what (i) terms and (ii) length of contract they are employed. [193954]

Mr. Caplin: The information is currently being collated and I will write to the hon Member when this is available. A copy of the answer will be placed in the Library of the House.

Combat Clothing

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's decision to purchase combat clothing from China. [192619]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is not directly purchasing combat clothing from China. The contract let in June 2004 for combat clothing and other items was awarded to a UK company. The selection of where manufacturing takes place is a commercial matter for the UK prime contractor.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the financial benefits are of securing combat clothing from China. [192620]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is not directly purchasing combat clothing from China. The contract let in 2004 for combat clothing and other items was awarded to a United Kingdom company. Due to the variety of products being supplied under this contract there are a number of manufacturing sources including China, the UK and mainland Europe. The selection of these manufacturing countries is a commercial matter for the UK Prime Contractor. The current contract provides an estimated saving of £23 million over previous purchase arrangements.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons his Department has issued one contract for the purchase of all combat clothing. [192621]

Mr. Ingram: Since 2002 the Ministry of Defence's strategy has been to reduce the number of small contracts regularly placed for clothing. The aim was to award a longer term contract under a partnering arrangement that would introduce improvements in product and supply chain costs. Following competition, a contract was awarded in June 2004 for both combat and non-combat clothing manufactured by a cut and sewn method, and is expected to generate potential savings of £23 million compared to traditional procurement methods.

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the possible impact on UK manufacturers of the decision to award the contract for combat clothing to China. [193165]

Mr. Ingram: The contract referred to has been awarded to a UK company, creating a small number of quality jobs and safeguarding approximately 40 other jobs. It is anticipated that further jobs will be created for UK staff during the life of the contract.

Consultants

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193416]

Mr. Caplin: Summaries of the Ministry of Defence expenditure on External Assistance, of which consultancy is a part, are available in the Library of the Houses for the years 1995–96 to 2003–04.

Specific data on consultancy companies employed, the projects they were working on and the total fees paid or incurred in each case are not held centrally and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Continuous Attitude Surveys

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last continuous attitude surveys in each service were (a) conducted and (b) completed; if he will place the questions asked in the Library; when he expects the next continuous attitude surveys in each service to be conducted; what plans he has to publish the armed forces continuous attitude surveys; and if he will make a statement. [192152]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer18 October 2004]: The last Royal Navy and Royal Marine attitude surveys were conducted in September 2004. The closing date for both surveys is 31 October 2004 with initial analysis being available in February/March 2005. The next attitude surveys for the Naval Service will be administered in September 2005.

The last Army attitude survey (SP6) was conducted in December 2003 and completed in August 2004. The seventh serving personnel survey (SP7) was conducted in June 2004 and is currently being analysed, with the eighth serving personnel survey scheduled to be conducted in December 2004.

The RAF Continuous General Attitude Survey is issued quarterly in February, May, August and November each year. The last survey was issued on 1 August 2004 and is not yet complete. The last survey for which complete data are available was issued on February 2004 and completed in April 2004. The next RAF Continuous General Attitude Survey is due to be issued to personnel on 1 November 2004. The statistical results from the four quarterly surveys conducted in 2004 will be aggregated into a single report and published, on a date yet to be agreed, in 2005.

I am today placing copies of the questions asked and responses made by service personnel in the continuous attitude surveys conducted in 2003 in the Library of House.

Cut and Sew Tender

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who (a) the printer of the camouflage fabric and (b) the company making up the garments are for the Cut and Sew Tender DC4 BESL/1002. [190857]

Mr. Ingram: The prime contractor wishes to retain a business advantage and not publicly disclose his sub-contractors. The terms of the contract with the Ministry of Defence are commercial in confidence and I am therefore withholding the information requested under Exemption 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the overseas offices of the Defence Export Services Organisation are situated; when each office was established; how many staff are employed; and what the cost of each was for (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [192685]

Mr. Ingram: Defence Supply Secretaries employed by the Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) have offices in the countries listed as follows. In addition, a post has been established in Romania this year. DESO staff are also employed in support of specific defence export projects in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait and their numbers are shown in the following table; costs of those offices are met by the customer Government and are withheld under Exemption 1b of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

[2] Withheld.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at which overseas exhibitions the Defence Export Services Organisation is organising a UK presence during 2004; and what the cost is in each case. [192686]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) does not generally provide direct organisational support to UK industry attending overseas exhibitions. During 2004 the Defence Export Services Organisation has represented or will represent the Ministry of Defence in support of the UK Defence Industry at the following exhibitions. The cost is shown in each case:

Country	Exhibition	Cost (£000)
Australia	Pacific 2004	35

Defence Support Vehicle

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the letter of 12 October from the Lord Bach to the hon. Member for Aldershot, how many jobs will be created in the United Kingdom by the award of the Defence Support Vehicle Preferred Bidder Status to MAN ERF UK Ltd.; and how many jobs would have been created under each of the other bids. [192370]

Mr. Ingram: All the bidders in the support vehicle competition responded to the invitation to make proposals for industrial participation which were assessed by both the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Trade and Industry. The proposal tendered by the preferred bidder, MAN ERF UK Ltd., for the support vehicle demonstration and manufacturing phase, will create and sustain hundreds of new and existing jobs across the United Kingdom, many of which will be located in a number of small and medium sized enterprises. Bids from the other participating bidders also involved significant numbers of jobs in the UK, although none offered more than the MAN ERF UK Ltd. bid. However, the detail on numbers and locations of jobs is a matter for the companies.

EU Council of Ministers

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a Written Ministerial Statement outlining the key points on the agenda for each of the Council of Ministers' meetings at which his Department is represented in advance of each meeting; [188200]

(2) if he will make a Written Ministerial Statement outlining for each meeting of the Council of Ministers at which his Department is represented as soon as is practicable following that meeting (a) the key items of discussion, (b) the positions of the Government on those items, (c) the key positions taken by other member states that Ministers consider should be noted by hon. Members and (d) any preliminary discussion on the timing and the agenda of the following meeting. [188201]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 13 September 2004, Official Report, column 1451W by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Straw).

Future Rapid Effects System

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the annual financial commitment is to the Future Rapid Effects System under the 2004 Spending Review. [191859]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence's financial commitment to the Future Rapid Effects System (FRES) programme is limited to the initial Assessment Phase. It is estimated that the Assessment Phase will cost £113 million and is scheduled to last for two years.

Studies planned for the Assessment Phase will consider options to meet the requirement and only when these studies have been reported will we be in a position to accurately determine the programme's total procurement cost and future funding profile.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Technology Demonstrator Programmes for the systems and sub-systems of the Future Rapid Effects System to be completed. [193123]

Mr. Ingram: Detailed schedules for the Technology Demonstrator Programmes (TDPs) have yet to be finalised.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to award the Technology Demonstrator Programmes Contracts for the systems and sub-systems of the Future Rapid Effects System; and what he estimates the costs of the programmes to be. [193124]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence is considering options for taking forward the Technology Demonstrator Programmes (TDPs). We expect the first contracts to be in place in the first quarter of 2005 and although acquisition costs are yet to be established, the total cost of the TDPs are expected to be in the region of £85 million.

Nuclear Materials

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether test exercises involving force-on-force simulated attacks are conducted to evaluate the robustness of the design basis threat assessment made for nuclear materials in transit within the United Kingdom. [190697]

Mr. Ingram: Periodic exercises are undertaken to test the ability of the nuclear convoy to resist an armed attack in line with the postulated threat.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether military vehicles carrying nuclear materials are subject to the convention on the physical protection of nuclear material, INFCIRC/274/REV.1 and subsequent revisions. [190698]

Mr. Ingram: Stringent security and protection standards are applied by the Ministry of Defence whenever United Kingdom Defence Nuclear materials are used, stored and transported. These security standards are compatible with IAEA INFCIRC/274.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many vehicles deployed for the movement of (a) nuclear weapons and (b) nuclear materials to and from the atomic weapons establishments at (i) Aldermaston and (ii) Burghfield or in exercises relating thereto have been involved in road traffic (A) incidents and (B) offences, since September 2003, broken down by (1) date and (2) circumstances of the incident; what risk assessment was carried out in each case; whether these assessments are made publicly available; and whether there are outstanding claims from third parties arising from such incidents. [190699]

Mr. Ingram: There have been no reported road traffic accidents or incidents in the period since September 2003 involving nuclear weapon/nuclear material convoy vehicles. There have been a number of incidents involving anti-nuclear protestor activity in the vicinity of Ministry of Defence nuclear weapon/nuclear material convoy vehicles, one of which has resulted in a protester being charged with road traffic offences by the Ministry of Defence Police. All convoy movements are assessed in advance to ensure that they are safe and secure, in line with Health and Safety guidelines. A Risk Assessment is carried out by the MDP on completion of every task and any necessary amendments published formally within MOD. This information is not made available to the public as disclosure could potentially be of assistance to terrorists or others who may wish to attack the convoy with a view to endangering security and defence interests and the lives of civilian and service personnel. One MOD claim remains outstanding against a protester. No claims are outstanding against the MOD.

RAF Operational Evaluation Unit

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on the work of the Royal Air Force's Fast Jet and Weapons Operational Evaluation Unit. [193913]

Mr. Ingram: The Fast Jet and Weapons Operational Evaluation Unit became operational in April 2004. The unit operates out of facilities at RAF Coningsby.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Environment Agency

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with representatives of the Environment Agency for England and Wales on the establishment of a parallel agency in Northern Ireland; and what research he has undertaken on the matter. [193362]

Angela Smith: There have been no discussions on these matters with the Environment Agency whose remit is limited to England and Wales.

Prior to the establishment in 1996 of the Environment and Heritage Service as an agency within the Department of the Environment, a full study of the options for environmental protection was carried out. More recently a coalition of environmental NGOs commissioned Professor Richard Macrory to carry out a study of the options for environmental governance and his report was published in May 2004.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the merits of establishing an environment agency in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [193363]

Angela Smith: All the various options for delivering environmental protection were considered before the Government decided to establish the Environment and Heritage Service (EHS), as an executive agency within the Department of the Environment, in 1996.

I am aware that, during a public consultation carried out by a coalition of NGOs earlier this year, a majority of those who responded favoured the establishment of an environmental authority, structured as a non-departmental public body, to take over delivery of the services currently provided by EHS. The coalition has not yet presented its own recommendations on the way forward but I am due to meet its representatives on 2 November and I will, of course, consider any recommendations which they may present.

Influenza Vaccination

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to ensure all those eligible for an influenza vaccination on the NHS in Northern Ireland receive one. [193365]

Angela Smith: On 16 September the Department was alerted to a problem involving Chiron, the manufacturer who was to provide the bulk of vaccine supply to Northern Ireland for this year's influenza immunisation programme. In view of the potential risk to public health, the Chief Medical Officer took a decision that the Department should intervene to procure alternative supplies. In liaison with the Department of Health in England and other UK Health Departments, officials have sought, therefore, to obtain vaccine supplies from manufacturers other than Chiron. As a result, by 20 October, 200,000 doses of vaccines had arrived in Northern Ireland, this in addition to 70,000 which GPs and Community Pharmacists had obtained earlier through the normal channels. A further 50,000 more than enough to cover all the at risk groups, are expected to arrive no later than 1 November.

GPs and Community Pharmacists have been kept fully informed by the Department of the arrival details of the vaccines into the Province to allow them to plan their flu clinics.

Magilligan-Greencastle Ferry

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fare-paying passengers from (a) Northern Ireland and (b) the Republic of Ireland have used the Magilligan-Greencastle Ferry in the past 12 months. [193643]

Mr. Spellar: Between 20 October 2003 and 19 October 2004, 288,670 passengers used the Magilligan-Greencastle Ferry. A record of the place of departure of passengers was not kept during this period.

Mental Health Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the public spending on mental health services was per head of population in each health board area in the Province in each of the last five years. [193726]

Angela Smith: The information requested is as follows:

Expenditure per head of population on mental health services in health and social services board areas

£ per head

Year ended March:	EHSSB	NHSSB	SHSSB	WHSSB
1999	61	56	56	81
2000	64	61	61	85
2001	75	64	61	90
2002	78	66	74	90
2003	86	75	77	92

Peace II

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels took to find a representative from victims wounded or left bereaved by IRA terrorists at its recent event entitled Building Peace and Reconciliation—delivering a unique EU programme. [193635]

Mr. Pearson: The seminar on the PEACE II Programme, held in the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive, Brussels on 29 September, was jointly organised by that Office, the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Special EU Programmes Body and the Irish Regions Office in Brussels. No steps were taken to obtain a representative from victims wounded or left bereaved by IRA terrorists. This was essentially a technical seminar, designed to show to a European audience how the EU PEACE II Programme was being implemented. The seminar included a presentation on an ex-prisoners project with a cross-community dimension which had benefited from the Programme. The organisers regret that the platform presentations did not encompass a wider range of projects supported under the PEACE II Programme.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels took to find a representative from the majority community in Northern Ireland at its recent event entitled Building Peace and Reconciliation—delivering a unique EU programme. [193636]

Mr. Pearson: This event was an essentially technical seminar and no attempt was made to obtain representatives from particular sections of the Northern Ireland community. The audience included people from all Northern Ireland community backgrounds and people from across Europe. Platform speakers were officials involved at various levels in the implementation of the PEACE II Programme, with the exception of (a) a spokesman for a funded project which undertakes cross-community work with ex-prisoners; and (b) a Northern Ireland Member of the Committee of the Regions, which had originated the overall programme of seminars in Brussels regional offices, of which this event was pa[illegible]

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels spent in holding the event entitled Building Peace and Reconciliation—delivering a unique EU programme. [193637]

Mr. Pearson: The cost of this event to the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive, Brussels was €1257 (£867 approximately).

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding was awarded by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development through PEACE II to the point to point steeplechases meeting held at Necarne Equestrian Centre, Irvinestown, County Fermanagh on 8 May; and under what measure number this money was awarded. [193575]

Mr. Pearson: Peace II funding of in total of up to £20,685 has been awarded for the point-to-point steeplechase meeting held at Necarne Equestrian Centre, Irvinestown, Co. Fermanagh on 8 May 2004. This funding is spread over a three year period under the Natural Resource Rural Tourism Initiative, Measure 4.2b—Outward and Forward Looking Tourism—enhancing the region as a tourist destination.

The award will enable the promotion of a 3-year marketing campaign to increase visitor numbers to the event in an effort to ensure the long term sustainability of the point-to-point steeplechase meeting and help to increase tourism spend in the county.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the application was made to the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development for PEACE II funding for the point to point steeplechases meeting held at Necarne Equestrian Centre, Irvinestown, County Fermanagh on 8 May. [193576]

Mr. Pearson: The application was made on 27 June 2003.

Prisoners (Women)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes are planned in the (a) facilities offered to and (b) treatment of female prisoners in Northern Ireland in response to the report from the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission in October 2004. [193639]

Mr. Pearson: Prior to the publication of the report from the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission the Northern Ireland Prison Service recognised the shortcomings of the regime for female prisoners in Mourne House, Maghaberry and transferred female prisoners to Hydebank Wood.

Female prisoners have access to a full range of education and recreational programmes, chaplains and religious worship. Time out of their cells is maximised and twenty four hour access to sanitation facilities is available.

The staff gender imbalance was addressed through the appointment of female managers and officers resulting in a 70/30 per cent. balance of female to male staff.

The Prison Service are currently delivering gender specific training to all staff working with the female population.

All prisoners and inmates are consulted on a regular basis about a range of issues including regime development.

PRIME MINISTER

Expenses

Charles Hendry: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what the cost was of the (a) accommodation, (b) travel and (c) other expenses for publicly-funded (i) officials, (ii) aides and (iii) security personnel who accompanied his wife on her recent speaking tour to Malta; [194019]

(2) how many publicly-funded (a) officials, (b) aides and (c) security personnel accompanied his wife on her speaking tour to Malta; and what the (i) names and (ii) functions of each are. [194022]

The Prime Minister: Mrs Blair visited Malta at the invitation of the Slynn Foundation where she spoke on an unpaid basis at a seminar organised by the Foundation entitled "Applying Law and Human Rights in Malta".

One official accompanied her to deal with administrative issues. Accommodation was provided by the British High Commission. Additional costs were met by the hosts. It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on security matters.

Charles Hendry: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what the expected cost is of the (a) accommodation, (b) travel and (c) other expenses for publicly-funded (i) officials, (ii) aides and (iii) security personnel accompanying his wife to the United States on her speaking tour; [194020]

(2) how many publicly-funded (a) officials, (b) aides and (c) security personnel will accompany his wife to the United States on her speaking tour; and what the (i) names and (ii) functions of each are. [194021]

The Prime Minister: This is a private visit. This is not a matter for the Government.

It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on security matters.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Carbon Sinks

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's policy is on carbon sinks; and what provision the UK can make in this area. [192999]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 October 2004]: The UK is committed under the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change to protect and enhance carbon sinks and reservoirs. In order to fulfil this commitment we are expanding the forest estate under the Forest Strategies and policies of the Devolved Administrations. We are doing this in a manner that will provide multiple public benefits including a positive contribution to climate change mitigation through carbon sequestration.

The Government is also committed to protect soil functions, including maintenance of organic matter levels, via the provisions on soil conservation in the reformed Common Agricultural Policy, and to the development of policies to protect existing stocks of carbon in soil organic matter in England, as described in further detail within the first Soil Action Plan for England, published earlier this year and available on the Defra website (www.defra.gov.uk/environment/land/soil/pdf/soilactionplan.pdf).

Convention on Trade in Endangered Species

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 89W, on CITES, if she will break down the numbers of Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species. [193438]

Mr. Morley: The information can only be found at disproportionate cost.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if her Department will support the proposed ban under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species on the international trade in lion trophies and skins. [189896]

Mr. Morley: I am not aware of a proposal before CITES to ban international trade in lion trophies and skins. At the CITES 13th Conference of Parties, which has recently concluded in Bangkok, Thailand, the Government of Kenya had proposed that the African lion be uplisted to Appendix I. The Government, in common with other EU member states, had an open position on this proposal pending exploration of the scope for an agreed solution among range States. During the course of the CITES Conference, after discussions with other range states the Government of Kenya withdrew the proposal, noting that there was no regional consensus on the issue and that discussions were under way for convening regional workshops on lion management for which the UK has offered financial support.

Lions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will examine ways of protecting lions in West and Central Africa. [189897]

Mr. Morley: The UK is taking action in many ways to conserve lions in West and Central Africa, particularly through our active participation in the Convention on Biological Diversity and the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). Lions and other endangered species are generally protected by national law in all the countries they inhabit; they are also protected internationally by regulation of trade under CITES. Through the UK's contributions to the Global Environment Facility (GEF) we are helping developing countries and countries with economies in transition to meet their obligations under the Convention on Biological Diversity and to implement their own wildlife protection measures and those required under CITES. In addition the Darwin Initiative, funded by Defra, supports projects which help countries rich in biodiversity but poor in resources to protect their biodiversity and use it sustainably. Since its launch in 1992 it has funded over 300 projects in 100 countries, including granting two three year grants for work on 'Big Cat Conservation and Sustainable Management in Southern Africa'. The output from this project informed a decision by the South African Government to reduce lion hunting quotas. At the recent CITES meeting in Bangkok I announced a contribution of £30,000 to help set up workshops in Africa to gather information on lion management.

Environment Agency

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff the Environment Agency has, broken down by (a) function and (b) region. [192300]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has 11,060 staff and the breakdown is as follows:

(a) Environment Agency staff broken down by function

	Number
Central Administration	279
Flood Defence	4,071
Water Resources	1,233
Environmental Protection	3,752
Fisheries	499
Recreation and Conservation	189
Navigation	109
Other activities (mainly central professional services)	928
Total	11,060

Note:

'Central administration' is defined as Head Office Finance, Human Resources, Facilities, Operational Co-ordination, Payroll and other exchequer services and Audit. 'Other Activities' comprise mainly Corporate Information Systems, National Laboratory Service, Legal, Estates and Procurement.

(b) Environment Agency staff broken down by region

	Number
Anglian	1,311
Midlands	1,172
North east	982
North west	1,122
Southern	839
South west	1,052
Thames	1,475
Wales	964
National staff (all regions)	2,143
Total	11,060

Note:

'National staff' include Corporate Head Office, national service groups such as Corporate Information Services and Flood Defence contract management, process management teams and operational teams undertaking work on behalf of all regions.

Environmental Offences

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) prosecutions, (b) cautions and (c) enforcement notices there have been in each year since 1999 for offences related to (i) process industry regulations, (ii) radioactive substances regulation, (iii) waste, (iv) water quality, (v) water resources, (vi) flood defences, (vii) fisheries and (viii) navigation as recorded in the National Enforcement Database (A) in total and (B) broken down by region. [192316]

Mr. Morley: I will place in the Library of the House material answering this question. The 1999 report covers the period from April 1 only as this was when the data base was begun. The 2004 report covers the period to mid October.

Flood Protection

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much money has been spent on flood protection measures in (a) Yorkshire and the Humber and (b) City of York in each of the last 10 years. [191300]

Mr. Morley: The total capital expenditure in each of the last 10 years on flood defence measures in the Environment Agency's Yorkshire Regional Flood Defence Committee area and local authorities areas in Yorkshire and the Humber are as follows:

£000

Financial year	EA regional capital expenditure for Yorkshire and Humber	Local authority capital expenditure in Yorkshire and Humber
1994–95	7,932	217
1995–96	11,667	517
1996–97	12,148	13
1997–98	10,795	531
1998–99	11,793	228
1999–2000	12,890	85
2000–01	14,505	—
2001–02	19,969	653
2002–03	30,405	—
2003–04	25,675	455
Total	157,779	2,699

Total capital expenditure in each of the last 10 years for flood defence measures in the City of York is given as follows:

£000

Financial year	EA capital expenditure in the City of York
1994–95	—
1995–96	—
1996–97	—
1997–98	25

Government Grants (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people in the Buckingham constituency have received funding from the (a) rural enterprise scheme, (b) processing and marketing grants scheme and (c) vocational training scheme since their introduction, indicating the level of funding received from each scheme. [189854]

Alun Michael: Since the inception of the England Rural Development Programme five awards of grant have been made to people in the constituency of Buckingham.

The awards of grant have all been made under the Rural Enterprise Scheme and total £232,652. The projects themselves encompass an Environmental Interpretation Centre for use by the general public (located in the ward of Brill) an on-farm bed and breakfast business along the 'Jubilee Way' (also in Brill) to an on-farm fishing lake in the ward of Stewkley and a barn conversion to offices in Buckingham north.

No grants have been made in the constituency from the Processing and Marketing Grant Scheme and the Vocational Training Scheme.

Greenhouse Gases

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to introduce a system for controlling greenhouse gas emissions similar to the STEK system operating in the Netherlands; and whether she has made an assessment of the cost to public funds of introducing such a system. [190862]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 October 2004]: Political agreement was reached at the Environment Council on 14 October to a Regulation including a system for controlling fluorinated greenhouse gas emissions in relation to refrigeration, air conditioning and other relevant equipment. A Regulatory Impact assessment of the Commission's original proposals was provided by Defra in November 2003 together with Supplementary Memorandum 12179/03.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the level of household greenhouse gas emissions was in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by region. [192998]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 October 2004]: Regional greenhouse gas emissions in 2002 from fuel combustion in households are given in the table (in million tonnes of carbon dioxide equivalent). These figures are derived from regional fuels sales data.

Regional greenhouse gas emissions

Country	England	Scotland	Wales	Northern Ireland	UK total
CO2-e (Mt)	72.86	7.10	5.01	3.44	88.41

This information will be published later this year (and available on the National Air Emissions Inventory website, at www.naei.org.uk), in the report Greenhouse Gas Inventories for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland: 1990–2002.

Internal Drainage Boards

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local authorities contain internal drainage boards within their boundaries. [191932]

Mr. Morley: There are currently 219 internal drainage boards wholly or partly in England. These are concentrated in areas of special drainage need such as parts of East Anglia, Yorkshire, Somerset and Lincolnshire. IDB boundaries generally follow rivers and their catchments and some will therefore straddle several local authority areas.

My records indicate that 108 separate local authorities in England pay special levies to IDBs which fall entirely or partly within their boundaries. However, this figure may not incorporate all the relevant local authorities, as there may be some which do not pay such a levy.

Nitrates Directive

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timetable is for the introduction of the EU Nitrates Directive. [193000]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 October 2004]: Directive 91/676/EEC (the Nitrates Directive) came into effect on 12 December 1991. The transposition timetable set down in the Directive is as follows:

December 1993: Establish a code or codes of good agricultural practice.

December 1993: Designate as Nitrate Vulnerable Zones areas which drain into waters which are or could be polluted, if action is not taken, by nitrates from agricultural sources. There is an obligation to review the designations at least every four years.

December 1995: Establish Action Programme(s) for Nitrate Vulnerable Zones. There is an obligation to review the Action Programme(s) at least every four years.

December 1999: Implementation of Action Programme(s)

Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made as to whether the River Thames is compliant with the Urban Waste Water Directive; [192321]

(2) whether the (a) sewage disposal treatment works, (b) sewage mechanisms and (c) works related to sewage in London are compliant with the Urban Waste Water Directive; [192322]

(3) what assessment has been made of the capacity of London's sewage treatment works to handle future increases in storm overflow incidence, with particular reference to compliance with the Urban Waste Water Directive; [192323]

(4) how the Thames is classified for purposes of the Urban Waste Water Directive, broken down by stretch of river. [192324]

Mr. Morley: The objective of the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive is to protect the environment from the adverse effects of waste water discharges. The Directive includes requirements concerning sewage collection systems, and for sewage treatment works. Standards and deadlines are set according to the size of the population served and the sensitivity of waters receiving the discharges.

The sewage collection systems serving the urban communities along the Thames are largely combined systems which collect both domestic and industrial waste water, and rainwater run-off. The Directive acknowledges that it is not possible in practice to construct combined collecting systems and treatment plants to deal with all waste water during situations such as unusually heavy rainfall. Consequently the Directive requires the limitation of pollution of receiving waters due to storm water overflows according to best technical knowledge not entailing excessive cost. The systems along the Thames have combined sewer overflows which operate to prevent flooding and sewage treatment works from becoming overloaded during wet weather.

Most of the freshwater section of the Thames has been identified as a Sensitive Area because of eutrophication. As required by the Directive, communities either side of this stretch of the river have satisfactory sewage collection systems and overflows, and Thames Water have or are to provide more stringent treatment at qualifying (those serving more than 10,000 inhabitants) sewage treatment works which discharge to this area. When completed we consider waste water discharges to this section of the Thames will be compliant with the Directive.

The tidal section of the Thames is identified as a normal water body. As required by the Directive, London has a collection system, and secondary treatment is provided at the qualifying (those serving more than 15,000 inhabitants) sewage treatment works which discharge to this area.

As agreed in the last Periodic Review of water company price limits for 2000–05 Thames Water, the Environment Agency, Defra and the Office of Water Services (Ofwat) have been involved in a Strategic Study of the environmental impact of intermittent storm sewage discharges to the Thames Tideway. The remit of the study was to identify objectives for improvement, and to propose potential solutions, having regard to costs and benefits.

As a result of the study the Final Guidance by the Secretary of State to the Director-General of Ofwat, published on 4 October 2004, and the draft price limits published by Ofwat on 5 August 2004, include provision for further measures to address sewage discharges to the Thames Tideway.

In the medium term this will result in improvements to the capacity and quality of treated effluent from three sewage treatment works (Beckton, Crossness, and Mogden) which discharge to the Thames Tideway. These improvements are also to include reducing the frequency of intermittent discharges from the storm water storage tanks at Mogden. When completed we consider waste water discharges from these works will be compliant with the Directive.

In addition a scheme to improve the treated effluent at Riverside sewage treatment works, which is already compliant with the Directive, is identified to improve water quality in the river and protect fish.

With regard to the Directive requirement to limit pollution of the Thames Tideway due to intermittent storm water overflows, we consider that the issue of compliance needs further investigation. As a result my officials and the Thames Tideway Strategic Study Steering Group are carrying out further consideration of the issues and possible appropriate measures. These include the proposed long-term interceptor tunnel solution, and possible smaller-scale measures.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken to ensure that inspection maps used by the Rural Payments Agency correspond with the rural land maps under preparation by the Rural Land Registry. [192224]

Alun Michael: Inspection maps have been generated using Rural Land Register data where the applicant has used such data in his or her Area Aid Application in 2004.

Sustainable Food Procurement

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received from the Scottish Executive regarding the sustainable food procurement initiative. [193715]

Alun Michael: Defra officials keep officials of the Scottish Executive and the other devolved Administrations informed of progress on the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative and they provide reciprocal information. We are learning from each other's efforts.

TRANSPORT

Speed Cameras

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had on the location of fixed speed cameras; and if he will make a statement. [192217]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department will shortly issue the "Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the national safety camera programme for England and Wales 2005–06", revising and updating the previous handbook, including the rules and criteria for the location of speed camera sites. Copies will be placed in the Library. The new handbook has been prepared in consultation with the police, local authorities and other agencies involved in the safety camera programme—including the members of the Motorists Forum and the Department's Road Safety Advisory Panel, which bring together the full range of motoring, road safety and other interest groups.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much revenue his Department received from the four Welsh police forces from speeding fines levied by them in the last year for which figures are available. [192222]

Mr. Jamieson: During 2002–03, the last year for which figures are available, the amount of conditional offer fixed penalty fines relating to speed and red light offences detected in Wales under the national safety camera programme, which is overseen by my Department, was £9,873,600. This money is received by magistrates court committees and passed to the Department of Constitutional Affairs. In 2002–03 £7,274,334 was paid to the safety camera partnerships in relation to the installation and operation of safety cameras at approved sites. The remainder of the money accrues, like other fines, to the Consolidated Fund. None of the money is received by my Department.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average revenue received from police forces in England from speeding fines imposed by them was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [192223]

Mr. Jamieson: During the financial year 2002–03, the latest year for which figures are available, the amount of conditional offer fixed penalty fines relating to speed and red light safety offences detected in England under the national safety camera programme, which is overseen by my Department, was £56,906,820. Of this amount, £44,608,933 was paid to the safety camera partnerships in relation to the installation and operation of safety cameras at approved sites.

A358

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to make a statement on the Government's plans to upgrade the A358 road in Somerset; and if he will make a statement. [192125]

Mr. Jamieson: Following the outcome of the recent Spending Review, the Secretary of State is currently reviewing funding allocations across departmental programmes, including road schemes such as those following from the South West Area Multi Modal Study (SWARMMS). The upgrading of the A358 in Somerset is one of two options recommended by that study. The Department aims to make a decision as soon as possible.

Air Navigation Charging

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has consulted the European Regions Airline Association on the proposed reforms to the charging system for airlines for the use of air navigation purposes. [R] [193774]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has set up a Stakeholder Forum specifically to discuss issues arising from European legislation that will impact on airspace users. While the European regions Airline Association has not been directly involved, all UK aviation stakeholders have been encouraged to participate. This Stakeholder Forum has met three times during which the charging issue has been given significant coverage. The Department convened a meeting with stakeholders, on 12 August, specifically to discuss the Single European Sky (SES) proposals for a common charging scheme.

The European regions Airline Association is a member of the SES Industry Consultation Body formed to provide advice to the European Commission on the implementation of the SES.

Aviation (Emissions)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to increase awareness among the population about the link between the aviation industry, carbon emissions and climate change. [193083]

Charlotte Atkins: Both "The Future of Air Transport" and "Future of Transport" White Papers draw attention to aviation's contribution to climate change, and the importance of ensuring that the aviation sector addresses the problem seriously.

"The Future of Transport" White Paper recognises that we will need to broaden the debate to ensure that transport makes its full contribution to reducing total CO_2 emissions. The review of the climate change programme will, over the next few months, consider how carbon savings can best be delivered from transport and across other sectors. A consultation document on the review of the climate change programme is due to be published in November, which will help raise awareness of these issues.

Driving Test

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce measures to ensure that learner drivers have experience of night-time driving before taking the practical driving test. [193831]

Mr. Jamieson: We encourage all learners to experience night-time driving before taking the practical driving test. We support this policy by issuing a copy of the Driver's Record logbook to learners with their provisional licence. This covers all the skills needed to drive safely, including driving in darkness. The record enables learners, their instructors and others who are helping them, to understand what they need to learn and to monitor their progress.

The Department does not consider that further statutory regulation of new drivers is justified at present. We believe the way forward is to improve the education environment for learners so that they have access to a more consistent and better standard of training.

The Department's Driving Standards Agency also operates the Pass-Plus scheme for newly qualified drivers. This voluntary post-test training programme includes night-time driving.

Eurocontrol

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings he has held with UK Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association representatives to discuss the effect of proposed Eurocontrol charges on general and light aviation; and if he will make a statement. [193034]

Charlotte Atkins: Department for Transport officials have met with the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association (AOPA) representatives on several occasions. The Department has set up a Stakeholder Forum specifically to discuss issues arising from European legislation that will impact on airspace users. This Stakeholder Forum has met three times during which the charging issue has been given significant coverage. In addition, the Department convened a meeting with stakeholders, on 12 August, specifically to discuss the Single European Sky proposals for a common charging scheme. Representatives from AOPA have participated in these meetings. The Department has also engaged directly with the general aviation user organisations, including AOPA both in London and in Brussels, to discuss the on-going developments of proposed Single European Sky Implementing Rules and the impact this legislation is likely to have on them.

Hampshire Roads

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of (a) motorway and (b) trunk road in Hampshire are classified as being in disrepair. [193498]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 25 October 2004]: There are no motorways or trunk roads in Hampshire in a state of disrepair. All are currently in a serviceable condition.

Motorways

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which elements of the M6 toll road scheme have incurred public cost, broken down by amount. [192081]

Mr. Jamieson: Under the concession agreement with Midland Expressway Ltd. (MEL) the costs and risks of constructing the M6 Toll fell to MEL. Costs involved in promoting the privately financed scheme fell to central Government.

The total cost to date to the public sector for selecting the private promoter, negotiating the concession agreement and preparing the statutory Orders required is estimated at £15 million.

Further costs to the public purse have resulted from changes to the concession agreement, such as revised engineering standards, during the preparation of the scheme. The present estimate for such changes is £4.55 million.

An agreed sum of £18 million has been paid to MEL to cover the cost of widening the M42 and improvements to the local road network.

Land acquisition/compensation and management costs, currently estimated at between £80 million and £110 million, were initially borne by the public purse are being recovered from the concessionaire.

Navigation Services

Lembit Õpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to charge users of global positioning systems in road vehicles for navigation services; and if he will make a statement. [193030]

Mr. Jamieson: We have no plans to charge drivers for using in-vehicle navigation services.

Off-road Number Plates

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what penalties are in place to penalise companies which break the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's regulations by producing off-road number plates. [194031]

Mr. Jamieson: The penalty for failure to comply with regulations relating to keeping records of the sales of number plates and obtaining prescribed documentation is a fine of up to £1,000, and/or suspension from the register of number plate suppliers scheme for up to five years. These regulations apply to plates that display a registration number and are designed to be fitted to a vehicle or trailer irrespective of whether they are for off-road use.

The penalty for selling a "counterfeit" plate is a fine of up to £2,500. A counterfeit plate is one that purports to be a number plate but is not, e.g. one bearing a non-existent registration number.

Road Haulage (Emissions)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the level of carbon emissions from road haulage in each year from 1990 to date. [193079]

Mr. Jamieson: The main source of data on carbon emissions from road transport is the NAEI (National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory) produced by NETCEN. Their figures for road haulage are as follows.

UK road transport HGVs—emissions of carbon

	Million tonnes carbon
1990	6.1
1991	5.8
1992	5.9
1993	6.0
1994	6.5
1995	6.7
1996	7.1
1997	7.3
1998	7.4
1999	7.3
2000	7.2
2001	7.5
2002	8.0

Ship Inspections

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 6W, on ship inspections, for what reason it is his Department's policy not to comment on details of (a) the number of ships his Department inspects and (b) how many ships have been denied entry, expelled or detained at UK ports. [192121]

Mr. Jamieson: We do not provide information about the security performance of individual ships nor provide details on enforcement policy for very good security reasons.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many ships entering UK ports in September failed to meet the International Ship and Port Facility Code; and how many of these ships were (a) denied entry, (b) expelled from port and (c) detained; [190684]

(2) how many ships were inspected at UK ports in September to assess whether they met International Ship and Port Facility Security Code standards. [190685]

Mr. Jamieson: It is not our policy to comment in detail on ships we inspect for security compliance. However, during September, 17 ships were found to be non-compliant with the requirements of the ISPS Code. It was not appropriate to impose formal Control Measures as there were no serious deficiencies and the failings were quickly rectified by the ship's crews.

Strategic Rail Authority

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the daily cost of the operations of the Strategic Rail Authority is (a) in total and (b) excluding subsidies to train operating companies. [192597]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority's total annual budget for 2004–05 is £3,378 million, £1,143 million of which relates to subsidies to train operating companies. So, daily costs are (a) £9 million in total and (b) £6 million excluding subsidies to train operating companies. The authority's 2004–05 budget for running costs is £89 million, equivalent to £244,000 per day.

Travel-related Accidents

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) fatal and (b) serious travel-related accidents there were in (i) the City of York and (ii) Yorkshire and the Humber in each year since 1992. [192417]

Mr. Jamieson: The available information relates to road accidents, and is shown in the table. Providing the information requested for railways would entail disproportionate costs.

Fatal and serious road accidents in the city of York and Yorkshire and the Humber Government Office Region: 1992 to 2003

	City of York		Yorkshire and the Humber
	Fatal	Serious	Fatal	Serious
1992	4	110	373	3,858
1993	4	84	351	3,459
1994	2	67	294	3,333
1995	3	69	313	3,396
1996	3	59	292	3,220
1997	7	111	295	3,175
1998	4	70	286	3,001
1999	8	106	285	2,922
2000	12	73	288	2,800
2001	6	108	299	2,858
2002	8	103	294	2,893
2003	8	70	296	2,808

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what impact the possible redeployment of UK troops in Iraq will have on the planned increased deployment of UK troops in Afghanistan. [193479]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 25 October 2004]: As I announced to the House on 21 October 2004, Official Report, columns 1035–51, the redeployment of some of our forces in Iraq is limited in scope, time, and space and does not represent a significant permanent additional commitment of forces. It has no impact upon our plans to increase our military commitment in Afghanistan, which is not due to occur until 2006 when the Headquarters of the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps is planned to deploy to lead the International Security Assistance Force.

Black Watch

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department asked (a) Perth and Kinross district council, (b) The Black Watch and (c) other organisations to prepare for a welcome back home parade in Perth in November or December. [193243]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 25 October 2004]: A series of parades had been planned during the period 29 November to 4 December 2004 throughout the Regimental area, including Perth, in order to celebrate 1st Battalion The Black Watch return from Iraq. These parades have now been postponed until the return date of the Regiment is confirmed.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he first received the request from the United States to redeploy UK troops. [193244]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 25 October 2004]: A formal request from the US military in Iraq was made on 10 October 2004 to General Officer Commanding MND(SE), for one UK Battlegroup to deploy in support of coalition operations.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date he expects the Black Watch to end their tour of duty in Iraq. [193245]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The Black Watch will be back in the United Kingdom by Christmas; the precise date cannot be confirmed at this stage for operational reasons.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what instructions have been given to Black Watch soldiers regarding redeployment in Iraq. [193246]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The battle group deploying from MND(SE) consisting predominantly of the 1st Battalion the Black Watch, were issued with an Operational Order on 23 October 2004, the details of which cannot be supplied for reasons of operational security. I am therefore withholding that information under Exemption 1a of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Defence Support Vehicle

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Defence Support Vehicle offered by MAN ERF UK Ltd. will be compatible in joint operations with US forces. [192371]

Mr. Ingram: The Support Vehicle fleet is required to comply with a wide range of standard NATO interfaces, to ensure that the vehicles are compatible with, and capable of operating alongside, all NATO allies including the USA. The evaluation undertaken by the Defence Procurement Agency has demonstrated that the vehicles proposed by the Support Vehicle Preferred Bidder, MAN ERF UK Ltd., fully satisfy this requirement.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Middle East

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Department is taking to combat hunger and malnutrition in the Middle East. [193745]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: World Bank figures show that overall around 15 per cent. of children under the age of five in the Middle East and North Africa show some signs of malnutrition. According to the UN's Human Development Report, around 33 per cent. of Yemen's total population, and 27 per cent. of Iraq's population was undernourished in 2000. Figures for Palestinian refugees are also high.

In Yemen, the only low-income country in the region, DFID's programme is directed at supporting the Government's Poverty Reduction Strategy, which includes social protection. The European Commission's programme of around €15 million a year has as its main element support for long-term food security. Approximately 17 per cent. of all EC funding (including humanitarian) is attributed to DFID's budget.

This year, DFID has contributed £12.35 million to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) for Palestinian refugees, some of which is used for food aid. Since the start of the Intifada in 2000, the European Community Humanitarian Office (ECHO) has provided €118 million of aid to vulnerable Palestinians in the West Bank, Gaza Strip, and elsewhere in the Middle East, assistance that has included food, health care and water and sanitation.

In Iraq, the Public Distribution System (PDS) for food has provided a basic ration for more than 60 per cent. of the population since 1991. After the end of Saddam's regime in 2003, DFID helped to re-establish the PDS. Evidence from a UNDP survey undertaken in spring 2004 suggests that stunting and chronic malnutrition remain unacceptably high. DFID's assistance through organisations such as WHO and UNICEF is helping to address this problem. In the longer term we are working on economic reform in Iraq, including reform of the PDS, which takes into account the needs of the poorest and most vulnerable sections of society. DFID has also been planning a programme of work on social protection mechanisms to complement work on economic reform, which will benefit poor people.

Sudan

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department has taken to meet humanitarian needs in Sudan. [193814]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Since 1991, DFID has contributed over £200 million of humanitarian assistance to Sudan. The humanitarian support that DFID has provided for Sudan has included food, water, sanitation, primary health care and shelter.

DFID's Country Engagement Paper for Sudan includes, as one of its key objectives to meet life-saving and life-sustaining humanitarian, recovery and re-integration needs. We match our humanitarian programme to assessed need, recognising that needs are not likely to reduce in the near future. DFID is working with other donors to ensure that Sudan's needs do not go unnoticed or unsupported. We are therefore providing support through non-governmental organisations, and international organisations like UNICEF; and in areas like Red Sea, Unity and Upper Nile states.

DFID is particularly concerned about the situation in Darfur, where 1.5 million people have been displaced and a further 200,000 have fled to Chad. In response to the crisis in Darfur, we have committed £62.5 million of humanitarian assistance since September 2003.

In addition, DFID is engaged in ongoing high level and operational dialogue with the Government of Sudan and our humanitarian partners on the crisis in Darfur, to improve security, increase access and maximise the effectiveness of the international humanitarian response. We are also lobbying other donors to contribute more to the crisis in Darfur.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Analogue Switch-off

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with (a) video cassette recorder manufacturers and (b) their industry representatives regarding analogue switch-off. [193680]

Estelle Morris: When the analogue signal is switched off, viewers will be able to continue to use their analogue VCRs for recording digital programmes, but will not be able to record one digital channel while watching another.

We are working with key industry stakeholders, including video cassette recorder (VCR) manufacturers and their representatives, as part of the work of the Digital Television Project, to find ways of enabling viewers to have the full functionality which they enjoy with their VCRs today. Already a number of recording products are available which offer this capability.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193985]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not itself entered into any PFI or PPP contracts. The Royal Parks Agency (RPA), which is an executive agency, has entered into three PFI or PPP contracts.

1. Inn the Park at St. James Park. This is a contract to provide new catering equipment and facilities at an existing site in return for the right to run a catering concession.

2. The Boathouse at Regent's Park. Under this contract a new building was supplied by the contractor, and a catering concession was granted to them.

3. Pembroke Lodge at Richmond. The building was restored by the contractor and a catering concession was granted to them.

In all of these arrangements there were no costs to the RPA.

In the Department's public accounts the leasehold of Pembroke Lodge is included within the total for Land and Buildings, at a value of £770,000. The rent which is received under all three arrangements is recorded under income from rents.

Sport Direct

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what services Sport Direct provides in (a) York and (b) Yorkshire. [192425]

Mr. Caborn: The Department is not aware of a programme called Sport Direct that operates in the York and Yorkshire region.

Sports Councils

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the annual Exchequer grant aid awards to the Great Britain Sports Council were in each year since 1974, separately identifying grants to the governing bodies. [194461]

Mr. Caborn: The Exchequer grant in aid figures for the Great Britain Sports Council covering the period 1977–78 to 1996–97 are shown in the following table.

Great Britain Sports Council

1977–78	11,500,000
1978–79	15,200,000
1979–80	15,580,000
1980–81	19,290,000
1981–82	21,030,000
1982–83	28,000,000
1983–84	27,120,000
1984–85	28,600,000
1985–86	30,110,000
1986–87	37,350,000
1987–88	37,150,000
1988–89	38,410,000
1989–90	41,880,000
1990–91	44,750,000
1991–92	46,700,000
1992–93	48,600,000
1993–94	50,600,000
1994–95	48,900,000
1995–96	49,250,000
1996–97	28,170,000

The grant-in-aid figures for 1974–75, 1975–76 and 1976–77 and grants to governing bodies since 1974 are not available.

HEALTH

Community Matrons

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what budget his Department has allocated to introducing community matrons in each of the next three years. [191722]

Dr. Ladyman: Funding for community matrons is included in the increased investment that has been made in the general allocations to primary care trusts.

Work has commenced on the next round of allocations covering the period up to 2007–08, which will also include funding for community matrons.

It is for the national health service locally to determine the resource to be allocated to community matrons.

Dentistry

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1961W, on dentistry, whether his Department has decided not to update the Dental Workforce Review. [192787]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Next year, we will check the assumptions upon which our expansion of the dental workforce are based.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental practices were offering full NHS dental treatment (a) in 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [192203]

Ms Rosie Winterton: At August 1997, there were 8,643 dental practices providing national health service general dental services including emergency services. In August 2004, there were 9,159 practices providing general dental service including emergency services and personal dental services.

Dermatology (GP Contract)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to include dermatology in the general practitioner contract when it is next reviewed. [192741]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The treatment of skin conditions and associated complaints already forms a large part of general practice. Where more specialist dermatology services are required, primary care trusts are able to commission a local enhanced service to meet local needs.

Any future changes to the national quality and outcomes framework (QOF) will be subject to negotiations with the British Medical Association, following recommendations from an independent, United Kingdom-wide expert review panel. The independent expert review panel will consider whether any new disease areas should be added to the QOF. They will be able to receive submissions on proposals to make changes to the current quality framework from any interested party.

Eating Disorders (Treatment)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 142W, on eating disorders, on what evidence his statement that waiting times for treatment for eating disorders are sometimes too long is based. [192788]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This statement is based on feedback from service users and their carers.

Hampshire Hospitals

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals in Hampshire are operating with a shortfall in the operational requirement for accident and emergency staff; and how many employees this shortfall amounts to at each hospital. [193497]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 25 October 2004]: There are no standard rules to follow to say how many doctors, nurses or other staff should be employed in an accident and emergency department. It is for local hospitals and health economies to decide how to deploy staff in ways that will best meet the needs of the population.

Hospital Construction (Lichfield)

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 March 2004, Official Report, column 247W, on Hospital Construction (Lichfield), (1) when he expects construction work to begin on the new hospital at the St Michael's site in Lichfield; when he expects the new hospital to be completed and opened; and what changes there have been in the car parking and future hospital expansion arrangements for the hospital; and if he will make a statement; [192883]

(2) if he will make a statement on the financial shortfall of the Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth Primary Care Trust. [192903]

Dr. Ladyman: Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth Primary Care Trust (PCT) is currently managing a challenging financial position, caused by a number of factors, including the costs of extra clinical activity, the new out of hours service and the new general medical QMS contract. In total these pressures amount to just over £2 million.

In response to this position, the PCT board and Professional Executive Committee are looking at ways in which they can bring the organisation back into financial balance. Every effort will be made to ensure there is no adverse impact on patient services.

Despite this position, the PCT is continuing to meet all its service targets and drive forward improvements in patient care. Work on the new community hospital in Lichfield will not be affected in any way.

I am informed by Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) that construction work is anticipated to commence in March 2005, following the demolition of the buildings onsite. The SHA expects the hospital to be completed at the end of 2006; ready to open at the start of 2007. The car parking arrangements have been planned as previously agreed, with 217 spaces. The space for future hospital expansion is provided within the site as agreed in the outline planning permission.

I am further informed by the SHA that the main reason behind the delay is that the demolition process has been delayed as the local authority now requires listed building consent, which the PCT is applying for. It is not proposing to knock down any listed buildings but understands that this is required as the work will be taking place on the site of a listed building.

Information and Communication Specialists

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialist consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year. [191912]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department spent £5,890,000 on outside information technology and communication specialist consultants and engineers in the 2003–04 financial year.

Ministers' Private Offices

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in his Department have been in each year since 1997. [191389]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The running costs for Ministers' private offices for the financial years 1997–98 to 2003–04 were as follows:

Running costs for Ministers' private offices

	£000
1997–98	1,849
1998–99	2,144
1999–00	2,653
2000–01	2,947
2001–02	2,876
2002–03	2,601
2003–04	3,041

Notes:

1. An additional Minister, the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Health, was appointed during 1999–2000.
2. The data is taken from the Department's accounting systems.
3. The salaries of Ministers themselves are not included.
4. Costs have also increased as a result of additional Parliamentary activity and legislation, resulting in an increase in correspondence and longer working.

Waiting Times

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his latest estimate is of the average waiting time for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients in each quarter from the first quarter of 1997 to third quarter of 2004; and if he will make a statement. [193815]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows provider based median in-patient and out-patient waiting times for England, by each quarter from March 1997 to June 2004. Information for quarter 2 of 2004–05 is not yet available.

		Median (weeks)

SCOTLAND

Civil Service Appointments

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the percentage of (a) females and (b) males was among (i) initial applicants and (ii) successful candidates in each of the promotion and recruitment exercises for posts in the senior civil service and in Band C (formerly Grade 7) in the Scotland Office and the Scottish Office since 1 January 1994. [188679]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999.

There has been no direct recruitment to the Scotland Office and most staff have been assigned on loan from the Scottish Executive. Since 1999, three promotion exercises have been commissioned, in conjunction with the Executive, to fill band C (formerly Grade 7) posts in the Scotland Office. Details of the gender split by initial and successful candidates is as follows:

	Applications		Successful candidates
	Male	Female	Male	Female
1999	4	—	3	—
2000	2	1	1	—
2002	—	2	—	1

There have been no recruitment or promotion exercises to fill senior civil service posts in the Office. All SCS posts have been filled by staff assigned on loan or secondment.

Information on promotion and recruitment of staff in the former Scottish Office prior to 1999 is not held.

Scotland Act 1998 (Modifications of Schedule 5) Order

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why no regulatory impact assessment has been prepared for the draft Scotland Act 1998 (Modifications of Schedule 5) Order 2004, laid before the House on 9 September. [192106]

Mrs. McGuire: The decision not to provide a Regulatory Impact Assessment is in accordance with the guidance "Better Policy Making: A Guide to Regulatory Impact Assessment" issued by the Cabinet Office. The draft Order varies the competence of the Scottish Parliament. The draft Order does not in itself have a direct or indirect impact (whether benefit or cost) on business, charities or the voluntary sector. It would not therefore have any regulatory impact.

Scottish Passenger Rail Franchise

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether primary legislation will be required to devolve responsibilities in connection with the Scottish Passenger Rail Franchise to Ministers of the Scottish Executive. [192107]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government set out its proposals for the devolution of rail services in Scotland in the white paper, "The Future of Rail", in July 2004. The Government will introduce a Railways Bill when parliamentary time allows to provide for those measures that require primary legislation.

Transport Bodies

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultation there has been with Strathclyde Passenger Transport Authority and Strathclyde Passenger Transport Executive in connection with the draft statutory instrument, The Scotland Act 1998 (Modifications of Schedule 5) Order 2004, laid before the House on 9 September, insofar as it relates to the ability of Scottish Ministers to transfer the powers of those bodies, in relation to the provision and regulation of railways, to themselves. [191521]

Mrs. McGuire: The proposal to transfer the rail powers of the Strathclyde Passenger Transport Authority and Executive (SPTA/E) was set out in the Scottish Executive's transport white paper, "Scotland's Transport Future", published in June 2004. As this is a reserved matter, this had been agreed in principle with the Department for Transport beforehand. I understand that there have been a number of meetings between the Scottish Executive and SPTA and SPTE both before and after the publication of this paper at which this proposal was discussed.

If agreed, the draft Order laid before the House on 9 September (and which is also being considered by the Scottish Parliament) will extend the legislative competence of the Scottish Parliament, not the Scottish Ministers. It will then be for the Scottish Parliament to decide, should such measures be put before it, whether or not to transfer the powers of the SPTA/E to the Scottish Ministers.

Tsar Appointments

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tsars have been appointed with responsibilities which cover part of the work of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [191922]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has not appointed any "tsars".

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Carbon Savings

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the cost effectiveness in terms of carbon savings, using Treasury Green Book Guidance for public sector investment, of the (a) Clear Skies Programme, (b) Community Energy Programme, (c) Innovation Programme, (d) Major PV Demonstration Programme and (e) the Scottish Communities and Householder Renewables Initiative. [193828]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The DTI's Clear Skies Programme, Technology Programme and Major PV Demonstration Programme, do not include a target for carbon savings in their objectives.

The main objectives of the DTI's (a) Clear Skies programme are to raise public awareness and support for renewable energy through the installation of household and community scale schemes, as well as making a contribution to carbon savings in the UK.

The programme is subject to annual audits, which monitor the programme against Key Performance Indicators including the number of household and community installations delivered and the growth in the installer base. In addition, on completion of the scheme, a full evaluation is planned which will consider the full impact, including carbon savings and cost effectiveness. This data is not currently available.

To date the programme has committed some £4.3 million to community applications (nearly 230) and some £2.5 million (over 4,200 grants) to household applications.

DEFRA's (b) Community Energy Programme aims to stimulate carbon savings of 0.08 MtC per annum by 2010. The assessment criteria include: social benefits—cost savings for households over the life of the scheme; economic benefits—cost savings for the public sector and public service organisations (other than public sector housing) over the life of the scheme as well as environmental benefits—reductions in carbon emissions over the life of the scheme. It is estimated that the cost effectiveness of lifetime carbon savings (£/tC) for 2003–04 from this programme is £89.

The DTI's (c) Technology Programme supports research, development and innovation and includes new and renewable energy sources (e.g. fuel cells, wind, wave and tidal power, photovoltaics, and energy crops). The annual budget for renewable energy is some £18 million per annum. Collaborative research and development projects encompass a range of risk from high to low levels of innovation, it is therefore difficult to estimate the potential contribution of these project to carbon saving in the future. One of the criteria for selection is "the environmental and social impacts of undertaking the project and how significant are they related to the economic benefits". The newly appointed Technology Strategy Board will in future be responsible for monitoring progress and performance against the Technology Strategy, assessing the effectiveness of the technology priorities and intervention methods used on an appropriate timescale, in order to inform future development of the strategy. The programme will be evaluated in due course.

The main objectives of DTI's (d) Major PV Demonstration Programme are to raise awareness of PV in the UK, generate investment in the PV industry, assure quality installations of PV, generate growth and competition, reduce product/install costs over time, establish a sustainable PV market in the UK, as well as making a contribution to carbon savings in the UK. The programme target is 1,000 domestic/individual systems and at least 140 medium and large-scale non-domestic systems by end of the programme. To date the programme has committed some £14.2 million to large-scale projects (134) and some £4.7 million (700) to small-scale projects. It is planned to evaluate the programme in its third year.

The (e) Scottish Communities and Householder Renewables Initiative is the responsibility of the Scottish Executive.

Combined Heat and Power

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the projection is for good quality combined heat and power capacity in each year from 2005 to 2009. [193827]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The latest projections for CHP capacity were undertaken by Cambridge Econometrics and published in November 2003. These projections, based on policies in place at the time, were 6.4GW in 2005 and 8.1GW in 2010. The figures do not include the impact of the introduction of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme which could add 0.4GW to the 2010 figure, giving a projection of 8.5GW for that year. No estimates were made for the intervening years.

The report can be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/environment/energy_efficiency/chpreport.pdf

Consumers (Definition)

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what definition her Department uses of the term consumer; and whether it includes (a) businesses and (b) public sector organisations. [193963]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The specific definition of a "consumer" will depend on the market being discussed. In general all recipients/users of the particular good or service for the market under consideration will be included in the definition.

Electricity (Rural Supplies)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make it her policy to instruct Ofgem to give a high priority to investment by electricity distribution companies to secure supplies to rural areas in the current price renewal process. [192918]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The distribution price control review, which will produce a revised price control effective from April 2005, is a matter between the independent regulator and the distribution companies. Among its statutory duties under section 3 of the Electricity Act 1989, as substituted by section 13 of the Utilities Act 2000, the regulator shall have regard to the interests of rural communities.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to revise the anti-corruption procedures brought into force by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 1 May; and if she will make a statement. [193170]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: While maintaining its commitment to conform to OECD best practice, ECGD is continuing discussions with customers and representative trade associations with a view to resolving issues surrounding the details and practical application of aspects of its existing bribery and corruption procedures.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions the Export Credits Guarantee Department has made interim arrangements for customers regarding its new anti-corruption procedures since May. [193147]

Mr. Alexander: ECGD's interim arrangements incorporated elements of its previous anti-bribery and corruption procedures that were, themselves, robust. The interim arrangements were consistent with international best practice as defined by the OECD Export Credits Group.

ECGD has applied interim arrangements on four occasions

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which organisations Export Credits Guarantee Department staff have met since January to discuss the anti-corruption procedures brought into force by the ECGD on 1 May; and on how many occasions. [193148]

Mr. Alexander: Officials from ECGD have met with customers and their representative trade associations, including the Society of British Aerospace Companies, the British Exporters Association, the British Bankers Association and the Confederation of British Industry eight times to discuss these procedures.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which organisations (a) she, (b) her Ministers and (c) her Department's staff have met since January to discuss the anti-corruption procedures brought into force by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 1 May; and on how many occasions meetings have been held in each case. [193149]

Mr. Alexander: The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, other Ministers and officials from both ECGD and DTI meet regularly with UK exporters and their trade bodies. This matter has been discussed on a number of occasions when ECGD's customers and their trade bodies including the Society of British Aerospace Companies, the British Exporters Association, the British Bankers Association and the Confederation of British Industry, have been present.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list (a) the companies and (b) the countries for which the Export Credits Guarantee Department has approved interim arrangements in relation to its anti-corruption procedures since May. [193167]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: ECGD's interim arrangements incorporated elements of its previous anti-bribery and corruption procedures that were, themselves, robust. The interim arrangements were consistent with international best practice as defined by the OECD Export Credits Group.

Since May, ECGD approved interim arrangements in respect of three transactions for the supply of Airbus aircraft to buyers in China, El Salvador and the Netherlands. Details of one further transaction cannot be disclosed in accordance with ECGD's normal policy on disclosure in relation to support provided by way of insurance rather than guarantees. Public disclosure could increase the probability of default and thus the chance of a claim.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which organisations have made representations to her Department, regarding the anti-corruption procedures brought into force by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 1 May; and if she will place these representations in the Library. [193168]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The following organisations representing many of ECGD's customers have written with respect to the ECGD bribery and corruption procedures: the Society of British Aerospace Companies, the British Exporters Association, the British Bankers Association, the Confederation of British Industry and the British Consultants and Construction Bureau. Copies of these letters will be placed in the Library.

Informal representations were also made by a number of non-governmental organisations.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the effectiveness of the anti-corruption procedures brought in by the Export Credits Guarantee Department on 1 May. [193166]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: ECGD's procedures to combat bribery and corruption are consistent with international best practice as defined by the OECD Export Credits Group.

Gas Transmissions (Norway)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the interconnector to allow gas transmissions from Norway will be (a) fully constructed and (b) operational. [193845]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The Norwegian operators for the Langeled pipeline aim to complete construction of the southern section of the pipeline, to link the Sleipner platform on the Norwegian Continental Shelf to Easington in Yorkshire, early in summer 2006. They expect to complete commissioning of the pipeline during summer 2006, ready for operational use by 1 October 2006.

Gas/Electricity Supplies

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the projection for electricity plant margin is for the forthcoming winter; what assessment has been made of the contribution mothballed plant could make to the system; and what estimate she has made of the time which would be required to return mothballed plant to the system. [192737]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: National Grid Transco, in their Winter Outlook Report 2004–05, report that the plant margin for the forthcoming winter is 20.2 per cent. A total of 3.6 GW of plant is currently mothballed of which, 1.2 GW would be readily able to return this winter, increasing the margin to 22.4 per cent. For the remaining 2.4 GW, NGT considers 0.8 GW would be unlikely to return for this winter. The other 1.6 GW is considered to be unavailable for this winter.

Hydrogen Power

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much funding the Government has given to research and development projects into hydrogen power in the last year; and how much it is planning to give in each of the next five years. [193286]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department for Trade and Industry does not currently have a specific programme to support industrial collaborative research and development on hydrogen power, but it is likely that hydrogen energy will be one of the areas covered in one or more future calls for proposals under the Technology Programme. Basic university research is supported by the Research Councils, particularly the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC). Under the EPSRC's Supergen Programme (which supports research on sustainable power generation and supply) a UK Sustainable Hydrogen Energy Consortium (UKSHEC) has been established. This is a four year, £3.5 million initiative involving six universities and other organisations including the Policy Studies Institute. It is targeting multi-disciplinary research on the production, distribution and utilisation of hydrogen including socio-economics aspects of the hydrogen economy.

The Department has also commissioned a study to develop a Strategic Framework for Hydrogen Energy Activities in the UK, which is due to report in mid-November.

Innovation and Growth Teams

Mr. Jim Cunningham: o ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which sectors her Department's innovation and growth teams cover. [192572]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 October 2004]: DTI's Innovation and Growth Teams cover the following sectors: Automotive; Software and Digital Content related services; Chemicals; Environmental Goods and Services; Aerospace; Bioscience; and Electronics.

Manufacturing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list her Department's funding given to each manufacturer in the (a) automotive sector and (b) manufacturing sector since 1997; and what the purpose was in each case. [192573]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 October 2004]: This information is not held centrally to this level of detail and can only be compiled at disproportionate cost.

In summary, some £950 million of assistance was offered in England in support of 198,000 jobs between 1997 and 2004. This included some 3,611 RSA grants of which 130 were in the automotive sector.

258 RSA grants worth £150 million were offered in 2003–4, expected to secure £1.2 billion investment, safeguard 14,000 jobs and create 13,000 new jobs. Of these, 11 grants worth a total of £10 million were to the automotive manufacturing sector, expected to secure £81 million of investment and create/safeguard over 2000 jobs.

National Minimum Wage

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many (a) anonymous, (b) named and (c) third party complaints of alleged non-compliance with the national minimum wage were received by the Inland Revenue enforcement agency in each financial year since 1999, including the current financial year to date; how many of the employers complained against in each financial year were found to be not complying with the national minimum wage; and what level of underpayment was identified in relation to the complaints in each financial year; [193621]

(2) how many investigations of employers suspected of non-compliance with the national minimum wage were conducted by the Inland Revenue enforcement agency on the basis of its analysis of tax credit and other data, in each financial year since 1999; how many of the employers investigated were found to be not complying with the national minimum wage; and what the level of underpayment of the national minimum wage identified in relation to such investigations was in each financial year. [193622]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

Since the introduction of the minimum wage on 1 April 1999, the number of worker (named) complaints and third party complaints were as detailed in the table. It would be disproportionately expensive to establish details of the number of anonymous complaints for these years. The figures provided in the following table will include some cases where the complainant has asked to remain anonymous.

	Worker (named) complaints	Third party complaints
1999–2000	3,844	838
2000–01	1,823	542
2001–02	1,353	369
2002–03	1,500	498
2003–04	1,440	529
2004–05 (to 22 October 2004)	736	253

The number of investigations undertaken on the basis of tax credit and other data (excluding named and third party complaints) were as detailed follows.

	Tax credit	Other official sources	Risk assessed
1999–2000	0	0	4,231
2000–01	3,271	0	1,787
2001–02	2,461	381	669
2002–03	3,230	322	961
2003–04	2,839	231	313
2004–05 (to 22 October 2004)	1,840	97	235

Inland Revenue statistics related to numbers of employers found not to be complying with the minimum wage include results from investigations that arose from worker (named) or third party complaints as well as those arising from tax credit and other sources. For this reason we are unable to provide the details requested without incurring a disproportionate cost. Figures are provided in the table which show the percentage of all employers investigated who were found not to be complying and the level of underpayment for that year.

	Percentage non-compliance	Arrears identified (£)
1999–2000	20	1,242,341
2000–01	30	3,035,373
2001–02	36	5,135,799
2002–03	32	3,585,941
2003–04	40	2,558,096
2004–05 (to 22 October 2004)	34	2,326,177

Offshore Industry

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department is taking to support UK firms involved in fabrication projects in the offshore oil and gas industry. [193369]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: DTI's Energy Group is charged with improving the performance of the supply chains in the UK which serve this sector—including Offshore Fabrication. Energy Group works in the main with intermediaries such as regional development agencies and other partner organisations to promote joint initiatives which address aspects of competitiveness. Thus emphasis is placed on the development of skills and technology and the adoption of progressive business practices while support is given for the seeking of opportunities in diversification. Jointly with UK Trade and Investment Energy Group works with individual companies and sectoral organisations to maximise export opportunities.

Post Office

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the compliance of PIN pads in post offices with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [192815]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The compliance of pin pads with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 is a matter for the Post Office Ltd. I understand that in order to address the concerns of those customers who find it difficult to use PIN pads, Post Office Ltd. consulted with the Disability Rights Commission and other representative groups regarding adjustments to make its services as accessible to as many people as possible. As a result a number of modifications have been made to the PIN pads located in post office branches, including the fitting of a plastic cover or key guide over the unused keys at the top of the PIN pad; fixing a tactile marker or "dot" on the central number "5" key; tactile markers that conform to international cash machine standards for the ENTER, CLEAR and CANCEL keys; and louder and different key tones for the function keys.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the implications for the provision of post offices in market towns of the imminent closure of the Evesham post office, situated in a supermarket. [192916]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None. Decisions on post office closures and relocations are operational issues for Post Office Ltd. I understand that the Evesham post office is currently operated by the Co-op, and is located within the Co-op store in the Riverside Shopping Centre. On 13 October the Co-op gave Post Office Ltd. six months notice of its intention to close the Evesham store and are now actively engaged with Post Office Ltd. in locating an alternative site to maintain post office provision in the area.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the £5.4 million in respect of improvement investment grants paid to Post Office Ltd. has been spent in Scotland. [193290]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The £5,448,897 paid to date by the DTI to Post Office Ltd. for investment grant funding as part of the urban reinvention programme includes an element of pre-funding to the company to facilitate prompt payments to sub-postmasters. I understand from Post Office Ltd. that to the end of September 2004, 1453 investment grant applications, including 104 from Scotland, had been approved with £9.4 million committed (£538k in Scotland). Of these applications, 638 grants, totalling £3.6 million had been paid in full, including payments of £195k (5.4 per cent.) to sub-postmasters in Scotland.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the £115 million in respect of compensation payments paid to Post Office Ltd. has been expended in Scotland. [193291]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As at October 2004, compensation payments for sub-postmasters whose post offices are closed under the terms of the urban reinvention programme, total £122,449,842.23. Post Office Ltd. has applied £6,381,779.82 (5.2 per cent. in respect of post offices in Scotland.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the implications of using neighbourhood renewal areas in inner cities as part of the criteria for determining the definition of deprived areas used in the Post Office reinvention programme. [194000]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Implementation of the urban post office network reinvention programme is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to respond direct to my hon. Friend.

Product Labelling

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what requirements there are for mandatory labelling of products for business to business sales, to ensure that the customer is receiving the (a) quantity and (b) quality of the product as advertised. [193966]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are a diverse range of requirements for mandatory labelling of products. These address among other issues information on safety, health and environmental questions, and quantity of the product, composition of certain non-food products, and production standards of certain food products. Details of the full range of requirements are not held by my Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

The quantity and quality of products supplied in business-to-business sales is usually a contractual matter between those parties.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the number of jobs (a) created and (b) safeguarded by regional selective assistance grants in (i) the North East and (ii) Tyne and Wear in the last five years. [193367]

Jacqui Smith: In the last five years to 31 March 2004, offers of Regional Selective Assistance in the North East are expected to create 15,430 new jobs and safeguard 12,743. The estimated figures for Tyne and Wear are 7,891 and 7,287 respectively.

Telephone Marketing

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps (a) she and (b) Ofcom is taking to protect people from silent telephone calls by commercial power diallers; and if she will make a statement. [193585]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is as follows:

(a) My Department introduced the Telephone Preference Service (TPS) scheme, under the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations 1999, which provides protection to subscribers from unsolicited silent calls that are made by commercial power diallers. The Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) has responsibility for the enforcement of the TPS scheme and considers breaches.

(b) The Office of Communications (Ofcom) can take action against persons who persistently misuse networks or services in a way that causes unnecessary annoyance, inconvenience or anxiety, but which falls short of a criminal offence, and Ofcom took action against two companies on 30 April 2004, which were found to have generated unacceptably high levels of unsolicited silent calls.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what legislation is in place to protect (a) directory and (b) ex-directory private telephone owners from (i) domestic and (ii) international automated computer dialled telesales phone calls; and what her assessment is of the effectiveness of this legislation. [193783]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government introduced the Privacy and Electronic Communications (EC Directive) Regulations in 1999, which provides a scheme called the Telephone Preference Service (TPS) scheme. This protects subscribers from unsolicited direct marketing calls, which originate from the UK or are made from abroad on behalf of UK companies, irrespective of whether they are dialled manually or made by an automated computer. The TPS scheme does not differentiate between directory and ex-directory subscribers and provides the same level of protection to all registered subscribers. The Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) has responsibility for the enforcement of the TPS scheme and considers breaches.

The feedback from subscribers is positive in respect of preventing unsolicited direct marketing calls.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 14 September, Official Report, column 1541W, on wind energy, what part of the energy used in wind farm manufacture gives rise to carbon dioxide; and in what amounts. [189693]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Most aspects of the manufacture and installation of a wind turbine gives rise to carbon dioxide, which is the same for any other forms of energy production.

There are no definitive studies which show this figure across wind farm manufacture, however, the British Cement Association, calculated the amount of carbon dioxide produced in a single foundation of a 2.5MW wind turbine.

Approximately 46 tonnes of carbon dioxide is produced for each turbine, but when this is compared with the annual savings of carbon dioxide, the pay back time is three days.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants and assistance are available for the (a) capital installation and (b) operating of wind turbines; and if she will make a statement. [190744]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government's main instrument for supporting the establishment of wind farms is the Renewables Obligation. The Obligation is a market based support mechanism that requires licensed electricity suppliers to provide a specified proportion of their electricity from renewable sources. This provides an assured market for renewable electricity and attracts a premium.

To date, the Government have committed £117 million in grant support towards the capital installation of early offshore windfarm development. No direct grant support is provided for onshore windfarm development except for some small household or community installations under the Clear Skies scheme.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bangladesh

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the backlog is in dealing with entry clearance cases from Dhaka. [193357]

Mr. Mullin: Our High Commission in Dhaka is currently processing non-settlement visa applications that do not require interview within 48 hours. The waiting time for non-settlement applications requiring interview is currently one month with the exception of applications under the Sector Based Scheme (SBS) which are currently taking five months. The SBS allows UK employers in the food processing and hospitality sectors the opportunity to apply for work permits for foreign nationals. Settlement applications requiring interview are also currently taking approximately five months to process.

There are a number of reasons for these delays. So far this year there has been a 31 per cent. rise in visa applications in all categories compared with 2003. Much of this relates to the SBS. Our High Commission in Dhaka received over 8,000 SBS applications this year. As a result of the high number of refusals in this category (64 per cent.), our High Commission have also seen an increase of 129 per cent. this year on the number of appeals they handled in 2003.

UKvisas are considering providing reinforcements for the visa section in Dhaka with the aim of ensuring a swift return to normal standards of service.

Belarus

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the recent elections and referendum in Belarus; what representations he has made to the Belarus Government concerning the elections and referendum, with particular reference to poll rigging and intimidation of voters; when and in what forum he will next raise the situation in Belarus with the UK and European partners; and what recommendations for future action he will make to them; [193463]

(2) if he will make a statement on the constitutional referendum in Belarus that will allow the President to seek unlimited terms in office. [193820]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the declaration on the conduct of the election and referendum in Belarus issued by the EU on 20 October. We fully support this declaration. We are deeply concerned about the issues raised in the preliminary findings and conclusions of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe's (OSCE) Election Observation Mission. Working Groups in Brussels have begun to explore options for action. We will press for a clear response to the conduct of the election and referendum.

The full text of the EU declaration is available on the Presidency's website at: http://www.eu2004.nl/default.asp?CMS_ITEM=6E8D65E8E7E145F5A45D9B9BC18C40EBX1X53350X89

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government is taking to encourage Belarus to (a) work towards becoming a democracy, (b) ensure that the electoral process is not subject to Government interference and (c) ensure that the opposition is not subject to intimidation and violence. [193819]

Mr. MacShane: The Government, together with our EU partners, regularly raises our concerns about democracy and the need for free and fair elections in Belarus with the Belarusian Government, bilaterally through our embassies in Minsk, in multilateral fora including the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) Permanent Council in Vienna, and through public declarations. Several statements were issued through the EU and OSCE in the lead up to the 17 October elections. The UK contributed three Long Term Observers, 30 Short Term Observers and the Deputy Head of Mission to the OSCE's International Election Observation Mission (IEOM). We fully support the EU declaration of 20 October condemning the conduct of the 17 October parliamentary elections and the violent actions taken by the Belarusian authorities against the opposition. We will now press Belarus to implement the recommendations in the OSCE/IEOM's final election report, which will be published shortly. We will also look to bolster our support for civil society and to continue deepening our links with NGOs and opposition parties.

Botswana

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Government of Botswana regarding the Kalahari Basarwa Bushmen; [192749]

(2) what representations he has received regarding the Kalahari Basarwa Bushmen; and if he will make a statement. [192750]

Mr. Mullin: I discussed the issue of the Basarwa with President Mogae last December when we met at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Abuja. The hon. Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Jones) discussed the Basarwa with me on 26 February.

Through the High Commission in Gaborone we remain in contact with interested members of civil society as well as with the Government of Botswana over the situation of the Kalahari Basarwa.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will reply to the letter to him dated 14 September from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Sundus Salman. [192537]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary replied on 4 October.

Cyprus

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government deemed the paper published by the Republic of Cyprus on 15 March 2004 to contain acceptable proposals for security in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [190445]

Mr. MacShane: There were many proposals from both sides on security issues in the lead up to the final stage of negotiations. The British Government supports the UN's judgment that the final version of the comprehensive settlement plan was a carefully balanced compromise.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the developments in the Democratic Republic of the Congo since January; and if he will make a statement. [193390]

Mr. Mullin: The peace process remains fragile and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) continues to face considerable political and economic challenges. The Transitional Government in the DRC is gradually extending its authority, and the country is making some progress towards elections, scheduled to be held in June 2005.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the alleged involvement of other African countries in the civil war in the Democratic Republic of the Congo from 1998 to 2003; and if he will make a statement. [193391]

Mr. Mullin: The involvement of several African countries during the war in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) between 1998 and 2003 is well documented. Troops from Angola, Burundi, Chad, Namibia, Rwanda, Uganda and Zimbabwe were present in the DRC during this period.

All these countries had withdrawn their troops by June 2003.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the International Rescue Committee's mortality study on the conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, published on 8 April; and if he will make a statement. [193392]

Mr. Mullin: This report highlighted the terrible human cost of the war in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). We welcomed its recommendations, which were in line with Government efforts to work with the UN and South Africa to install the Congolese Transitional Government in Kinshasa and for all foreign troops to withdraw as agreed in the Lusaka Peace Accord.

The UK continues to play its part in the international effort to bring long-term peace to the DRC.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to help resolve the situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and if he will make a statement. [193393]

Mr. Mullin: We remain in close contact with regional and international partners on how best to support the peace process in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). The British ambassador in DRC is a member of the international committee, established as part of the peace agreement, to support the transition process.

The UK supported UN Security Council Resolution 1565, which authorised the deployment of a further 5,900 military personnel to the UN Mission (MONUC), and, we believe, will help improve MONUC's effectiveness, particularly in Eastern DRC. We also support the International Conference on the Great Lakes and the establishment of a Joint Verification Mechanism for the Rwanda/DRC border.

Egypt

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the authorities in Egypt since the explosions in Taba and Nuweiba. [193744]

Mr. Rammell: Immediately after the event my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary condemned the attacks in Taba and Nuweiba and expressed his condolences to the Egyptian Government. A member of the embassy's staff was at the scene of the bomb in Taba within an hour of the attack, and the embassy crisis response team arrived on site early the following morning to offer assistance to British nationals.

The embassy have been in constant touch with the Egyptian authorities since the attacks. Our ambassador has met with all those Ministers responsible for handling the search and rescue effort and investigating the attack. We have offered our co-operation and maintained a close dialogue with the Egyptian authorities.

Eritrea

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of evangelical and pentecostal churches which have been closed down in Eritrea since 21 May 2002. [193581]

Mr. Mullin: Under legislation introduced in May 2002, members of small religious groups cannot meet in their churches unless they have completed a registration process. To date, none have completed this process but the Government are in discussions with some groups (including the evangelical and pentecostal churches) and has not taken any official action against them. However, we remain concerned at reports of the arrest and detention of individuals as a result of their religious beliefs and will continue to raise our concerns at every suitable opportunity.

FCO Arabic Speakers

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many fully trained Arabic speakers work for the Foreign Office. [192889]

Mr. Alexander: 108 officers have a current Foreign and Commonwealth Office qualification in Arabic. A number of other officers will take examinations in the next year.

Former Soviet Republics

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the Governments of (a) Kyrgyzstan, (b) Tajikistan, (c) Uzbekistan and (d) Turkmenistan on illegal trade of radioactive materials produced by the former Soviet Union. [192055]

Mr. MacShane: There have been no recent discussions with the Governments of Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan or Turkmenistan on illegal trade of radioactive materials produced by the former Soviet Union. However, the Government has pledged up to $750 million over 10 years from 2002 to the Global Partnership against the spread of weapons and materials of mass destruction, which aims to secure and make safe the legacy of the former Soviet Union's weapons programme.

Iraq

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contingency preparations have been made by the coalition to provide for refugees that may flee an operation to bring Fallujah back under Iraqi Government control; and if he will make a statement. [193482]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 25 October 2004]: In the case of any military operations in Fallujah this would be a matter for the Iraqi Interim Government (IIG) and the Multi-National Force (MNF). The MNF seeks at all times to minimise the impact of any military action on civilians. MNF operations always take into account the likely humanitarian consequences of military operations. In undertaking military operations the MNF and Iraq Security Forces aim to return areas of Iraq to IIG control, providing a normal life to Iraqi civilians, thus creating better conditions for rapid progress on reconstruction and humanitarian efforts.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) representations he has made to and (b) assurances he has received from the United States that, should they mount an operation to bring Fallujah under Iraqi Government control, there are plans in place to fulfil the Coalition's obligations to civilians affected by the operation under Article 16 of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in time of war; and if he will make a statement. [193481]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The UK and US are no longer occupying powers and therefore the 4th Geneva Convention does not apply. Nonetheless, the Multi-National Force (MNF) seeks at all times to minimise the impact of any military action on innocent civilians and, of course, to avoid civilian casualties. The bulk of their duty involves protecting civilians. In undertaking military operations the MNF and Iraq Security Forces aim to return areas of Iraq to Iraqi Interim Government control, providing a normal life to Iraqi civilians, thus creating better conditions for rapid progress on reconstruction and humanitarian efforts.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in 2002, (a) a Minister in the Foreign Office and (b) an ambassador indicated to the United States Administration that the UK Government backed regime change in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [193646]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: In 2002, there were numerous discussions and exchanges on Iraq between the US Administration and UK officials, including Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers and ambassadors. The basis of our argument throughout that period was that we had to go back to the UN and we had to enforce Iraq's compliance with UN resolutions. We accepted that that might entail regime change, although that was not our objective. We went back to the Security Council in November 2002 to get a further resolution, UNSCR 1441, which authorised the use of force for this purpose. As a result of Saddam Hussein's persistent and continuing failure to comply with Iraq's UN obligations (which, as the recent Iraq Survey Group report confirms, continued right up until the launch of military action), the Government concluded in March 2003 that it was necessary to use force to remove Saddam Hussein from power in order to secure Iraqi compliance.

Latvia

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the ease of access for a British citizen on holiday in Latvia to the Latvian judicial system if he or she should be a victim of crime. [193133]

Mr. Mullin: Legislation provides all victims of crime with the same level of judicial protection in Latvia. Generally, Latvian law prescribes that any crime should be investigated fully. Our Consular staff maintain close contact with the Latvian authorities and are informed when a British citizen becomes a victim of crime. Our staff provide a range of consular assistance to ensure the needs of the victim are met and any welfare issues addressed.

In addition, the British embassy in Latvia is able to make inquiries on behalf of British citizens if they feel they are not getting the correct information from police or other authorities. However, our experience to date is the police accept complaints immediately and act where necessary.

Overseas Students

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many overseas students who have applied to study at universities in the UK have yet to be granted a visa to enter the country. [193135]

Mr. Mullin: UKvisas maintains a record of the number of student applications and refusals for each financial year. This is not broken down into categories of application, so there is no way of determining how many prospective university students have yet to be granted a visa to enter the country.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the British High Commissioner in Bangladesh concerning the amount of funding a student is required to have before a visa is granted to study in the United Kingdom; and what review of this requirement is planned. [193490]

Mr. Mullin: There is no set amount of money that overseas students need to show that they have available in order to gain entry clearance to the UK. The Immigration Rules state that applicants must be able to show that they have sufficient funds to pay for their course and support themselves and any accompanying dependants without working or recourse to public funds. While there is provision for students to take employment during vacations or spare time, no account may be taken of any prospective earnings from that employment in assessing the ability of a student to meet the maintenance requirement.

The British Council has provided our High Commission in Dhaka with estimations for student living costs in the UK. They estimated costs (excluding fees) for 2002–03 to be £768 per calendar month (£6,912 for the academic year; which is a nine-month period) for a course in London and £600 per calendar month (£5,400 for the academic year) for a course outside London.

Offer letters from educational establishments often contain an estimated cost for living expenses and the ECO can also use these figures as a guide.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on changes in the number of people arriving from outside the UK on student visas between 2002 and 2003. [192399]

Mr. Mullin: During the financial year 2002–03 there was a total of 128,144 student visas issued world-wide. The equivalent figure for the financial year 2003–04 has not yet been finalised, but is estimated to be around 146,000, an increase of about 14 per cent.

Pakistan

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Pakistani authorities regarding their recent testing of a medium-range nuclear-capable missile. [192704]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Moray (Angus Robertson) on 21 October 2004, Official Report, columns 900–01W.

Sudan

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the levels of sexual violence in the Darfur region of Sudan. [193914]

Mr. Mullin: We remain extremely concerned about sexual violence in Darfur. Displaced people remain vulnerable to attack and the numbers of officially reported rape cases may belie the true scale of abuse.

The UK has repeatedly made clear to the Government of Sudan that they must act now to improve the security situation, to protect civilians from such atrocities and to ensure that those guilty of crimes are brought to justice. We are supporting the expanded AU mission and are providing support to the UN and other agencies, such as the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and International Committee of the Red Cross, to enhance civilian protection.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Sudanese Liberation Army and (b) the Justice and Equality Movement in Darfur. [193006]

Mr. Mullin: Officials from the British embassy in Khartoum and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are in regular contact with the Sudan Liberation Movement/Army and the Justice and Equality Movement, both at the peace talks in Abuja and Addis Ababa, and in Sudan. On 13 October, I met the Sudan Liberation Movement/Army leadership.

Turkey

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received regarding negotiations for Turkish accession to the EU; and if he will make a statement. [193506]

Mr. MacShane: Turkey's EU candidacy is a frequent subject of discussion between my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and EU partners and Turkey. Recently, he discussed this with the Turkish Foreign Minister Abdullah Gul, during his visit to Ankara on 7 October, and during the visit to the UK on 19 October of the German Foreign Minister Joschka Fischer. On these and other occasions, he reaffirmed the support of the UK Government for Turkey's EU candidacy. Following the European Commission recommendation that Turkey has fulfilled the Copenhagen political criteria, the UK Government believes that the December European Council should now agree to open negotiations without delay.

Iran

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions his Department has had with the Iranian Government regarding uranium enrichment. [193314]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 26 October 2004]: Senior officials from the UK, France and Germany had discussions with their Iranian counterparts in Vienna on 21 October.

They agreed to meet again shortly for further discussions with a view to identifying an agreed way forward through diplomatic means.

PRIME MINISTER

Bush Doctrine

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister whether he has made recent representations to President Bush about the (a) legality and (b) practicality of the Bush Doctrine; and whether he has discussed with him alternative means of dealing with potential threats from rogue states. [193933]

The Prime Minister: I am in regular discussions with President Bush on a wide range of issues, including our shared imperative of tackling terrorism and other security matters.

Iraq

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when and from whom in the Iraqi Interim Government he first received a request for British troops to be moved from their present duties in Southern Iraq to unspecified positions south of Baghdad; [192942]

(2) when and with whom in the US Administration he last discussed the terms of engagement for the deployment of British troops south of Baghdad; [192965]

(3) when and with whom in the Iraqi Interim Government he last discussed the terms of engagement for the deployment of British troops south of Baghdad. [192966]

The Prime Minister: As I made clear during Prime Minister's questions on Wednesday 20 October, this request was a military request made by the American military to the British military. This deployment is a part of the process of creating the right conditions for the Iraqi elections to take place in January. We share with the Iraqi Interim Government and with our coalition partners a common goal of creating a secure and stable Iraq.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) when and with whom in the US Administration he last discussed the proposed military assault on Fallujah; [192954]

(2) when and with whom in the Iraqi Interim Government he last discussed the proposed military assault on Fallujah. [192955]

The Prime Minister: The Government and UK Military Commanders are engaged in constant dialogue with the US and Iraqi Government on a range of operations in Iraq. Disclosing details would endanger those operations.

United Nations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister whether he plans to bring forward proposals to allow the United Nations a right of action against sovereign states which pose (a) a potential threat to international peace and security and (b) an actual or imminent risk of humanitarian catastrophe or violations of basic human rights. [193934]

The Prime Minister: The UN Secretary-General has set up a High Level Panel to recommend improvements in the UN's response to threats to international peace and security, including in these areas. The UK has put forward ideas to the Panel which encourage earlier collective action to deal with threats to peace and security and with humanitarian emergencies. These proposals are set out in the Command Paper "The United Kingdom in the United Nations" (Cm 6325) presented to Parliament on 21 October 2004.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Economy

6. Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the performance of the Northern Ireland economy. [193195]

Mr. Gardiner: The Northern Ireland economy has performed well over recent years. Employment is at record levels while the unemployment rate is currently at the lowest recorded level ever at 4.7 per cent. The latest available figures show that annual growth in the Northern Ireland economy was the second highest of the UK regions.

Unemployment

7. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the levels of unemployment in Northern Ireland in (a) 1997 and (b) 2004. [193196]

Mr. Gardiner: The latest available data, for the period June to August, shows that unemployment in Northern Ireland has fallen from 61,000 to 35,000 between 1997 and 2004.

The current unemployment rate of 4.7 per cent. compares favourably to the rate of 8.1 per cent. recorded during the same period in 1997.

Decommissioning

8. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the decommissioning of illegally held weapons and explosives. [193197]

Mr. Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Anniesland (John Robertson).

Peace Process

9. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Leeds Castle talks. [193198]

Mr. Paul Murphy: A large measure of progress was made on the key points at Leeds Castle and we are reflecting now on how to finalise the outstanding institutional issues. As the Prime Minister has said, we cannot allow matters to drift.

Water Rates

10. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the timetable for the introduction of water rates in Northern Ireland has been changed; and if he will make a statement. [193199]

Mr. Spellar: I announced my proposals for the basis on which household water and sewerage charges will be set and also changes to the current arrangements for charging non-domestic customers on 13 September 2004. The announcement said that the new charges would be phased in from 2006–07, or as soon as practicable thereafter.

Implementation depends on a range of practical factors, but that target remains our aim.

Paramilitary Activity

11. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the current level of punishment beatings and shootings. [193200]

Mr. Pearson: The Government remain concerned at the level of control exercised by both loyalist and republican paramilitary organisations within their communities. So far this year (to 17 October) there have been 192 paramilitary attacks, 48 fewer than for the same period last year. Loyalists have been responsible for carrying out almost three times as many attacks as republicans—77 shootings and 65 assaults, compared to 22 shootings and 28 assaults by republicans. The Independent Monitoring Commission is due to report on this area shortly.

Racism

12. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to combat racism in Northern Ireland. [193201]

Mr. Spellar: The Government have frequently put on record our abhorrence of all forms of intolerance and racism. We are committed to eradicating such manifestations of hatred, whether based on racism or based on sectarianism and are developing a coordinated response to the problem in Northern Ireland. The issues raised by racism are issues for all sections of society in Northern Ireland and in expressing abhorrence of racism, all of us must avoid the temptation to demonise entire areas and communities.

It would be an act of prejudice itself to stereotype people because of where they live or because of their community background. The Belfast Agreement provides a unique opportunity to bring about a society which will recognise the full and equal legitimacy and worth of identities, senses of allegiance and ethos of all sections of the community in Northern Ireland.

The final version of the Race Equality Strategy (which takes account of extensive consultation with all sections of NI society) will be published by the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister soon and specific actions will be included in a detailed implementation plan developed in line with the strategy.

The Government's Community Safety Strategy, which is being implemented through the Community Safety Unit of the Northern Ireland Office, identified offences motivated by prejudice and hatred as a central theme in making Northern Ireland a safer place for all its citizens. Specifically, the strategy seeks to reduce the levels of crime motivated by sectarianism, and to promote and enhance the safety of minority ethnic residents.

Currently, the unit is facilitating a working group of voluntary and statutory organisations which aims to establish a clear framework and operational system for the recording and monitoring of a number of hate crimes. These will include sectarian, racist and homophobic incidents, as well as those relating to disability. An agreed framework is now in place with implementation intended by December 2004. Within its Community Safety grant programme, the Challenge Competition, the unit has also provided funding towards four projects which have a central theme of countering prejudice and hatred to a total value of £273,255.

Enforcement action by Police Service of Northern Ireland will continue to be the key to tackling such attacks. This will be accompanied by a range of actions by the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments. As well as new legislative proposals, these will include measures on education, housing, health and social policy issues.

Legislation for Northern Ireland, aimed at tackling racially motivated offences is contained in the Criminal Justice (No. 2) Order 2004, commenced on 28 September 2004 and will require sentencers, where offences are aggravated by such hostility, to treat racial and religious aggravation as an aggravating factor when sentencing. The legislation will also cover offences motivated by hatred of sexual orientation and disability. The proposals will also increase maximum sentences available for certain specified, mainly violent offences including where racial, religious or sexual aggravation is proven.

Employment (Belfast)

13. Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government are taking to attract jobs to East Belfast. [193202]

Mr. Gardiner: Invest NI initiatives which can help attract jobs to East Belfast include stimulating new foreign investment, helping existing companies develop key capabilities and encouraging entrepreneurship through increased new business starts. Invest NI's 104 client companies in the constituency employ around 10,000 people and its programmes have provided £17.9 million support towards almost £68 million investment in these companies since April 2002.

Crime

14. Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on levels of non-paramilitary crime in Northern Ireland. [193203]

Mr. Pearson: Recorded crime statistics produced by the Police Service of Northern Ireland do not distinguish between paramilitary and non-paramilitary crime. There is no simple dichotomy between a paramilitary and a non-paramilitary crime and it would be impossible to authoritatively conclude whether every crime was or was not linked to paramilitary organisations.

What I can say is that there were a total of 127,953 offences recorded in Northern Ireland during 2003–04 compared with 142,496 in 2003. This represents a decrease of 10.2 per cent. The overall clearance rate was 27.4 per cent., 4.4 per cent. higher than that achieved in the previous year.

Police figures released for the period April to September 2004 show 6,608 fewer recorded offences, a decrease of 10.2 per cent. on the same period last year. This is a result of excellent proactive police work and community involvement right across Northern Ireland. I am confident that this downward trend will continue as long as the police and communities work together to make Northern Ireland a safer place for all.

Fly-tipping

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were convicted of illegal fly-tipping in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; what penalties are available for those convicted of illegal fly-tipping; and what steps he is taking to prevent illegal fly-tipping. [193557]

Angela Smith: For the four years 1999–2003, district councils held responsibility for prosecuting cases where waste was fly-tipped. The Department of the Environment has asked district councils to supply data on convictions during this period. I will write to the hon. Lady when this is available.

On 19 December 2003, the responsibility for such prosecutions transferred to the Department, although powers to require the removal of fly-tipped waste were retained by district councils. Since this date, the Department's Environment and Heritage Service has investigated many cases where waste has been illegally deposited. There are currently 129 cases under investigation, 18 being considered by the Public Prosecution Service and one case where a conviction has been obtained.

Penalties for conviction are dependent on where the case is heard. Currently the maximum penalty available is up to six months' imprisonment or a fine of up to £20,000, or both, for cases heard in the magistrates court; or up to two years' imprisonment and/or an unlimited fine for cases heard in the Crown court.

To combat illegal waste disposal, the Department of the Environment has developed a specialised team, which works closely with district councils, the Police Service of Northern Ireland, Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland, and HM Customs. It has produced guidance for district councils and it enforces the regulations under Registration of Carriers and Duty of Care.

Hazardous Waste

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 674W, on hazardous waste, why incidences of illegally disposed special waste were not recorded before 2002. [193724]

Angela Smith: Under the Special Waste Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1998, the movement of special waste is monitored by means of a consignment note which accompanies the waste from its point of arising to its destination. The Department of the Environment retains records for the movement of special waste including the subsequent movement of any reported illegally deposited waste. These records are available for all movements of special waste from September 1998 and were consolidated into a database from October 2001. Records prior to October 2001 date are not therefore readily available and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to prevent the illegal disposal of special waste in Northern Ireland; what penalties are available for those caught illegally disposing special waste in Northern Ireland; and how many convictions there have been since 2002 for the illegal disposal of special waste. [193742]

Angela Smith: The Department of the Environment administers and enforces the Special Waste Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1998 ("the 1998 Regulations") which control the movement of special waste throughout Northern Ireland. The Department audits and inspects those involved in the movement of special waste, including the producers, the waste carriers and the facilities receiving the waste, to ensure compliance with the regulations. The Department also works with others to promote compliance and awareness among those involved in the chain of special waste.

There are a number of pieces of legislation that are applicable to the illegal disposal of special waste. A person who commits an offence under the 1998 Regulations shall be liable, on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale (presently £5,000); or, on conviction on indictment, to a fine or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to both. The penalties are applicable for each offence.

Article 4 of the Waste and Contaminated Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 ("the 1997 Order") relates to the unauthorised or harmful disposal of waste. A person guilty of an offence under this article in relation to special waste shall be liable, on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 6 months or to a fine not exceeding £20,000 or to both; or, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both. Also, under Article 5 of the 1997 Order, which relates to 'duty of care' requirements, any person failing to comply with certain requirements therein shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (presently £5,000); and, on conviction on indictment, to a fine. Again, these penalties are applicable for each offence.

There has been one conviction since 2002, and there are several cases pending.

Hospital-acquired Infections

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the infection control strategy used to combat the incidence of MRSA and other healthcare-acquired infections in Northern Ireland. [193743]

Angela Smith: The 1990 GB guidelines for combating MRSA set out in the working party report headed by Dr. G. Duckworth, revised in 1998, are followed in Northern Ireland. In April 2000 the Department issued guidance (HSS (MD) 9/2000), entitled "The Management and Control of Hospital Infection", to the Health and Personal Social Services in Northern Ireland setting out a programme of action for the HPSS. This sought to strengthen the prevention and control of infection in hospital, secure appropriate health care services for patients with infection, improve surveillance of hospital infection and to monitor and optimise antimicrobial prescribing.

The Department has been undertaking a range of activities to reduce the incidence of MRSA and other healthcare-acquired infections and has most recently announced the setting up of a working group under the chairmanship of the Chief Medical Officer to produce an infection control strategy whose key aim will be the prevention and control of the spread of infection in hospitals and other health care settings.

IT Access

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on access for health visitors and community nurses in the Province to (a) computers, (b) the internet and (c) IT training. [192870]

Angela Smith: There are a number of initiatives aimed at increasing access to Information and Communications Technology facilities for health and social care professionals working in the community, including health visitors and community nurses. Wherever access to ICT is provided, this includes, if appropriate, access to internet services. There is no central information on provision of ICT facilities specifically for health visitors and community nurses.

Training in the use of ICT is provided by trusts, who are encouraged to make use of computer-based training facilities, including access to the European Computer Driving Licence training facilities used by the NHS in England.

The Person-centred Community Information System project will provide ICT services for all community health and social care professionals in the next three years. This project includes provision of technology and use of internet services to support care professionals through training in ICT and professional information services.

Public Appointments

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on public appointments for which his Department is responsible and compliance with (a) equal opportunities and (b) fair employment legislation. [174040]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Appointments to the boards of non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) for the Northern Ireland Administration and the Northern Ireland Office are governed by the Codes of Practice of the Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland and Great Britain respectively. The overriding principle is that selection must be based on merit, through the well informed choice of individuals who, through their abilities, experience and qualities match the needs of the body in question. The Commissioner's Codes also require departments to ensure their processes for making appointments comply with the statutory duty under section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, to have due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity. The Commissioner's principles are routinely applied to all appointments in Northern Ireland by the departments and the Northern Ireland Office.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Educational and Skills what advice he gives to social services departments on how to deal with families who have individuals suffering from attention deficit hyperactivity disorder [192241]

Margaret Hodge: The National Service Framework for Children, Young People and Maternity Services published in September, sets national standards for children's health and social care. Standard 9, of the framework "The Mental Health and Psychological Well-being of Children and Young People", states that all children and young people, from birth to their 18th birthday, who have mental health problems and disorders such as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) have access to timely, integrated, high quality, multi-disciplinary mental health services to ensure effective assessment, treatment, support and advice, for them and their families.

Environmental Measures (Schools)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what action his Department is taking to ensure that schools incorporate sustainable and environmental measures into their school buildings as part of the capital investment in school buildings; [194040]

(2) if his Department will ensure that sufficient funding is available for schools to incorporate sustainable and environmental measures into their school buildings as part of the capital investment in school buildings; [194041]

(3) what steps his Department is taking to support the incorporation of sustainable and environmental measures into school buildings; [194042]

(4) how much has been provided by his Department for capital investment in school buildings in each of the last 10 years; and how much of this total was invested in sustainable and environmental measures. [194043]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My Department is committed to sustainable development in education. Our Sustainable Development Action Plan for Education and Skills, launched in September 2003, sets out the work we are doing, and I am placing copies in the House Library. Action on capital investment and school buildings includes the production of a new Building Research Establishment Environmental Assessment Method (BREEAM) for schools, which we are launching today at the Environment Agency's annual conference in Birmingham. We also promote good practice through building bulletins, which explain the application of building regulations to schools, demonstration projects such as our 'classrooms of the future' and 'exemplar schools of the future', and the development of design quality indicators.

This Department's support for capital investment in school buildings, including PFI credits, is £4.5 billion this year, 2004–05. Capital support, including PFI credits and ICT, will rise to £5.5 billion in 2005–06 and then, following the Spending Review 2004, by £750 million to £6.3 billion in 2007–08. The figures for school buildings, including PFI credits, over the last 10 years are as follows:

	£ million
1994–95	613
1995–96	625
1996–97	683
1997–98	755
1998–99	887
1999–2000	1,040
2000–01	1,824
2001–02	1,828
2002–03	2,156

We do not ring-fence our support for environmental and sustainable measures, and do not collect information about how resources are invested locally. But these are substantial amounts that will allow all new schools to aim for at least a 'very good' rating under BREEAM, and for existing schools to improve their sustainability.

GCSE Results

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the lowest mark needed to obtain (a) GCSE mathematics, (b) GCSE English and (c) GCSE physics at (i) A grade, (ii) C grade and (iii) pass has been in each year from 1995 to 2004; and if he will make a statement. [192135]

Mr. Miliband: This information is the responsibility of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. We have requested that they place the information in the House of Commons Library.

Higher Education

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of school leavers domiciled in each local education authority area in England entered higher education in the UK in each year since 1997. [193518]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1806W, which gave the latest available figures up to 2003. Data for 2004 will not be available until February 2005.

Home Education

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils of school age were educated at home in each age group in (a) Somerset and (b) Taunton in each year since 1997. [193873]

Mr. Miliband: The available information is shown in the table.

The available figures record for each local education authority the number of pupils not in school and being otherwise educated under arrangements made by the authority. As well as covering pupils taught at home, this includes but does not separately identify, traveller children and asylum seekers at further education colleges or with voluntary providers. It does not however include pupils who are being educated at home through parental choice and independent of local education authority arrangements.

Schools (Hounslow)

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many new buildings have been built in Hounslow schools since 2001. [192586]

Mr. Miliband: We do not hold this information. The bulk of capital funding is allocated to local authorities and schools by formula so that they can decide their priorities for investment in line with locally decided asset management plans. Records of how this funding is used should therefore be held locally.

Capital resources allocated to Hounslow and its schools amounted to £36.1 million in 2003–04 (including £25.7 million of PFI credits), and £9.5 million this year, 2004–05.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193983]

Mr. Miliband: The Department does not have any PFIs. Schools PFI projects are based on contractual agreements reached between local education authorities (LEAs) and private contractors. The Department gives support to LEAs in securing PFI projects for schools, but enters into no PFI arrangements itself.

School Milk

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Dorset and North Poole (Mrs. Brooke) on 6 February 2004, Official Report, column 1118W, on school milk, if he will list those education authorities in England which make use of the EU subsidy to provide school milk. [192117]

Alun Michael: I have been asked to reply.

The following list gives the names of all local authorities in England that participated in the EU school milk subsidy scheme during the last 12 months.

Student Visas

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of changes in the number of people arriving from outside the UK on student visas in 2003 on the resources available to the higher education sector; [192396]

(2) if he will make a statement on the impact of recent changes in the rejection rate for student visa applications on academic disciplines in the higher education sector; [192397]

(3) what representations he has made to the Foreign Secretary on the predicted impact of charges for applications and extensions to student visas on the number of overseas students attending higher education institutions in the UK. [192398]

Dr. Howells: My Department is not able to assess the direct effect of changes to the visa arrangements on either the resources consequently available to higher education institutions, or on the numbers of international students choosing particular higher education courses. Data on the number of students in higher education in 2003–04 and the current academic year are not yet available. While no formal representations have been made to the Foreign Secretary on the proposed charges for applications to extend leave to remain in the UK, officials across government are working together to consider the possible impacts, and to ensure they are not unduly prohibitive for international students.

University Access/Admissions

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he expects the Director General of the Office for Fair Access to commission research into access to university places; and whether he would expect such research to be published. [193839]

Dr. Howells: It is entirely a matter for the Director whether he commissions any research and what he publishes. Any report which the Director provides for the Secretary of State will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to publish any further guidance which he gives to the Director General of the Office for Fair Access. [193840]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State has sent a letter of guidance to the Director of Fair Access to Higher Education, Sir Martin Harris, and copies are available in the House of Commons Library. This letter was published in draft in July. Any further statutory guidance will also be published.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to meet the Director General of the Office for Fair Access to Universities. [193270]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State hopes to meet Sir Martin Harris, the Director of Fair Access to Higher Education, in the near future.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills where he expects the Office of Fair Access to be located. [193271]

Dr. Howells: The Office for Fair Access will be co-located with HEFCE in Bristol initially.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Office of Fair Access will be able to consider complaints of unfairness and discrimination from (a) students and (b) schools. [193272]

Dr. Howells: The Office for Fair Access can consider complaints from any interested party relating to a possible breach of an institution's access agreement.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what targets he expects the Office of Fair Access to set universities; and what criteria he expects the Office of Fair Access to use in determining whether universities are allowed to charge fees. [193273]

Dr. Howells: The Office for Fair Access will not set targets for institutions. Institutions will decide themselves what milestones they will include in their access agreements, as a measure of success. We expect the Director of Fair Access to issue guidance to institutions on access agreements shortly.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what factors led him to supplement the draft letter of statutory guidance to the Director of the Office of Fair Access (OFFA) issued during the passage of the Higher Education Act 2004 with paragraph 9.5 of the new draft letter of statutory guidance to the Director of OFFA issued on 14 July; and whether he expects (a) type of school and (b) socio-economic background to be included in the milestones relating to university admission referred to in paragraph 9.5. [193350]

Dr. Howells: The draft letter of statutory guidance was revised in the light of the parliamentary debates on the Higher Education Bill and discussions with the sector and other interested parties. As we have always made clear, institutions will set their own milestones.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Royal Security

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the percentage apportionments of costs were between the United Kingdom and (a) Australia, (b) Canada and (c) New Zealand for providing security on the occasion of the most recent visit, in each case, by (i) Her Majesty the Queen and (ii) other members of the Royal Family; whether different arrangements and costings apply when the visit is (A) official and (B) private; and if he will make a statement. [190428]

Mr. Blunkett: We do not have a breakdown of the security costs for these visits as any such costs incurred by host countries are entirely a matter for that country. As regards costs incurred by agencies in the United Kingdom it is our long established policy not to reveal details of the costs of protection arrangements as to do so could be indicative of the levels of protection provided, and so could compromise an individual's security.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protocols and agreements exist with (a) Canada, (b) Australia, (c) New Zealand and (d) other Commonwealth countries where Her Majesty is Head of State as to the responsibility of their police forces to provide security for Her Majesty and other members of the Royal Family (i) on official visits and (ii) private visits; and if he will make a statement. [190432]

Mr. Blunkett: As Head of State, when Her Majesty the Queen visits a foreign or Commonwealth country she is entitled, under customary international law, to receive protection from the host country, regardless of whether it is a private or official visit. There are no specific protocols or agreements relating to the protection of Her Majesty the Queen or other members of the Royal Family. Arrangements for the protection of members of the Royal Family on visits overseas are a matter for discussion with the security authorities of the host country concerned.

Animal Experiments

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of animal experimentation undertaken in the UK in 2003 was not for purely medical research. [192897]

Caroline Flint: The question cannot be answered definitively from the data collected. Procedures conducted purely for medical research would be included among the 693,743 and 150,679 procedures reported as being for applied studies (human and veterinary medicine respectively) in Table 1 of the annual publication "Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain, 2003", a copy of which is in the Library. However such procedures would also include a substantial but unknown proportion of the 902,570 procedures for which breeding was the only regulated use, and many of the 832,926 procedures reported as being for fundamental biological research since many of these studies would have been done to obtain an eventual medical benefit.

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of animal experimentation undertaken in the UK in 2003 was for household product testing; and if he will make a statement. [192898]

Caroline Flint: The information requested may be found in Table 10 of the annual publication "Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain, 2003," a copy of which is in the Library. This table shows that last year, 234 procedures were started for the purpose of safety testing of products used in the household. This figure represents 0.0084 per cent. of the total number of procedures conducted in 2003.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is in respect of the testing of finished household products on animals. [193085]

Caroline Flint: The Government currently have no plans to ban the use of animals in assessing the safety of finished household products or their ingredients. National and international regulatory bodies require that the chemicals used in a range of household products are tested to assess the risk they might pose to man, animals and the environment. Under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 such testing using animals can only be licensed when the information to be obtained is considered essential to the required risk assessment, and when it cannot be obtained by non-animal methods. Unfortunately, there are, in some cases, still no reliable alternatives to this kind of animal testing if the necessary safety data are to be generated.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the regulations and legislation in relation to the licensing and monitoring of animal experiments. [192521]

Caroline Flint: The licensing and monitoring of animal experiments in the UK stem from the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, which transposes into UK law—and in some respects exceeds—the requirements of EU Directive 86/609. The 1986 Act is widely regarded as the most rigorous piece of legislation of its kind in the world, and there are at present no plans to change it or the regulation for which it provides.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are taken to ensure that licensed animal experiments in the UK are not being unnecessarily duplicated in other countries. [192522]

Caroline Flint: Animal experiments in the UK are not knowingly licensed under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 if they unnecessarily duplicate such work undertaken elsewhere. Appropriate checks on this are undertaken when licence applications are considered. The Government cannot ensure that work licensed in the UK is not subsequently repeated in other countries, as that is beyond its jurisdiction. However, it contributes at the European and wider international level to ongoing efforts to prevent animals being used unnecessarily.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to eradicate redundancy in animal experiments. [192560]

Caroline Flint: There are no plans to take any steps beyond continued rigorous application of the licensing controls in the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, one effect of which is to ensure that there are no redundancies or unnecessary duplication in the conduct of animal experiments. Although some replication of experimental work is occasionally required for the purposes of scientific validation, the Government considers that the current regulatory system, as administered and implemented by the Home Office and its Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate, is effective in ensuring that animals are not bred or used unnecessarily.

Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women are detained under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [192618]

Mr. Blunkett: Seventeen people have been certified under Part 4 of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 (the ATCS Act); 16 of them have been detained under this Act and one under other powers. Excluding those who have been released from detention, or who are detained under other powers (including criminal charges which have been brought since detention), nine people are currently held under Part 4 of the ATCS Act. All of the detainees are male. Parliament has been informed of all certifications.

From 14 December 2001 to 17 October 2003, there were 24 convictions under Part 5 of the Act (Race and Religion) for religiously aggravated crime; one conviction for trespass under Part 9 (Aviation Security); and one conviction for hoaxes involving noxious substances or things (Section 114). We do not have information on the sex of the individuals concerned.

Council of Ministers

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a Written Ministerial Statement outlining for each meeting of the Council of Ministers at which his Department is represented as soon as is practicable following that meeting (a) the key items of discussion, (b) the positions of the Government on those items, (c) the key positions taken by other member states that Ministers consider should be noted by Members and (d) any preliminary discussion on the timing and the agenda of the following meeting. [188189]

Caroline Flint: This is a useful suggestion and HMG will consider it further, in line with its policy of keeping Parliament better informed on EU business.

Crime (Yorkshire)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average period of time between arrest for a drugs-related offence in York and referral to a drug treatment agency was in (a) 1997 and (b) 2003–04. [191244]

Caroline Flint: Data is not available in the format requested. The National Treatment Agency has set national targets on maximum acceptable waiting times for all Drug Action Teams, measuring the period from referral to entry into treatment.

Waiting times for York in (a) 1997: data was not collected centrally at this time. Waiting times for (b) 2003–04 are listed against the NTA target:

	York 2003–04	NTA target 2003
Community prescribing specialist	12	6
GP prescribing	3	4
Structured counselling	2	4
In-patient detox	0	4
Residential rehab	[1]—	4

[1] Service not available

The requirement for compliance with arrest referral is for the referee to make contact with the agency within 15 days. Once the client has made that contact they are normally seen by a treatment agency within a week in York.

Deepcut Barracks

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will release to the family of the deceased the Surrey police report into the death of Private Geoff Gray at Deepcut barracks on 17 September 2001. [174752]

Paul Goggins: Surrey police owns the report into the death of Private Geoff Gray and it must be its decision as to whether it is released to members of his family.

Surrey police inform me that it is negotiating the disclosure of the report into Private Gray's death with the legal representatives of his family.

Drugs

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what confiscation of drugs has taken place in the Greater London area during the last 12 months. [193797]

Caroline Flint: The number of drug seizures made in the Greater London Area by the Metropolitan and City of London Police forces was 28,020 in 2002, the most recent year for which data is available. Details are given in the table.

Table 1: Number of Drug Seizures by type, 2002

Homeland Security

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which areas of government spending relate to resilience issues and homeland security, broken down by department; what the current levels of spending are; what the projected changes in funding are over the next (a) two and (b) five years; and if he will make a statement. [190860]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 14 October 2004]: For security reasons we would not wish to comment on specific departments' spending on national security or resilience programmes. However I can say the overall government spending on counter terrorism and resilience programmes amounted to £1.48 billion in 2004–05. Over the course of the current spending review period this spending is projected to rise to the following:

	£ billion
2005–06	1.665
2006–07	2.045
2007–08	2,115

The figures exclude core military and police spending. Funding for 2008–09 and 2009–10 has not been determined and falls into the next Spending Review period.

Impaired Drivers

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for The Home Department how many drivers convicted of driving when under the influence of alcohol or drugs over the past 10 years had previous convictions for the same offence (a) in total and (b) broken down by police authority. [192179]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The figures in the table are derived from the Offenders Index. Data on driving while under the influence of alcohol/drugs are only available for 1996 onwards. We have only provided data for the most recent year available (2002). Comparisons over different years will not be consistent, as the time available to build up previous convictions will vary each year.

Data are only available for a four week period (see background note for more details).

Over a four week period in 2002, 6,643 drivers were convicted of driving when under the influence of alcohol or drugs, of these 1,157 (17 per cent.) had a previous conviction for the same offence.

The numbers with a previous conviction for driving while under the influence of alcohol/drugs by police force area are shown in the following table for 2002 (again based on a four week sample).

Indymedia

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from foreign governments with regard to the seizure of computer equipment from the independent news agency Indymedia on 7 October. [193714]

Caroline Flint: The Secretary of State did not receive any representations from foreign governments in this matter.

Magistrates Courts (Environmental Offences)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many defendants have been proceeded against at magistrates courts in each year since 1997 under (a) section 1, (b) section 5, (c) section 6, (d) section 7 and (e) any section of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; [192325]

(2) how many defendants have been proceeded against at magistrates courts in each year since 1997 under (a) section 60, (b) section 61, (c) section 62, (d) section 93 and (e) any section of the Control of Pollution Act 1974; [192326]

(3) how many defendants have been proceeded against at magistrates courts in each year since 1997 under (a) section 110(2)(a), (b) section 110(2)(b), (c) section 110(2)(c), (d) section 110(4)(a), (e) section 110(4)(b) and (f) any section of the Environment Act 1995; [192327]

(4) how many defendants have been proceeded against at magistrates courts in each year since 1997 under the Clean Air Act 1993. [192328]

Paul Goggins: Statistics for defendants proceeded against at the magistrates' courts 1997 to 2002, for offences under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, Control of Pollution Act 1974, Environmental 1995 and the Clean Air Act 1993 are shown in the attached table.

Statistics for 2003 will be published in November.

Organised Crime

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of organised criminal gangs operating in the UK. [194018]

Caroline Flint: There is no current estimate of the number of organised criminal groups that operate in the UK. Organised criminal groups can range from a collection of people with distinct roles and a hierarchy with clear chains of command and communication, to loose networks where the members coalesce around one or more prominent criminals to undertake particular criminal ventures. And in the latter, the individuals may be involved with a number of sub-groups within the network and therefore be involved in a number of separate criminal ventures at any one time.

Parenting

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has recently (a) published and (b) commissioned on the effects of parenting on life chances for children. [193594]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The Home Office has not commissioned or published research specifically into the effect of parenting on life chances but has sponsored research which has included the impact of parenting programmes on the behaviour of children, particularly in relation to preventing offending and anti-social behaviour and the use of drugs.

In 2002 the Youth Justice Board published "Positive Parenting: the effectiveness of the Youth Justice Board's Parenting Programme". The Home Office commissioned research published this year by the Department for Education and Skills "What Works in Parenting Support? A Review of the International Evidence".

Home Office commissioned research which is under way is as follows:

(i) The Trust for the Study of Adolescence is researching the

(ii) effect of residential parenting courses into the behaviour of children (Report due 2005);

(iii) Oxford Brookes University is researching a programme to strengthen family communications and conflict resolution skills to reduce drug and alcohol use in young people. (Report due 2006).

(iv) The Centre for Social Marketing is researching the Blueprint drug education research programme which aims to maximise the involvement of parents in school drug education and to improve communication between young people and their parents on drug issues. (Report due 2007);

Police

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are employed in (a) Havering and (b) other London boroughs. [192645]

Ms Blears: To the nearest full-time equivalent, the number of police officers allocated directly to Borough Command Units on 30 September 2004 was as follows:

Prisons

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to increase the capacity of the prison estate. [186562]

Paul Goggins: There are a number of programmes underway to expand and improve the operational capacity of the prison estate. Through this current programme some 2,400 new prison places are scheduled to come into use by the end of 2006, including a new private prison at Peterborough, due to open in spring 2005.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary also announced on 29 September that £100 million from the Home Office budget for 2005–06 would fund the start of a new programme to create an additional 1,300 prison places. Taken altogether this will provide over 80,000 prison places.

Terrorism Act

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a race impact assessment was carried out for the (a) Terrorism Act 2000 and (b) Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001. [191320]

Mr. Blunkett: The Race Relations Act 1976 (Statutory Duties) Order 2001 placed a requirement on listed public authorities, including Government departments, to publish a Race Equality Scheme by 31 May 2002 setting out specific duties, including the carrying out of Race Impact Assessments on the likely impact of proposed future policies.

The Home Office's Race Equality Scheme was published on 25 April 2002. Race Impact Assessments were not therefore carried out for either the Terrorism Act 2000, or the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, as both acts came into force at an earlier date.

However, we have subsequently established specific working groups on aspects of policy and community relations—including on stop and search—to inform the development of both policy and practice.

The Home Office's Race Equality Schemes can be found at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/comrace/race.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Back to Work Bonuses

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Morley and Rothwell and (b) England have claimed Back to Work bonuses; and what the average amount claimed was in each case. [192513]

Mr. Pond: Data on the Back to Work bonus is not available below the level of Great Britain. The available information is in the tables.

Benefit Overpayment

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much is provided for in his Department's accounts for overpaid benefits unrecovered from claimants. [192177]

Mr. Pond: At 31 March 2003, the figure within the Consolidated Resource Account for Bad Debt Provision for overpayments is £475,271,794.

Child Care (London)

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the relationship between child poverty, unemployment and the availability of affordable child care provision in London; [192092]

(2) what assessment he has made of the relationship between the costs of child care in London and the number of workless households in London; and if he will make a statement. [192093]

Mr. Pond: Poverty is about more than low income, it also affects the way people live—their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The Government believes that for many work is the best route out of poverty.

We are determined to make work pay. That is why we have introduced the New Tax Credits from which over 6 million families are already benefiting and which has helped lift over half a million children out of low income since 1997. However, we know that there is still more to do, both in London and in other regions of the UK.

We recognise that the availability of affordable child care is key to improving parents' ability to take up and stay in work.

Since 1998, the Sure Start Unit has created over 81,000 new child care places in London (against a target of 63,000) and delivered 8,000 new Neighbourhood Nursery places. We plan to further improve the availability of child care in London by creating an additional 37,000 places and over 8,000 full-time integrated child care and education places in over 200 new Children's Centres by March 2006.

Child care provision is only one of many factors affecting employment and poverty in London. For example, London has a much higher proportion of lone mothers than anywhere else in the UK; more lone parents in London have no previous work experience, are full-time students, live in social rented properties and are less likely than those living elsewhere to be receiving any maintenance. All of these factors are associated with lower levels of paid work and contribute to the differences in employment rate between London and the rest of the UK.

The Government will continue to address these issues through our successful active labour market programmes such as the New Deal and by ensuring, through the Tax Credit system, that there are sufficient financial incentives to make work pay.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the original cost was of the new IT system for the Child Support Agency; how much was to be paid in each year; how much of the contract EDS has been paid in each year; and what the penalty clauses are. [192911]

Mr. Pond [holding answer 21 October 2004]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my right hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Frank Field, dated 27 October 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the original cost was of the new IT system for the Child Support Agency; how much was to be paid in each year; how much of the contract EDS has been paid in each year; and what penalty clauses are in existence.

All costs of design, development and implementation of the new IT system fall initially to EDS who provide this as a managed service to the Agency. The cost of the service is expected to be £456 million payable over the period to the completion of the contract in 2010.

The payment due each year is determined by the contract. It is linked to service levels and to the degree of functionality delivered. Between 3rd March 2003 and 19th September 2004, EDS were paid £62.08 million. In that period, the Agency retained £12.1 million because of performance problems.

The contract does not explicitly have penalty clauses. Instead there are provisions to seek remedy where service delivery falls short of expectation or where the business incurs additional costs as a result of the supplier being late in meeting key, agreed delivery points.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his strategy is for rolling out the new Child Support Agency assessment rules for all absent parents. [193510]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave him on 18 December 2003, Official Report, column 1092W.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects existing Child Support Agency cases to migrate to the new system of liability calculation; and if he will make a statement. [193681]

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to expedite the transfer of all Child Support Agency payments to the system applying to new cases since March 2003; when he expects all payments to be made under the new formula; and if he will make a statement. [193846]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Members to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 18 December 2003, Official Report, column 1092W.

Disability Income Guarantee

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Yorkshire and Humber and (b) the City of York receive the disability income guarantee; and what its value is. [191222]

Mr. Pond: The Disability Income Guarantee is paid by means of enhanced disability premiums through income support, jobseeker's allowance (income based), housing benefit and council tax benefit. The enhanced disability premium in all of these benefits is worth £11.60 per week for a single person, £16.75 for a couple and £17.08 for a child.

The available information is in the following tables.

Income-related benefit recipients with an enhanced disability premium, Yorkshire and the Humber Government Office Region GOR

[2] These figures are based on very few sample cases and are subject to a high degree of sampling variation. These figures should be used as a guide to the current situation only.

Notes:

1. The figures are based on 1 per cent. and 5 per cent. samples and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. Council tax benefit totals exclude any second adult rebate cases.
3. Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases.
4. Figures refer to HB, CTB and IS/JSA(IB) claimants in receipt of enhanced disability premium or enhanced child disability premium.
5. IS/JSA(IB) caseloads are rounded to the nearest hundred and expressed in thousands, and HB and CTB caseloads are rounded to the nearest thousand.
6. HB and CTB caseloads will include overlaps where a claimant is in receipt of both benefits.
7. Income-related benefit caseloads include HB/CTB/IS/JSA(IB) recipients with all overlaps removed.

8. IS/JSA(IB) data includes claimants in receipt of income-based JSA who would also be entitled to the contributory element.
9. It is not possible to determine the value of the disability income guarantee. The total amounts refer to amounts of HB, CTB, IS/JSA(IB) paid to recipients with enhanced disability premium or enhanced child disability premium. It is not possible to determine how much of each benefit is due to the disability premium.

Incapacity Benefit Employment Pilot Schemes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) locations and (b) performance indicators are of each of the incapacity benefit employment pilots. [188986]

Maria Eagle: The incapacity benefit reforms Pathways to Work pilots are located in Renfrewshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute; Bridgend, Rhondda, Cynon and Taff; Derbyshire; Essex; Somerset; East Lancashire; Gateshead and South Tyneside. The first three started operations in October 2003, and the last four in April this year.

We have not set specific performance indicators. However, the Pathways to Work pilots are subject to robust and rigorous evaluation, and we are constantly monitoring performance. Early results from the first phase pilots indicate a step up in performance with clear evidence among specialist advisers of increased confidence in dealing with this customer group, and positive attitudes to the reforms from many customers.

Incapacity Benefit Tribunals

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints his Department has received in the last 12 months about the conduct of incapacity benefit tribunals. [193373]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for Christina Townsend, Chief Executive of the Appeals Service. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Norman Egan to Mr. Alan Campbell, dated 27 October 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked Christina Townsend, Chief Executive, to reply to your question regarding how many complaints his department has received in the last 12 months about the conduct of incapacity benefit tribunals. Christina is away from the office at the moment and I have been asked to reply.

The information you have requested is not available in the format required and cannot be broken down by specific benefit type. However, I can tell you that in the last 12 months the Appeals Service has received, across all benefit types, a total of 34 complaints about the conduct of its tribunals. This is compared to an appeals intake of 234,524 over the same period.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to reform incapacity benefit tribunals. [193374]

Maria Eagle: We have no plans to reform appeal tribunals which hear appeals relating to incapacity benefit.

Invalidity Benefit (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) men and (b) women living in the City of Glasgow are claiming invalidity benefit; and what percentage of the working population of the City these figures represent. [191007]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) claimants in Glasgow by gender at May 2004

National Insurance

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when Mrs. S. Master of Rushey Mead, Leicester will receive her national insurance number. [193027]

Mr. Pond: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Keith Vaz, dated 27 October 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your question concerning the allocation of a National Insurance Number to Mrs. S. Master of Edenhall Close, Rushey Mead, Leicester. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Details of individual claims are confidential and I will write to you directly on the matter in question.

This is in line with Part 2, paragraph 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of companies which, under the regulations introduced on 8 October 2001 (a) are obliged to provide and (b) have so far failed to offer access to a stakeholder scheme; how many companies the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority has fined for non-compliance; and what the average value of those fines was. [193922]

Malcolm Wicks: Employers who employ five or more employees and who do not offer an occupational pension scheme to the whole of the workforce, or do not offer at least a 3 per cent. employer contribution to a personal pension, are required to designate a stakeholder pension scheme. There are an estimated 350,000 such firms at any one time. It is estimated that around 270,000 employers are complying with the requirement to designate a stakeholder pension scheme and approximately 70,000 employers that are required to provide their staff with access to a stakeholder pension do not do so. Of these non-compliant firms, it is estimated that nearly 80 per cent. have less than 10 employees. A civil penalty of £10,000 has been levied by the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra), and paid, by one employer for failure to designate a stakeholder pension scheme.

Where employers are found to be non-compliant Opra gives them help and guidance to become compliant. However, where an employer is found to be deliberately not complying with the designation requirement, Opra will use its powers to enforce compliance in this area of the law where necessary.

Pension Credit

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of (a) female and (b) male pensioners in England and Wales are currently in receipt of the pension credit. [193749]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of individual female recipients of pension credit in England and Wales at the end of August represented approximately 30.6 per cent. of the total female population aged 60 or over. At the same date, the number of individual male recipients represented approximately 19.5 per cent. of the total male population aged 60 or over.

Note:

Individual recipients of pension credit include a small number of partners under age 60.

State Retirement Pension

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of (a) female and (b) male pensioners in England and Wales are in receipt of the full basic state pension. [193750]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is in the table.

Disability (Two-ticks Symbol)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) private companies, (b) charitable and voluntary groups and (c) public sector organisations based in the Buckinghamshire constituency have adopted the two ticks symbol. [191055]

Maria Eagle: The available information is the table.

Number of current disability symbol holders in Buckinghamshire, Berkshire and Oxfordshire broken down by type of employer

	Number
Local employer	69
Council or local authority	11
Voluntary organisation or registered charity	19
Major or national organisation	9
Government Department	1
Total	109

Note:

Information is collected by area of disability service provision and is not available broken down by constituency. Figures in the table relate to the local disability service area, "Berkshire, Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire" which includes the constituency of Buckingham.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in Castle Point will benefit from the winter heating allowance in 2004. [193508]

Malcolm Wicks: It is not possible to say how many households in Castle Point will benefit from a winter fuel payment in winter 2004–05. There were 13,765 households in receipt of a winter fuel payment for winter 2003–04 and we would expect the numbers to be similar.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in the Tooting constituency will be eligible for the winter fuel allowance for winter 2004–05. [193795]

Malcolm Wicks: It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of the number of people in the constituency of Tooting who are eligible to receive a winter fuel payment as DWP administrative data does not contain complete information on household circumstances and payments are based on household composition.

The number of people in the Tooting constituency who received a winter fuel payment for winter 2003–04 was 11,205 and we would expect numbers for this winter to be similar.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of people who need to make a claim to receive the 2004–05 winter fuel payment; and how many claims were received on or before 24 September. [193921]

Malcolm Wicks: We estimate that approximately 700,000 individuals in Great Britain reached age 60 in the qualifying period for the 2004–05 winter fuel payment. About half of these will be paid automatically but others, who are not in receipt of certain benefits, will need to make a claim.

As at 24 September, 281,905 claim forms for a winter fuel payment had been received.

Those eligible have until 30 March to make a claim and it is up to them whether they do so. We publicise the availability and eligibility for the payments throughout the claim period.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners living in the London borough of Wandsworth benefited from last year's winter fuel payment scheme. [193971]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of people living in the London borough of Wandsworth who benefited from a winter fuel payment last winter was 33,230.

Spending Review (Job Cuts)

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of how job cuts proposed in the Spending Review will affect (a) his Department's staff and (b) services provided in Batley and Spen. [189502]

Maria Eagle: The Department's plans to reduce its staffing levels are part of a four-year programme of modernisation made possible by a significant investment of public money. The investment has enabled the Department to streamline its processes, modernise its IT and improve its service to customers as a result. The first phase of these plans designed to increase the efficiency of benefit processing was announced to the House on 29 June. The latest phase of the Department's continuing modernisation programme, which will lead to a more efficient and effective services to customers, was announced by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State on 16 September.

It is too early to say precisely what will be the effect on staffing levels in Batley and Spen and there are currently no plans to change the service levels in the area. However, further announcements will be made as our plans progress.

TREASURY

Council Tax

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which streets in Sutton and Cheam constituency council tax rebanding has resulted in revaluations in the past two years; and what the reason for rebanding was in each case. [194050]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Census

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Office for National Statistics will release the full set of the 2001 Census data. [193752]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Mr. Len Cook to Cheryl Gillan, dated, 27 October 2004:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking when the Office for National Statistics will release the full set of the 2001 Census data. (193752)

All reports to Parliament prepared under section 4.1 of the Census Act (1920) have now been released and are available in the House of Commons Library. Actual release dates are as follows:

	Dates
First results on population for England and Wales	30 September 2002
Key Statistics for local authorities in England and Wales	13 February 2003
Key Statistics for Assembly Constituencies and Assembly Electoral Regions for the National Assembly for Wales	3 April 2003
National report for England and Wales	7 May 2003
Key Statistics for health areas in England and Wales	31 July 2003
Report for Parliamentary Constituencies	25 September 2003
National report for England and Wales part 2	3 February 2004
Report on the Welsh language	10 February 2004
Key Statistics for parishes in England and communities in Wales	16 March 2004
Key Statistics for postcode sectors in England and Wales	30 March 2004
Key Statistics for urban areas in England and Wales	17 June 2004
Key Statistics for urban areas (Regional volumes)	22 July 2004

Section 4.2 of the Census Act 1920 allows the Registrar General to meet a substantial need for additional Census statistics which are not covered by the reports to Parliament. An extensive programme of planned output under this provision has been completed, with delivery of the main set of detailed local results in September 2003, and with the completion of output on workplace and migration recently. These are available free of charge, on the National Statistics website where appropriate, or in entirety on electronic media. The Census continues to provide additional output is available.

Casinos

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on changing taxation levels for casino operators. [194293]

John Healey: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has had no discussions with the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on these matters. Tax policy is a matter for the Treasury and is considered as part of the normal Budget process.

Child Support Payments

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the implications of tagging a taxpayer's (a) national insurance contributions record and (b) tax records with the existence of a deductions from earnings order made in respect of child support payments; [193834]

(2) if he will introduce a procedure for alerting employers when taking on new employees to the existence of an existing deductions from earnings order in respect of child support payments. [193835]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has made no assessment of the processes outlined in respect of child support payments.

Deaths

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths there were in each of the last five years from (a) suicide, (b) drowning, (c) house fires, (d) other domestic accidents, (e) road traffic accidents, (f) murder and (g) manslaughter; and what percentage were (i) alcohol and (ii) drug related in each case. [193833]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mrs. Iris Robinson, dated 27 October 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many deaths there were in each of the last five years from (a) suicide, (b) drowning, (c) house fires, (d) other domestic accidents, (e) road traffic accidents, (f) murder and (g) manslaughter; and what percentage were (i) alcohol and (ii) drug-related in each case. (193833)

The latest year for which data are available is 2003. The figures requested are shown in the tables below for each year from 1999 to 2003. Percentages which were drug-related or alcohol-related are not available. For suicide and assault, the method used is available. For these causes, figures are available on cases where the method used was poisoning by drugs or alcohol.

Number of deaths by selected cause[1], persons, all ages, England and Wales, 1999 to 2003[2]

	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003
(a) Suicide	5,216	4,968	4,705	4,665	4,659
(b) Drowning	524	475	452	457	437
(c) House fires (accidental)	295	319	328	311	321
(d) Other domestic accidents	2,602	2,740	2,823	2,683	2,830
(e) Land transport accidents	3,098	2,985	2,949	2,929	2,943
(f and g) Assault	653	764	742	724	701

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) for the years 1999 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) for 2001 onwards. The codes used are listed below:

Suicide—ICD-9 E950-E959, E980-E989 excluding deaths where the coroner's verdict was pending; ICD-10 X60-X84, Y10-Y34 excluding deaths where the coroner's verdict was pending

Drowning—ICD-9 E890, E832, E910, E954, E964, E984; ICD-10 W65-W74, X71, Y21

Accidental house fires—E890-E899 where accident occurred at home; ICD-10 X00-X09 where accident occurred at home

Other domestic accidents—ICD-9 E849-E869, E880-E889, E900-E928 where accident occurred at home; ICD-10 W00-W99, X10-X59 where accident occurred at home

Land transport accidents—ICD-9 E800-E829; ICD-10 V01-V89

Assault—ICD-9 E960-E96, E988.8 where the coroner's verdict was pending; ICD-10 X85-Y09, Y33.9 where the coroner's verdict was pending

[2] Figures are based on deaths occurring in each calendar year.

Percentage of deaths due to suicide or assault[1] where the method used was drug[2] or alcohol poisoning, persons, all ages, England and Wales, 1999 to 2003

	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003
(i) Suicide—% which alcohol-related poisoning	0.1	0.1	0.1	0.2	0.1
(ii) Suicide—% which drug-related poisoning	25.9	25.7	26.5	24.2	24.9
(i) Assault—% which alcohol-related poisoning	—	—	—	—	—
(ii) Assault—% which drug-related poisoning	2.0	2.1	2.7	0.8	0.7

[1] The cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) for the years 1999 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) for 2001 onwards. The codes used are listed below:

Alcohol-related poisoning suicide—as above where ICD-9 980 or ICD-10 T51 was coded as the main injury

Drug-related poisoning suicide—ICD-9 E950.0-E950.5, E980.0-E980.5; ICD-10 X60-X64, Y10-Y14

Alcohol-related poisoning assault—as above where ICD-9 980 or ICD-10 T51 was coded as the main injury

Drug-related poisoning assault—ICD-9 E962.0; ICD-10 X85.

[2] Includes over-the-counter, prescription and illegal drugs

Employment Statistics (Tooting)

Tom Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of working people living in the Tooting parliamentary constituency are in full-time employment. [193794]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 21 October 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment in Tooting. (193794)

It is estimated that for the twelve months ending February 2003, the proportion of working age people in full time employment resident in the Tooting Parliamentary Constituency was 61.2%.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Fuel Duties

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce measures to compensate for higher duties on petrol and diesel in those areas of the UK with the highest levels of petrol and diesel consumption; and if he will make a statement. [193708]

John Healey: The Chancellor of the Exchequer keeps all taxation policy under review and any changes are announced in the context of the Budget.

Hospices (VAT Relief)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 580W, on hospices (VAT relief), on which purchases hospices can benefit from specific VAT zero rates. [193727]

Dawn Primarolo: The construction of a new building for use as a hospice and the conversion of an existing non-residential building into a hospice are VAT zero-rated.

Charitable hospices, and other charities which provide care or medical treatment for chronically sick and disabled people, also benefit from a number of other VAT zero rates on their purchases including medicines; medical, sterilising, laboratory and certain other equipment to be used for medical research, diagnosis or treatment; ambulances and certain other vehicles; equipment designed solely for chronically sick and disabled people; certain equipment designed for invalids, such as adjustable beds, commodes, patient hoists and wheelchairs; certain adaptations to buildings to facilitate chronically sick and disabled people, such as installation of lifts, the installation or adaptation of bathrooms and lavatories and the widening of doorways and passageways; and the adaptation of any goods to suit the condition of chronically sick and disabled people.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the (a) Public Sector Loan Board and (b) Treasury gives advice to local authorities on how to reschedule debt to reduce interest rates paid. [193813]

Mr. Timms: The prudent management of debt is the responsibility of local authorities acting on the advice of their Chief Financial Officers in accordance with professional standards. HM Treasury and the Public Works Loan Board do not offer advice on debt management to local authorities.

New Deal

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many personnel the Department has recruited under the New Deal in each of the past five years. [193675]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 25 October 2004]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer which the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly) gave him on 25 October Official Report, columns 1051–54W.

Private Sector Finance

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much private sector finance has been issued in each year since it was introduced; what the average interest rate was in each year; in which years it is scheduled to be repaid; and whether a sinking fund is being established to meet these repayments. [193804]

Mr. Boateng: Information on projects signed under the Private Finance Initiative can be found in the Signed Projects List which is published on the Treasury website at: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/F20/9F/ACF12A5.xls.

The list contains data on the estimated capital value of investment delivered via PFI and on the year in which individual projects were signed.

Under PFI repaying the debt raised to finance projects is the responsibility of the private sector. The unitary charge, which is paid to the private sector if the project is delivering the high quality outputs specified in the contract, covers both the provision of services and financing costs.

Information on the costs of the debt raised by the private sector to finance individual projects and the times at which it plans to repay such debt is not held centrally.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the projected levels of private sector finance are over the next three years. [193805]

Mr. Boateng: Figures for the estimated levels of capital spending by the private sector in the financial years 2004–05 to 2006–07 can be found in the Budget Report 2004. Within the report, table C17 provides departmental estimates of capital spending by the private sector (signed deals). Table C18 provides an estimate of the capital value of projects that are at the preferred bidder stage.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps the Government are taking to ensure that the contractor takes some risk in private sector finance agreements. [193806]

Mr. Boateng: Private sector contractors always take risk in PFI projects. Examples of risks commonly transferred to the private sector are construction risk, or the risk associated with the design of the building and its appropriateness for providing the required service.

Guidance on how to appropriately evaluate which risks should be shared or transferred is given in the Standardisation of PFI Contracts Version 3 (SoPC 3) and the Treasury's Value for Money Guidance on PFI. Both documents are available on the Treasury website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/documents/public_private_partnerships/key_documents/ppp_keydocs_index.cfm.

Public Services

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average annual cost to (a) local authorities, (b) police authorities, (c) fire authorities and (d) NHS trusts of the (i) withdrawal of advance corporation tax credit on pensions and (ii) increase in national insurance implemented in the 2003 budget has been since their introduction. [193803]

Dawn Primarolo: Data by type of public service are not available.

Red Diesel

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Treasury has made of the increase in revenue the Exchequer would receive if the UK's derogation to the European Energy Products Directive which enables private boat users to purchase red diesel was not extended beyond 2006. [193720]

John Healey: Lack of robust data available means no reliable assessment has to date been made of potential revenue gains for the Exchequer from the loss of the UK's derogation from the European Energy Products Directive, which enables private boat users in the UK to purchase rebated gas oil.

Royal Residences

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his reply of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 73W, what the cost of the lease is; and whether it is paid (a) in advance and (b) on an instalment basis. [191344]

Mr. Timms: The cost and terms of the lease are confidential as it is privately funded. However, commercial valuations were obtained on both sides by independent external valuers.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the current estimate is of the cost of the refurbishment required in the first two years of the lease granted to HRH the Duke of York relating to property in Windsor Great Park. [191345]

Mr. Timms: The lease specifies that the tenant must spend a substantial sum on the restoration and modernisation of the property. However, as this is private expenditure, it will remain confidential.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who bears the cost of maintenance of property and land in Windsor Great Park covered by the recently agreed lease granted to HRH the Duke of York. [191346]

Mr. Timms: The lease granted to HRH The Duke of York stipulates that The Duke of York, as lessee, is responsible for all repairs and maintenance of both the property and grounds.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the property and land recently granted by lease to HRH the Duke of York in Windsor Great Park qualifies for (a) UK and (b) EU (i) agricultural and (ii) environmental grants. [191347]

Mr. Timms: The land held under lease by HRH the Duke of York at Royal Lodge does not qualify for UK or EU agricultural or environmental grants.

Siemens Business Services

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on proposals by Siemens Business Services to transfer National Savings and Investment jobs to India. [192910]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by Siemens on 13 August 2004.

Single Mothers

Mr. Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many single mothers aged (a) under 18, (b) 18 to 30 and (c) over 30 years are in receipt of child benefit in (i) Angus constituency and (ii) Scotland. [193451]

Dawn Primarolo: The numbers requested cannot be obtained from the records held. The child benefit data system does not hold up-to-date data on whether each recipient is single or part of a couple. The latest available figures covering all recipients in each local authority, for November 2003, appear on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/child_benefit/menu.htm.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many unpaid special advisers the Department has; what their names are; and which Government (a) bodies, (b) committees and (c) strategy groups each unpaid adviser (i) belongs to, (ii) advises and (iii) works alongside. [194066]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer which the former Financial Secretary (Ruth Kelly) gave the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 10 April 2002, Official Report, column 246W.

Stamp Duty/Inheritance Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the estimated tax yield from (a) stamp duty on domestic property and (b) inheritance tax is for each year to 2008–09 on the assumption that home price inflation is (i) zero, (ii) minus 10 per cent. per annum and (iii) plus 10 per cent. per annum; [194151]

(2) what assumptions the Government have made about the level of (a) stamp duty receipts on domestic property and (b) inheritance tax receipts in the period to 2008–09. [194152]

Dawn Primarolo: Forecast receipts from inheritance tax and stamp duty for 2004–05 are given in Table C8 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/CE2/16/bud04_chc_312.pdf. Forecasts for 2005–06 will be given in the pre-Budget report towards the end of the year. The breakdown of stamp duty into receipts on residential property and the effects of the alternative house price assumptions are not available.

Tax Credits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit compensation payments have been authorised since April; and what the (a) total and (b) average value of those payments was. [193662]

Dawn Primarolo: 10,200 payments were authorised between April and September 2004, inclusive. Their total value was £670,000 and the average value was £65.

Teenage Pregnancy (Barking and Dagenham)

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the teenage pregnancy rate in the London Borough of Barking and Dagenham has been in each year since 1997. [194421]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Jon Cruddas, dated 27 October 2004:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the teenage pregnancy rate in the London Borough of Barking and Dagenham has been in each year since 1997. (194421)

The most recent year for which conceptions statistics are available is 2002 and figures for this year are provisional estimates. The data requested are given in the table below.

Conceptions to women aged under 18—numbers and rates: London Borough of Barking and Dagenham, 1997 to 2002

Year	Number	Rate[1]
1997	193	69.0
1998	156	54.6
1999	180	61.2
2000	216	67.5
2001	215	63.6
2002[2]	236	73.3

[1] Rate per 1,000 women aged 15 to 17

[2] Provisional estimates

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Caravan and Camping Exempted Organisations

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Association of Caravan and Camping Exempted Organisations was consulted in his review of permitted development rights; and if he will list the organisations which were consulted. [193908]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made no proposals to amend permitted development rights for caravan sites. A research report into permitted development, commissioned from consultants, was published last year on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website, www.odpm.gov.uk. This was the initial phase of a review of permitted development by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. A list of those whom the researchers contacted has been made available in the Library of the House. We intend to consult early next year on changes to certain permitted development rights, but not on the rights to station caravans. If we decide to propose changes in that area, we would again go out to public consultation. The Association of Caravan and Camping Exempted Organisations will be welcome to contribute its views on any proposals we make.

E-targets

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when all local authorities are expected to supply land searches electronically. [193808]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister continues to encourage local authorities to subscribe to the National Land Information Service (NLIS) as the best way of e-enabling land searches. In turn this should improve the speed of response and efficiency of the service. NLIS has already been used for over three million searches and achieved an estimated 30–35 per cent. of the e-conveyancing market share. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister anticipates that as part of the overall e-government target all local authorities should offer e-enabled land searches by December 2005.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on local authorities' progress towards the Government's e-targets. [193809]

Phil Hope: The target for local authorities in England is 100 per cent. capability in electronic delivery of priority services by December 2005, in ways that customers will use. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister anticipates all authorities reaching this target. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will have new data on their progress in the new year. Authorities have been requested to submit this year's Implementing Electronic Government statements by 20 December.

High Hedges

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister by what date Part 8 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 relating to high hedges will be fully implemented. [194338]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is now finalising regulations and guidance and expects the complaints system to be fully operational early in 2005.

Housing Bill

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what form electronic versions of sellers' packs must be made available; who will have access to this information; and how the vendor will recover his or her costs from the purchaser. [193886]

Keith Hill: There is no requirement for home information packs to be kept in an electronic format. Potential buyers may ask for a copy of the pack and the Housing Bill provides that this may be provided in an electronic format if the potential buyer agrees to it. This will assist efficiency and minimise costs. The Bill also specifies circumstances in which a copy may be refused, allows conditions to be attached and for a reasonable charge covering the costs of making and sending a copy to be made.

Local Government Finance

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to use data from the 2001 census in calculating the local government finance settlement; and if he will make a statement. [193514]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 19 October 2004, Official Report, columns 570–71W.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of planning appeals submitted to the Planning Inspectorate in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004 to date (i) have been and (ii) he expects to be determined within 30 weeks. [193348]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, in 2003–04 the Inspectorate received 22,548 planning appeals (in England) and issued 18,914 decisions. 87 per cent. of the decisions issued that year were despatched within 30 weeks of receipt of the appeal. In 2004–05 (year to date—30 September) the Inspectorate has received 12,222 planning appeals (in England) and has issued 7,339 decisions. 79 per cent. of the decisions so far issued in 2004–05 have been despatched within 30 weeks of receipt of the appeal.

It is likely that over the year as a whole the proportion of appeals determined within 30 weeks will reduce. This is due to the considerable growth in the number of planning appeals received; in the first six months of the year receipts were about 23 per cent. more than in the same period last year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Security Screen

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the Commission's latest estimate is of the cost of the permanent security screen to be installed in the Commons Chamber. [193278]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: In the debate on the security screen on 22 April 2004, Official Report, column 467, the Leader of the House quoted a figure of £1.3 million. Although the design is still at a comparatively early stage the forecast has been reduced to £1 million. This figure includes the capital costs, designers' and surveyors' fees plus VAT. The estimate will be subject to formal review on completion of the design later this year.

SCOTLAND

New Deal (Departmental Recruitment)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many personnel the Department has recruited under the new deal in each of the past five years. [194478]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office has employed seven staff under the new deal in the past five years. Details are given in the following table.

	Number of new deal appointments
2000–01	2
2001–02	3
2002–03	—
2003–04	1
2004–05	1

WALES

Meirionnydd Nant Conwy

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last visited the constituency of Meirionnydd Nant Conwy; and what the purpose was of that visit. [192214]

Mr. Hain: My last official engagement in Meirionnydd Nant Conwy was in August 1997 as a Welsh Office Minister when I had the great pleasure of attending that year's National Eisteddfod.

More recent visits to North Wales have taken me through the great beauty of the hon. Members constituency and if he has any specific suggestions for a ministerial visit I would be only to pleased to consider these.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State stayed in Dolgellau in the hon. Gentleman's constituency during an official visit in January 2003.

New Deal (Departmental Recruitment)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many personnel the Department has recruited under the new deal in each of the past five years. [194476]

Mr. Touhig: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1052W by the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office, Ruth Kelly

The size of the Wales Office and nature of its business means that it does not recruit directly but takes its staff mostly from the National Assembly for Wales and the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Grey Visitor Passes

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how many grey visitor passes have been issued to visitors to the parliamentary estate since they were introduced; [194316]

(2) how many grey visitor passes issued to visitors to the parliamentary estate have been lost since they were introduced; and what efforts have been made to recover them; [194317]

(3) what measures are in place to ensure that grey visitor passes issued to visitors to the parliamentary estate are successfully retrieved from visitors when they leave the parliamentary estate. [194318]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: It is not the practice of the House of Commons Commission to publish details of the operation of security arrangements on the parliamentary estate.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agrimonetary Compensation (Buckingham)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers in the Buckingham constituency have received agrimonetary compensation since 2002; and what the total amount is that has been paid out. [189853]

Alun Michael: Agrimonetary compensation payments to farmers in Buckinghamshire in respect of numbers and amount since 2002.

EAGGF year	Number	Amount (£)
2002	778	493,832.00
2003	321	18,465.73

European agriculture guarantee and guidance fund years run from 16 October to 15 October.

Within the regional classification used by the EC (Nomenclature des unites territoriales statistiques (NUTS)) there is no code for Buckingham only for Buckinghamshire.

The figures are therefore for Buckinghamshire.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Illegal Trading

25. Mr. Watts: To ask the Solicitor-General what guidance she gives to the Crown Prosecution Service on prosecutions for illegal trading. [194088]

The Solicitor-General: The term illegal trading covers a range of possible criminal offences which may be prosecuted by a number of public prosecuting authorities, including the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office and local authorities. The Crown Prosecution Service will apply the guidance contained in the Code for Crown Prosecutors when deciding whether or not to prosecute in individual cases.

CPS Prosecutions (Blackpool)

26. Mr. Jack: To ask the Solicitor-General what studies she has undertaken of recent trends in Crown Prosecution Service prosecutions in criminal cases in Blackpool. [194089]

The Solicitor-General: Measured by unsuccessful outcomes, the CPS Unit responsible for prosecutions in the Fylde/Blackpool area of Lancashire has been performing well in comparison to other parts of the county, and in comparison to England and Wales more generally.

Domestic Violence Courts

27. Julie Morgan: To ask the Solicitor-General what discussions she has had with Cabinet colleagues on increasing the number of specialist domestic violence courts. [194090]

The Solicitor-General: Independent evaluation of five of the existing specialist domestic violence courts has been extremely positive. The Government intends to take forward the recommendation to increase the number of such courts in England and Wales.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Analogue Switch-off

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage in terms of area of (a) the UK and (b) Scotland will have digital television coverage by 31 December (i) 2004, (ii) 2005 and (iii) 2006. [193679]

Estelle Morris: Digital Terrestrial Television (DTT) coverage figures are calculated by households covered rather than geographical area. At present 82 per cent. of households in Scotland are covered by DTT compared to 73 per cent. for the UK as a whole and this percentage cannot be increased before Switchover.

Though it is not possible to give an accurate prediction of future DTT coverage in Scotland and the UK, public service broadcasters are required to match substantially the same level of analogue coverage (98.5 per cent.), with digital. No specific dates for Switchover have been set, but the Government and Ofcom believe that digital switchover could start to happen as early as 2007 and be completed by 2012.

Drug Abuse (Football)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Football Association regarding sanctions for footballers testing positive for drugs. [194411]

Mr. Caborn: There have been no formal discussions between DCMS Ministers and the Football Association in the last 12 months about sanctions for footballers testing positive for prohibited substances.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what account is taken of the impact that listing particular buildings will have on local regeneration when the decision is made about whether they should be listed; [194038]

(2) what action she is taking to ensure that decisions about listing buildings take into account the impact their listing will have on local regeneration; and if she will make a statement. [194039]

Mr. Caborn: The listing criteria, as set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 15: Planning and the Historic Environment (PPG 15), only allow the Secretary of State to consider the special architectural or historic interest of the buildings.

Local regeneration cannot be taken into consideration.

Comments received in response to our consultation document, Protecting our Historic Environment: Making the System Work Better, supported the principle that the Secretary of State should not be able to take account of wider considerations.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many buildings have been listed in each of the last 10 years. [194046]

Mr. Caborn: We are able only to provide reliable figures for the last five years. These are as follows:

	Number
2000	900
2001	742
2002	649
2003	721
2004	[1]465

[1] To October 2004.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many applications for listing buildings have been turned down in each of the last 10 years. [194047]

Mr. Caborn: We are able only to provide reliable figures for the last five years. These are as follows:

	Number
2000	1,317
2001	1,375
2002	1,183
2003	1,255
2004	1,164

Olympic Sports Facilities

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) 50-metre Olympic swimming pools, (b) Olympic standard velodromes and (c) Olympic standard running tracks there are in the UK; and where they are located. [194410]

Mr. Caborn: There are 24 50-metre swimming pools in the UK. Of these, four have the necessary swimming and spectator facilities to host Olympic and other major international competitions. They are located in London (Crystal Palace), Manchester, Sheffield, and Glasgow.

The remaining 20 50-metre pools are located at: Aldershot, Bath, Birmingham, Coventry, Ealing, High Wycombe, Hillingdon, Leeds, Liverpool, Loughborough, Millfield School, Norwich, Portsmouth, Stockport, Tyne and Wear, Wigan, East Kilbride, Edinburgh, Stirling, and Swansea.

There are two Olympic standard velodromes in the UK—one each in Newport and Manchester.

There are six running tracks in the UK with sufficient athletics and spectator facilities to host Olympic and other international competitions. These are located in: Gateshead, Sheffield, London (Crystal Palace), Birmingham, Manchester, and Glasgow. The facility in Glasgow is currently being refurbished.

In addition, there are approximately 210 athletics tracks in the UK, which are certified as being of Olympic size and standard but do not have suitable spectator facilities to hold international competitions.

Sports Councils

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the annual Exchequer grant aid awards to (a) UK Sports, (b) the Welsh Sports Council, (c) the Scottish Sports Council, (d) the Northern Ireland Sports Council and (e) Sport England have been in each year since 1996. [194462]

Mr. Caborn: The figures requested are shown in the following table:

	UK Sport	Sport England
1996–97	4,000,000	15,679,000
1997–98	11,800,000	33,730,000
1998–99	11,600,000	36,489,000
1999–2000	12,600,000	37,523,000
2000–01	12,750,000	38,323,000
2001–02	16,773,000	43,162,000
2002–03	16,321,000	80,324,000
2003–04	23,175,000	44,572,000
2004–05	27,310,000	77,052,000

Notes:

1. The figures for 2004–05 show plans. All other figures reflect reported outturn

2. The UK Sports Council and English Sports Council became operational on 1 January 1997 when they superseded the Sports Council of Great Britain.

Support for sport in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is a devolved responsibility; questions should therefore be directed to each administration.

Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what measures her Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake to comply with the Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order 2003. [194433]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS is committed to the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate. As part of that Framework we are required under Part E Energy—Target E4 to source at least 15 per cent. of electricity from Good Quality Heat and Power by 2010 (allowances will be made for those Departments that already purchase combined purchase 100 per cent. renewable energy). DCMS is not able to source a suitable supply of CHP and has taken the decision to increase its procurement of renewable energy. Our offices at 2–4 Cockspur Street were supplied with a 100 per cent. Green Energy from January 2004 and our office at 179a Tottenham Road was supplied with Green Energy from September 2003. One of our NDPBs, the Science Museum has a small combined heat and power generating station.

TRANSPORT

Air Navigation Charging

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on proposed reforms to the charging system for airlines for the use of air navigation purposes. [R] [193772]

Charlotte Atkins: The Single European Sky (SES) Regulations, which came into force on the 20 April 2004, require the development of a common charging scheme for the recovery of the costs of air navigation services provided to airlines and other airspace users. An Implementing Rule to specify the details of the new charging scheme is under development by the European Commission but has not yet been finalised.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been done on the possible effects of reform of the charging system for airlines on smaller regional airlines; and what the result was of this research. [R] [193773]

Charlotte Atkins: The Government has undertaken no research on this matter. The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) has produced a discussion paper outlining the flaws in the existing en-route charging system and presenting a number of key principles against which reform should be judged. A key theme of the work was that the scheme should be more cost-reflective and that the user should pay for any services used.

Aviation Fuel

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what position the Government took at the recent meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organisation in respect of (a) the taxing of aviation fuel on planes, (b) the taxing of aviation fuel held in storage at airports, (c) the introduction of en route emissions charges and (d) the proposal that no use of new market mechanisms should take place until at least 2007. [192242]

Charlotte Atkins: At the 35th ICAO Assembly (27 September–8 October) the UK acted as spokesperson for the 41 member states of the European Civil Aviation Conference (ECAC). We succeeded in getting recognition for the first time that ICAO policy on the exemption of aviation fuel from taxation has been called into question in some States which impose taxes on other transport modes and other sources of greenhouse gases.

More generally, ECAC States succeeded in their aim of keeping open market-based options to tackle the climate change impacts of aviation. The new Assembly Resolution gives us flexibility to continue to pursue the policies set out in the Air Transport White Paper—to press for the inclusion of intra-EU aviation in the EU emissions trading scheme; as well as to explore and discuss options for the use of other economic instruments.

States were urged to refrain from the unilateral implementation of greenhouse gas emissions charges prior to the next regular session of the Assembly in 2007—this was acceptable to ECAC as it represents a realistic time-scale for putting any market-based measures in place.

Flight Overbooking

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to address overbooking of flights by commercial airlines. [193459]

Charlotte Atkins: On any particular flight there is likely to be a proportion of passengers, mainly from those holding flexible tickets, who do not check in. On the basis of statistical evidence from previous flights, airlines estimate the probable number of no-shows and overbook accordingly. On the great majority of flights no passengers are denied boarding, and by reducing the number of empty seats overbooking keeps fares lower than they would otherwise be. This practice is widely accepted by passenger organisations and by regulators as being in the best interests of consumers generally.

In the comparatively small proportion of cases where denied boarding occurs, existing Community legislation requires Community air carriers to provide prescribed minimum levels of financial compensation, in addition to offering passengers a choice between re-routeing and reimbursement. On 17 February 2005 a new EC Regulation is due to enter force, which will increase the minimum levels of compensation payable to those affected by overbooking and extend cover to passengers on both scheduled and non-scheduled flights.

Government Offices for the Regions

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role Government Offices for the Regions play in (a) the provision of transport and (b) the development of transport infrastructure. [194329]

Charlotte Atkins: The nine Government Offices are the primary vehicle through which a wide range of Government policies are delivered in the English regions. The Government Offices promote Government policies and programmes and use their influence to enable communities in their regions to become better places in which to live, through the effective alignment and delivery of national, regional and local priorities.

On transport, the Government Offices assist in accelerating the delivery of the Secretary of State's national objectives for transport, including delivery of PSA targets in the region, through partnership with DfT and relevant national, regional and local bodies. The Government Offices do not have direct responsibility for the provision of transport infrastructure, but they assist in the development of such infrastructure, for example by:

> advising local authorities on the development of major transport schemes, helping to ensure that these support local transport plan objectives and the wider objectives of regional planning guidance;
> helping to inform Ministers' understanding of local authority performance and of funding priorities;
> working with regional assemblies as they develop their regional transport strategies to provide a long-term planning framework for transport in the region; and > informing the development of national policy for transport, by giving the Department for Transport insights into local and regional issues and the practical impact of existing policies and programmes, including across transport modes.

New Deal (Departmental Recruitment)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many personnel the Department has recruited under the New Deal in each of the past five years. [194474]

Charlotte Atkins: The Cabinet Office collects New Deal data centrally on a quarterly basis. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office of 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1052W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Businesses (York)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses in York (a) there were in 1997, (b) there are now, (c) started trading between 1997 and now, and (d) ceased trading between 1997 and now. [192405]

Nigel Griffiths: Barclays Bank's latest survey of business creation includes non-VAT registered firms and shows that there were 465,000 business start-ups in England and Wales in 2003. This represents a 19 per cent. increase on the year before. There were 1,400 business start-ups in York in 2003. Business start-up data for Unitary Authorities are not available for before 2003. Data on the number of business closures in each Unitary Authority are not available.

DTI figures based solely on VAT registrations and de-registrations for York local authority are shown in the following table for 1997 and 2002. Data for 2003 will be available in autumn 2004.

VAT Registrations, De-registrations and Stock in York Unitary Authority

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	1997–2002
VAT Registrations	435	415	410	445	440	435	—	2,580
VAT De-registrations	350	330	360	360	380	390	—	2,170
Start of year VAT Stock	4,035	4,115	4,200	4,250	4,335	4,395	4,440	—

Source:
Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994–2002, Small Business Service, available from: www.sbs.gov.uk/statistics/vatstats.php

VAT registrations do not capture all start-up activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if they fall below the compulsory VAT threshold, which has risen in each year since 1997. Similarly, businesses that de-register will not necessarily have closed. Only 1.8 million out of 4 million enterprises were registered for VAT at the start of 2003. Data on the total number of businesses trading are not available below the level of government office region.

Experimental Fusion Reactor

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Government's assessment of the EU position that the experimental fusion reactor should be built in France. [193161]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK Government believe that the ITER (International Tokamak Experimental Reactor) project will have the best chance of success if it is located at the European site in France. The UK will continue to support the European bid.

Information and Communication Specialists

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Department spent on outside information technology and communication specialist consultants and engineers in and 2003–04 financial year. [191909]

Ms Hewitt: Central records indicate that a total of £24.03 million was spent on Information and Communications Technology (ICT) consultancy in the 2003–04 financial year. Additional expenditure may have been incurred through local contract action. However, this information could be extracted only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Expenses

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in her Department have been in each year since 1997. [191383]

Ms Hewitt: The running costs for the Ministers' private offices are as follows:

	£ million
1997–98	3.8
1998–99	4.2
1999–2000	3.4
2000–01	3.6
2001–02	[1]2.8
2002–03	2.4
2003–04	2.2

[1] Revised figure—previously published as £4.08 million.

Nuclear Waste

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reports she has received from British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. in respect of the technical possibility of the encapsulation and long-term storage of previously wet-stored Magnox fuel. [193503]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Magnox fuel, which has become wet through storage in the reactor stations' cooling ponds or in the pond of the Fuel Handling Plant at Sellafield corrodes with time with associated release of very soluble materials. This makes reprocessing wetted fuel the preferred technical option.

Should the Magnox reprocessing plant be unable to reprocess fuel, and there were significant quantities of wetted fuel remaining, one option could be to encapsulate intact fuel elements in drums for interim storage. Ongoing research has concentrated on the thermal and corrosion effects of a range of potential encapsulants and the durability of the resultant encapsulated package. Further research, technical and regulatory assessments would be required to provide the assurances necessary to make this option viable.

One North East

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the budget of One North East is in the current financial year. [193335]

Jacqui Smith: The gross expenditure budget for One North East in the current financial year is £271.219 million. This consists of a DTI budget of £213.949 million supplemented by income from own resources and other funding such as ERDF.

Shareholder Executive

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what authority the Minister for the Cabinet Office retains over the Shareholder Executive. [192743]

Ms Hewitt: The Shareholder Executive advises me—and is therefore accountable to me—on my Department's shareholder or other financial interest in the following businesses: British Energy plc, British Nuclear Fuels plc, Export Credit Guarantee Department, Royal Mail Holdings plc and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what appointments she has made to the Shareholder Executive. [192782]

Ms Hewitt: A number of appointments have been made at senior civil service level and more junior grades both by the Cabinet Office and the Department of Trade and Industry.

Small Businesses (Yorkshire)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many small businesses there were in (a) Yorkshire and the Humber and (b) the City of York (i) in 1997 and (ii) at the latest date for which figures are available. [191170]

Nigel Griffiths: The information is as follows:

There were 288,650 small businesses (0–49 employees) at the start of 1997 in the Yorkshire and Humberside region.

There were 253,425 small businesses (0–49 employees) at the start of 2001 in the Yorkshire and Humberside region.

At the start of 1997 there were 4,035 VAT registered businesses in York Unitary Authority.

At the start of the 2003 there were 4,440 VAT registered businesses in York Unitary Authority.

There were 72,250 new VAT registrations in Yorkshire and the Humber GOR in the years 1997 to 2002

There were 2,580 new registrations in York UA in the years 1997 to 2002.

Sub-Post Offices

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many sub-post offices proposed for closure under Post Office Ltd.'s reinvention programme are in neighbourhood renewal areas; how many (a) sub-post offices have been closed, (b) sub-post offices have been saved from closure, (c) proposals have been approved by Postwatch, (d) sub-post offices have been closed against the views expressed by Postwatch, (e) proposals remain under consideration for closure and (f) proposals remain under consideration for closure while being opposed by Postwatch; and if she will make a statement. [194445]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Implementation of the urban post office network reinvention programme is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to respond direct to my hon. Friend.

Textiles

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps have been taken by the Textile and Clothing Strategy Group since June 2000. [193183]

Nigel Griffiths: The Textiles and Clothing Strategy Group's (TCSG) second report "Making it Happen" published in July 2002 records many actions taken by Government and industry to improve the productivity and competitiveness of the sector and looks a the changes to the industry since the report was issued, considering the extent to which they affect the initial's report's recommendations and assesses, the challenges ahead.

Actions by Government featured in "Making it Happen" include:

£1.5 million towards a £3.8 million Textiles and Clothing Industry Forum.

Support for textiles and clothing exporters.

Provided a Designer Manufacturer Handbook, a "toolkit".

Assistance for young UK designers through support to London Fashion Week.

A technical textiles project co-ordinator and £2 million of support granted since June 2000 for technical textile projects activities.

£2 million retraining initiative for the industry: The Strategic Training for Apparel and Textiles (STAT) programme.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Agribusiness

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's definition is of agribusiness; and whether it includes agricultural import-export investments. [193318]

Hilary Benn: An agribusiness is a business in the agricultural sector, including the processing and distribution of agricultural products, and agricultural import-export businesses.

AIDS/TB/Malaria

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans his Department has to contribute to the global fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria. [190994]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK played a leading role in setting up the global fund to tackle AIDS, TB and Malaria (GFATM), and we believe it has a crucial role in fighting AIDS, TB and Malaria.

In July, the UK announced a doubling of its pledge from 2005 to 2008, subject to the GFATM demonstrating its effectiveness. This brings our overall pledge to approximately £259 million (US$449 million, 2002–03 to 2007–08) making the UK the fourth largest donor to the global fund.

Bangladesh

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what reports he has received from the British High Commissioner to Bangladesh on the ongoing effect of the recent floods that took place in Bangladesh; what assistance the UK has given to that country; and if he will make a statement. [193489]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Heavy monsoon rain in Bangladesh and surrounding countries in July, led to major flooding over Bangladesh. This was exacerbated by a localised monsoon depression, which swept over Bangladesh in September, bringing three limes the normal rainfall and causing flooding in Dhaka, the southwest and central areas of the country, including several districts, which had not been affected by the previous flood.

Damage assessments, including that undertaken on behalf of the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), estimate that over 33 million people have been affected by the floods, over two million dwellings damaged and some four million inhabitants displaced. Homes, schools, clinics, roads, bridges, small-scale enterprises and crops have been damaged. Many people were forced to sell off their livestock and many days employment, hence income, lost. Tube wells and other water sources were contaminated and up to three million latrines damaged or washed away, leaving the population with limited or no access to safe water and sanitation, increasing the risks of diarrhoea and other waterborne diseases. An Asian Development Bank (ADB)/World Bank (WB) mission in September estimated total damage to assets and output losses at $2.2 billion (£1.1 billion), representing 3.9 per cent. of GDP.

The monsoon season is now nearly over and the flood situation continues to improve. All emergency flood shelters are now closed. However, there remain some rises in the Brahmaputra-Jumuna river water level, with two out of 86 monitoring stations remaining above danger level.

When the floods commenced in July, the UK Government led the international donor community to ensure immediate emergency needs were met. The UK was the first to announce bilateral support for the flood-affected people of Bangladesh. On 26 July the UK Government allocated £10 million through DFID to meet immediate flood emergency needs. £5 million of this was channelled through United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and £5 million through World Food Programme (WFP). Supporting these two organizations ensured that both food and non-food emergency needs of those affected by the flood were met. This initial £10 million has now been fully utilised to provide food packages of rice, pulses, oil, salt and nutritionally fortified high-energy biscuits; and non-food support, including shelter and agricultural support (such as provision of seedlings) to over 900,000 families (4.5 million people) affected by the floods. In particular, the relief was targeted on the six worst affected districts—Brahmanbaria, Habiganj, Kishoreganj, Netrokona, Sirajganj and Sunamganj.

This assistance was delivered by 22 national and international non-governmental organisations with a strong track record in effective relief delivery in Bangladesh. These included Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC), Save the Children Fund (SCF) (UK), Oxfam, CARE, Islamic Relief, Concern, Christian Aid, United Nations Food and Population Fund (UNFPA), Action Aid, International Centre for Diarrhoeal Diseases and Research, Bangladesh (ICDDR-B), Gonoshasthaya Kendra, and Handicap International.

The UK Government then turned its attention to the extensive recovery and rehabilitation needs of Bangladesh. On 12 August, the United Nations launched its Consolidated Appeal for $210 million (£117 million) to meet relief and recovery needs for the next 6 months. Again, the UK Government acted swiftly to meet the need. I announced on 18 August an additional £15 million through DFID, for Bangladesh to support the repair, replacement and maintenance of roads and bridges; to provide food, shelter, clean water, sanitation, medial supplies; and to provide funds for cash-for-work programmes to give people affected by the floods the opportunity to earn income to help recover from the floods.

From this £15 million, £1 million has been channelled to the World Food Programme to support their provision of food to those affected by the floods and £2 million has been channelled through UNDP to provide temporary and longer-term shelter to 194,000 flood affected families, working in partnership with the Local Government and Engineering Department (LGED). Another £4 million has been channelled through UNDP to support NGO-managed 'cash for work' programmes. £2 million is being channelled to the World Health Organisation (WHO) through UNDP to provide medical supplies to maternal and child welfare centres and urban clinics. £2 million is being channelled through UNDP to United Nations Children's Fund (UNCIEF) to work with the Department of Public Health Engineering (DPHE) to restore access to safe water and sanitation facilities. DFID's support is contributing to UNICEF's efforts to help up to 30 million people in 40 out of Bangladesh's 64 districts.

The final £4 million will support the Government of Bangladesh's request for emergency financing for roads, bridges and culverts damaged by the recent floods. £3.9 million is for financial aid for emergency repair and reconstruction; and a further £0.1 million for technical assistance to provide oversight to the Roads and Highways Department response.

DFID has also lobbied the EC to increase the European Community Humanitarian Office (ECHO)'s contribution of €2.9 million (£2 million). The UK Government's support to Bangladesh to ensure it is better able to cope with the impact of disasters, will not stop with the end of this year's floods. The UK Government, through DFID, is providing £6 million over five years to the Comprehensive Disaster Management Programme which is strengthening the Government of Bangladesh's capacity to deliver long-term sustainable risk management practices as an integral part of national development planning, and to increase the effectiveness of the Government's emergency responses and post recovery management.

The UK Government are aware that even this generous support may not be sufficient to ensure Bangladesh can recover quickly and rebuild after the floods. That is why I have approved another £4 million today for the World Food Programme's Emergency Response Programme (EMOP), which is currently only 20 per cent. subscribed. This will enable the poorest flood victims to have continued access to food during the period of scarcity, which has followed the floods and may last up to February 2005.

DFID is also providing £7 million over six years to strengthen the World Food Programme in Bangladesh, to better equip them to meet the food security needs of Bangladesh, including in disasters.

CDC

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list (a) current and (b) previous CDC investments in China's agribusiness sector by (i) amount, (ii) location and (iii) date. [193288]

Hilary Benn: CDC has made no investments in the agribusiness sector in China.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the executive performance bonus scheme for CDC/Actis Capital and its objectives. [193289]

Hilary Benn: CDC has a Short-Term Incentive Plan (STIP) and a Long term Incentive Plan (LTIP) for its staff. The STIP is linked to achievement of the Investment Policy Targets, prudent financial management, and development of CDC's relations with potential partners. The LTIP is linked to financial performance, mobilisation of third-party capital, and development impact.

Remuneration in Actis is managed by its Supervisory Board. The remuneration principles are set out in Schedule 12 of the Members' Agreement, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much capital CDC/Actis Capital has (a) invested and (b) managed in China in each year since 1999. [193319]

Hilary Benn: The amounts are shown in the following table:

US$ million

	Amount invested	Funds under management
1999	0	0
2000	25.0	100.0
2001	30.0	100.0
2002	7.5	100.0
2003	12.0	100.0
2004	10.0	100.0

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to his answer of 14 September 2004, Official Report, column 1518W, on CDC/Actis Capital, whether CDC's investments in China qualify as bilateral aid. [193324]

Hilary Benn: I confirm that CDC investments in China are classified as bilateral aid.

China Capital Partners

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people are employed by China Capital Partners Ltd.; and if he will list the locations of its offices. [193322]

Hilary Benn: China Capital Partners employs seven people and has one office, which is in Beijing.

Locusts

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to provide assistance to (a) Niger, (b) Mauritania, (c) Chad, (d) Gambia, (e) Mali and (f) Senegal, following the recent plague of locusts that has ravaged crops and land. [193818]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development (DFID) has provided £1.5 million to the emergency international appeal for locust control in the West Africa Region, issued by the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO). This appeal covers operations in all of the above countries. UK funding will assist the immediate emergency control of swarms over the next three months. In addition, the European Commission is providing €23.5 million (£16.3 million) to assist those countries worst affected. The UK's attributed share of this assistance will be approximately £3 million.

Malawi

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects his Department is supporting in the Kayezi region of Malawi. [192291]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development supports national programmes in Malawi on health (TB, Sexual Reproductive Health Programme, National Immunization and Malaria Programme), primary education, HIV/AIDS, targeted inputs, safety and security and access to justice.

Kayezi falls within the Mzimba district where it benefits from the programmes mentioned above.

Policy Programmes

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the policy programmes undertaken by his Department in each of the last three years, broken down by (a) risk level, (b) cost and (c) purpose of each programme; and if he will make a statement. [194314]

Hilary Benn: DFID undertakes a large number of projects and programmes involving policy, most of which involves knowledge and research. This ranges from acquisition of knowledge to implementation of programme objectives. In reply to the hon. Member's question of 21 October 2004, Official Report, column 850W, a list of contracts including those involving knowledge and research, issued by DFID over the last five years is being placed in the Library. This includes consultants contracted for the purpose of knowledge and research. The project title in those cases provides an indication of the objective of the activity but to set out the purpose and risk level of each would involve disproportionate cost. In addition to these contracts, much of DFID's policy formulation is carried out in-house through the work of DFID's Policy Division.

Over the last 3 years, DFID has spent £540 million on Knowledge and Research. Of the above total, expenditure on centrally funded research (that is research more concerned with global rather than country issues) is around £85 million per year rising to at least £100 million per year in 2006–07.

DFID funds research, on a wide variety of policy issues. A Research Funding Framework has just been published which is available on the DFID website. www.dfid.gov.uk. This identifies four major themes, which will take some two-thirds of research funding: sustainable agriculture, especially in Africa; killer diseases; climate change; and work to identify policy options in situations where states do not work for the poor. Some research—such as that relating to an HIV vaccine—is high risk, but worth supporting because the potential benefits are also very high.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the Private Finance Initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193978]

Hilary Benn: DFID has no Private Finance Initiative arrangements.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Executive Agencies (Yorkshire)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many full-time equivalent jobs (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies had in (i) Yorkshire and the Humber and (ii) the City of York in (A) 1997 and (B) the latest year for which figures are available. [191854]

Phil Hope: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Ruth Kelly) on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1053 W.

Gypsies

Tom Cox: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Gypsy caravan sites are registered in England and Wales. [194136]

Keith Hill: As at January 2004 there were 342 local authority Gypsy and Traveller sites in England. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect data on the number of privately-owned Gypsy and Traveller sites, but does conduct a count of the number of caravans on such sites which, as at January 2004, stood at 4,890.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect data on Gypsy and Traveller sites in Wales. The Welsh Assembly has responsibility for Gypsy and Traveller policy in Wales.

Fire (Emergency Calls)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) genuine and (b) malicious false alarm fire emergency calls were received in (i) Greater London and (ii) each London borough in each year since 1999. [194313]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of fire false alarm calls attended by the London Fire Brigade since 1999 is tabled as follows. Genuine false alarms are those generated by automatic equipment and by people believing that there was a fire (good intent).

Housing Renewal Pathfinder Areas

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many houses are earmarked for demolition (a) this and (b) next year in each of the Housing Pathfinder areas in England. [193234]

Keith Hill: The following table outlines the estimated demolitions in the eight pathfinders that have been awarded grant from the housing market renewal fund for the period to March 2006.

Indemnity

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the personal indemnity of members and officers of local authorities; and what plans he has to change the Government advice on such indemnity. [194281]

Mr. Raynsford: A draft order on indemnities for relevant authority members and officers was considered by Committee on 20 October 2004 and approved by the whole House on 25 October 2004. It is awaiting consideration in the other place.

The order would permit (but not oblige) authorities to provide indemnities and insurance that would provide "cover" for a member or officer:

if the member or officer had acted honestly and in good faith when taking the action giving rise to the liability if the authority was found to have acted ultra vires, but at the point at which the member or officer acted that member or officer honestly and reasonably believed that the action or advice giving rise to the liability was intra vires the authority; to cover the costs incurred by a member in relation to defence of proceedings under the Code of Conduct but limited to cases in which the member is found not to have breached the code.

Copies of the draft order are available in the House Library.

Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussion took place between his Department and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on the effects of the landfill allowance trading scheme on local authorities in growth areas. [193753]

Mr. Raynsford: Discussions take place between the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs regularly to consider issues such as the landfill allowance trading scheme.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what additional funding will be given to local authorities in growth areas through the Environmental protection and cultural services block grant to compensate for the effects of the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme. [193754]

Mr. Raynsford: The Spending Review 2004 provides £7.2 billion more in general grant for local government programmes by 2007–08 over 2004–05. Part of these resources will support the achievement of significant diversion of waste from landfill during the SR04 period. The Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme is designed to reduce the amount of biodegradable municipal waste that is sent to landfill in England in the most cost-effective way. The Government recognises that certain authorities facing above average population growth may find the implementation of the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme challenging and there are a range of measures in place to support local authorities meeting this challenge. In addition, officials from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are meeting with representatives from certain growth areas to discuss the issues surrounding population growth.

Local Authority Housing

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which local authorities have (a) started and (b) completed their consultation with tenants on (i) arm's length management organisations (ALMOs), (ii) use of the private finance initiative and (iii) use of stock transfer in relation to ownership of housing; which of those authorities have held ballots with their tenants on ALMOs, PFI and stock transfer; when those ballots were held; and what percentage was (A) in favour and (B) against each option in each such ballot. [193887]

Keith Hill: Consultation with tenants occurs throughout the Options Appraisal process. Local authorities are all required to go through this process, but an Options Appraisal will not be signed off unless the Government Office is satisfied that tenants are properly consulted. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister would normally consider a ballot to be the most formal type of consultation with tenants. These are normally only undertaken for transfer and Arm's Length Management Organisations (ALMOs). Although ballots are not generally undertaken for PFI schemes, tenants are required to be consulted and section 27 consent must be given.

Tabled is a detailed breakdown of the figures requested. It covers all ballots since the Decent Homes Programme began in 2001, including partials, and shows that 73 ballots have taken place for transfer, while 18 have balloted tenants successfully for Arm's Length Management Programmes.

42 local authorities have had their Options Appraisals signed off by Government Offices. 150 local authorities have not had Options Appraisals signed off, and so are either engaging with tenants or about to do so.

Local Government (North-east)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for North Essex on 20 October 2004, Official Report, columns 879–80, on local government administration in the North-East after the referendum, whether he intends to reduce the number of councils regardless of the outcome of the referendum. [194201]

Mr. Raynsford: There are at present no plans to introduce changes to the structure of local government except in those areas where an elected regional assembly is established. Under the Regional Assemblies (Preparations) Act local government change can only be introduced if a referendum has been held and an elected regional assembly is to be established as a result.

Northern Distributor Road

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what evaluation has been made of the effect of the second section of the Northern Distributor Road on the Church Marshes country park at Kemsley, near Sittingbourne. [194158]

Keith Hill: The Swale borough local plan, adopted in July 2000, proposed bringing the Church Marshes country park into public use as a recreation area and country park and made specific reference to the need to safeguard reserved land for the road proposals. The county council is working closely with Swale borough council and Medway Swale Groundwork who are progressing the country park. As part of the planning application for the new road, an Environmental Statement is being produced and this will cover all the environmental aspects and mitigation measures.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment has been made of the second section of the Northern Distributor Road's proximity to local housing at Kemsley, near Sittingbourne. [194160]

Keith Hill: As part of the planning application for the new road, an Environmental Statement is being produced. This will make an assessment of the traffic noise and visual intrusion on properties.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what public consultation there has been on the second section of the Northern Distributor Road in Milton. [194161]

Keith Hill: An exhibition has been recently held in the area and comments on the proposal were invited. The responses will form part of the normal consultation undertaken by the planning authority in consideration of the Planning Application about to be submitted.

Planning Applications

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the average time taken to process planning applications. [193238]

Keith Hill: The performance of authorities in handling planning applications is measured both against targets set for the proportion of decisions taken within set time limits, and targets for average determination times. The Government's PSA6 target for planning delivery states that English local authorities taken together will process an average of 65 per cent. of major applications in 13 weeks, 72 per cent. of minor applications in eight weeks, and 87 per cent. of other applications in eight weeks by 31 March 2007.

The latest available data for the year ending June 2004, shows that planning authorities determined 53 per cent. of major applications in 13 weeks, 66 per cent. of minor applications, and 82 per cent. of other applications, in eight weeks. This is an improvement on previous years and these figures show that the Government is on target to meet it's PSA6 target for Planning Delivery by 31 March 2007.

Police Funding

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what adjustments in the (a) police funding formula and (b) capping regime he plans to make to take account of strategic development plans for expansion in the South-East and East Midlands. [193638]

Mr. Raynsford: The Police funding formula estimates relative need for police resources. Formula grant allocations are currently subject to floors and ceilings.

Decisions on the floors and ceilings for 2005–06 have not yet been taken. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is actively considering the effects of the ceiling policy on rapid population growth areas in advance of the 2005–06 allocation. Looking further ahead, we are committed to delivering three-year settlements for local government, and will be addressing Kate Barker's recommendation to make the grant system more forward looking.

No decisions on capping in 2005–06 and beyond have been made. But the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made it clear that we expect to see significantly lower council tax increases next year and will take even tougher capping action in 2005–06 if that proves necessary.

Social Housing (London)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice is given to London Boroughs on (a) disposal of property assets and (b) meeting the need for social housing in London; and if he will make a statement. [194011]

Keith Hill: Section 123 of the Local Government Act 1972, gives authorities discretion to dispose of land in any manner they wish although it is generally expected that local authority property should be sold for the best consideration reasonably obtainable (usually open market value). Consent of the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is required to dispose of land if it falls outside the scope of the General Disposal Consent given in Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Circular 06/2003.

The revised General Disposal Consent that came into effect on 4 August 2003 gave local authorities greater freedom and flexibility to make decisions about land disposals which will contribute to the promotion or improvement of the economic, social or environmental well-being of an area at less than best consideration, providedthat the undervalue does not exceed two million pounds.

For the disposal of housing land and property, whether by sale of the freehold or on leasehold, terms local authorities require the consent of the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister under Section 32 of the Housing Act 1985. The General Consents for the disposal of Houses and Land 1999, issued under Section 32, cover the most common types of small disposal of untenanted stock or disposals to sitting tenants, and includes a commentary giving guidance to local authorities. However, where a proposed disposal falls outside the terms of these General Consents, a local authority may apply to the Secretary of State, my right. hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister for a specific consent under section 32.

Local authorities have both housing and planning responsibilities, and are required to produce local housing strategies and local development frameworks. Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: Housing (March 2000), paragraph 13, states that assessments of housing need that underpin local housing strategies and local plan policies are matters for local authorities to undertake in the light of their local circumstances. Advice to assist local authorities in preparing local housing needs assessments is set out in "Local Housing Needs Assessment": "A Guide to Good Practice (Department of the Environment Transport and the Regions, July 2000)". It is intended to publish an updated PPG3 in the Autumn.

Standards Board

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many complaints against councillors he has received in each year since the inception of the Standards Board, broken down by local authority; and whether the complaint (a) was proven, (b) was unproven or rejected for lack of evidence and (c) is pending in each case. [194279]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has no remit in the consideration of allegations of misconduct against local authority members. The investigation of such allegations is a matter for ethical standards officers appointed by the Standards Board for England.

The Standards Board does not hold information in the form requested, and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, information in respect of the number of cases received in 2003–04 is tabled as follows, of the total of 3,566 allegations listed in Table 1 about 1,100 cases were referred for investigation. The types of finding made following the completion of investigations are set out in Table 2.

Table 1

Type of authority	Number of allegations received 2003–04
County council	156
District council	932
Unitary council	296
Parish/Town council	1,754
London borough	146
Metropolitan borough	252
Other authority	30
Total	3,566

Table 2: Type of finding following investigations completed 2003–04

	Number
Either no breach or a breach but no further action needed	661
Referral of cases for determination by standards committees at local level	60
Referral of cases for determination by the Adjudication Panel	102
Total	823

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average time taken for deliberation on a complaint received by the Standards Board is; and what the longest time someone has waited for a verdict is. [194280]

Mr. Raynsford: The current average time taken for all cases received by the Standards Board from receipt to the completion of investigations by the board's ethical standards officers is about three months. The longest time so far taken from the receipt of a case to its conclusion through a finding of an ethical standards officer or the determination of a standards committee or the Adjudication Panel for England, is 667 days.

Supporting People

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what systems his Department operates for monitoring individual Supporting People projects. [194202]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not monitor individual Supporting People services but does have a rigorous system for monitoring the level of service provision in each administrative authority. This includes capturing information on all reviews carried out on individual Supporting People services, the number of services provided for each client group and we will soon be collecting data on positive outcomes delivered for vulnerable people.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether Supporting People projects are under the same statutory obligation to support vulnerable people as local authorities. [194203]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has grant conditions that govern the use of the Supporting People grant by administering authorities. On the basis of these conditions, all administering authorities enter in to a legally binding contractual relationship with service providers, and these service providers therefore have a legal obligation to provide housing related support services to vulnerable users until the contractual relationship expires.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what independent right of appeal exists for individuals disappointed with the service from Supporting People projects. [194204]

Keith Hill: Administering authorities are responsible for commissioning and overseeing Supporting People services. Individual Supporting People services should have in place a robust complaints procedure which all service users can access and understand easily. They can also appeal to the administering authority if they are disappointed with the service. The views of service users, particularly on the quality of the service, are also taken into account in the administering authority's review of every service.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what responsibility his Department has for setting (a) budgets and (b) guidelines for the Supporting People initiative. [194206]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has lead responsibility for the operation of the Supporting People programme. However:

(a) The budget for the programme for the next three years was decided as part of the Spending Review 2004 negotiations. Over £5 billion will be allocated to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for Supporting People over the next three years. We are now working on the allocation of this budget to individual local authorities.

(b) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister sets the grant conditions for the Supporting People programme following consultation with other Government Departments and other key stakeholders. They are also formally approved by the Treasury. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is also responsible for issuing other guidelines on the programme, and does this in conjunction with other Government Departments, as Supporting People is a cross-cutting programme.

Women's Refuges

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what public funds are available to women's refuges for support of women and children. [192964]

Phil Hope: The Supporting People Programme makes funding available for the provision of housing-related support services to enable individuals to maintain or improve independent living. It is for individual Supporting People Commissioning Bodies and Administering Authorities, operating at the top-tier level of local government, to decide what services should be provided in their area. This can, however, include services for people fleeing domestic violence, including services provided at or through women's refuges. The national Supporting People budget for 2004–05 is £1.8 billion, and Administering Authorities forecast that £56.97 million of this will be spent on housing-related support services for women fleeing domestic violence.

Public funds are also available in the form of housing benefit where appropriate, to assist with rental costs. Refuges working in partnership with registered social landlords (RSLs) can also apply for the Social Housing Grant, to assist with repairs and refurbishment costs or new development.

As children are not regarded as being capable of maintaining an independent tenancy, Supporting People does not directly provide support to them. However, they will be able to benefit from relevant housing-related support services aimed at their parents.

HEALTH

Air Ambulances

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost to the NHS has been of helicopter hire for emergency services purposes in each year since 1992. [193965]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. It is for each national health service trust to decide how best to make use of its resources.

Alzheimer's Disease

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total expenditure on drugs available on the NHS for Alzheimer's disease was in North Southwark and Bermondsey in each year since 1997. [193957]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 26 October 2004]: Data on the number of prescription items dispensed in the community and the net ingredient cost is collected by the Prescription Pricing Authority. The total number of prescription items dispensed for dementia drugs and the net ingredient cost of these drugs, in the area covered by Southwark Primary Care Trust from 2001 to 2003, is shown in the following table. Data is not available at constituency level or before 2001.

Number of prescription items and net ingredient cost of all drugs for dementia that were dispensed in the community in Southwark Primary Care Trust (PCT) and in England

	2001	2002	2003
Number of prescription items
Southwark PCT (Thousand)	0.1	0.4	0.7
England (Thousand)	122.1	231.3	358.2
Net ingredient cost
Southwark PCT (£000)	9.4	25.7	42.4
England (£000)	11,004.6	20,567.1	31,347.5

Notes:

1. PCA data covers all prescription items that are dispensed in the community in England, (this covers items dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered. PCA data does not include items dispensed in hospitals or private prescriptions. PCA data includes the PCT in which the drug for dementia was dispensed in.
2. Drugs for dementia are defined in the British National Formulary (BNF) section 4.11 "Drugs for dementia".
3. Doctors, dentists or nurses write prescriptions on a prescription form. Each single item written on the form is counted as a prescription item.
4. Net ingredient cost refers to the basic cost (which the dispenser is reimbursed) of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

Antidepressants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much the NHS spent on antidepressants in real terms in each year since 1997 in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority; [193411]

(2) how many prescriptions for antidepressants were given in the NHS in each year since 1997 in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority. [193412]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information at strategic health authority (SHA) level is only available for 2002 and 2003. Information on the number of prescription items and net ingredient cost of all antidepressants dispensed in the community in England from 1997, and the number of prescription items and net ingredient cost of all antidepressants prescribed in general practitioner practices in England, that were dispensed in the community in 2002 and 2003, broken down by SHA have been placed in the Library.

Disabled People (Independent Living)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the proposed right to independent living for disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [194306]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government actively promotes a range of initiatives designed to support independent living for disabled people. Independent living is also one of the key themes in the project, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People," currently being carried out by the strategy unit.

Doctor and Nurse Numbers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses were employed in Nottingham (i) in 1997 and (ii) on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [193590]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is shown in the table.

Drug Action Teams

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the real terms percentage change in the budget for each drug action team in England was in each year from 1996–97 to 2003–04; what the percentage change will be from 2003–04 to 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [163883]

Miss Melanie Johnson [pursuant to her reply, 18 May 2004, Official Report, c. 947W]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. This was due to an administrative oversight with the collection of the statistics. It should read as follows:

This is the first Government to make substantial funding available for drug treatment. The pooled drug treatment budget totalled £129 million in 2001–02. In 2002–03, the total budget was £195.7 million and this increased to £243.6 million in 2003–04. This additional funding means that all drug action teams (DATs) received a minimum increase of 30 per cent. in 2002–03, with a further average increase of 24 per cent. in 2003–04.

Information on percentage increases in the budget of DATs between 1996 and 2001–02 is not available, as drug treatment was then part of mainstream expenditure. Figures for the increases from 2001 to 2005 are shown in the table.

Learning Disorders

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the percentage of school age children with some degree of learning disorder, broken down by type of disorder. [191493]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

From January 2004 the Department began collecting data about children's type of Special Educational Need (SEN) as part of the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census (PLASC).

Maintained and non-maintained schools were asked to record pupils' primary or greatest special need and also their secondary need where that was appropriate. Data were collected for all pupils with statements of SEN and those at School Action Plus. As this is the first year of collection, the data need to be treated with a degree of caution.

Nationally, 3 per cent. of school pupils have statements of SEN and 4.6 per cent. of school pupils are at School Action Plus.

Many pupils have more than one type of need. The table only gives figures for pupils' greatest or primary need of those with a statement of SEN or at School Action.

	Number	Percentage
Specific Learning Difficulty	83,780	14.2
Moderate Learning Difficulty	171,930	29.2
Severe Learning Difficulty	32,020	5.4
Profound and Multiple Learning Difficulty	7,780	1.3
Behaviour, Emotional and Social Difficulty	126,890	21.6
Speech, Language and Communication Needs	63,890	10.9
Autistic Spectrum Disorder	31,260	5.3
Visual impairment	7,170	1.2
Hearing Impairment	12,960	2.2
Multi-Sensory Impairment	860	0.1
Physical Disability	24,660	4.2
Other	25,530	4.3

Of these, about 40 per cent. (237,000) have statements of SEN, the others are at School Action plus.

Long-term Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many older people are in receipt of long-term care in England; and how many have been in receipt of long-term care for over three years. [191481]

Dr. Ladyman: At 31 March 2001, there were about 403,000 places available in care homes in England for people aged 65 and over. This includes places in residential homes, general and mental nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics.

I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that figures for later years were collected by the National Care Standards Commission, and now CSCI, but comparable details are not available.

In 2002–03, 989,000 people aged 65 or over were receiving community-based services in England. This includes day care, meals, respite care, direct payments, professional support, transport and equipment as well as home care. This data excludes privately-funded residents.

A study conducted by the personal services research unit at the University of Kent in 1996 found that, on a snapshot, around 40 per cent., of older, publicly-funded residents had been in a care home for three years or more. This data excludes people who purchase their care privately.

Mental Health

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to improve mental health services for children and young people. [193337]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is undertaking a programme of improvement in child and adolescent mental health services (CAMHS). It is providing an additional £300 million to local authorities and the national health service from 2003–04 to 2005–06 for this purpose.

The Department published the children's national service framework (NSF) on 15 September 2004. This includes a standard on the mental health and psychological well-being of children and young people, setting out the recommended approach for providing comprehensive CAMHS to all who need them. A national CAMHS support service has been established to help local CAMHS providers and commissioners develop their services in line with the guidance set out in the children's NSF.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mobile phones were used by (a) Ministers and special advisers and (b) officials in his Department in each year since 1997; how many were (i) lost and (ii) stolen; and what their cost was. [191428]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Details of numbers and users of central departmental mobile phones are not kept on an annual basis. Information is therefore available only on the current position. There are 1,102 mobile phones currently in use, of which nine are used by Ministers and special advisers and 1,093 by officials.

The costs of the equipment, call charges and line rental in each financial year since 2001–02 are shown in table 1. Figures for the years 1997–98 to 2000–01 are not available.

1. Financial year costs

Financial year	Amount (£)
2001–02	270,000
2002–03	280,000
2003–04	304,000
2004–05	[1]144,500

[1] Figure to date.

Number of mobile phones lost and stolen and their cost are shown in table 2. Departmental records do not differentiate between lost and stolen mobile phones.

2. Lost/stolen phones and cost of replacement

Financial year	Numbers lost/stolen	Replacement purchase cost (£)
1997–98	19	769
1998–99	19	691
1999–2000	26	557
2000–01	43	1,332
2001–02	37	987
2002–03	37	2,693
2003–04	29	1,954
2004–05	51[1]	538

New Deal (Departmental Recruitment)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many personnel the Department has recruited under the new deal in each of the past five years. [194029]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 26 October 2004]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1052W, by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State at the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly).

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of NHS dentistry within a 20 mile radius of Sleaford; and what steps he will take to ensure that new patients will be accepted for NHS dentistry services in the area. [193838]

Dr. Ladyman: The Health and Social Care Act 2003 gave local primary care trusts the responsibility to ensure that primary dental services are accessible for the people who seek them in their area.

NHS Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional NHS facilities have been made available to people in Nottingham since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [193614]

Dr. Ladyman: The following additional facilities have been made available to the people of Nottingham since 1997.

Trent Strategic Health Authority (SHA)—Trent access and choice pilot (TRAC):

Trent SHA is a pilot site for introducing choice ahead of national timescales.

TRAC is working with three general practitioner practices, including one in Nottingham. From July 2003, the pilots have been offering a choice to patients on the waiting list for cataract operations. Initially this is a choice of national health service trusts and agreements are being reached with local trusts to provide extra clinics on a trial basis for TRAC.

Queens Medical Centre, Nottingham University Hospital NHS Trust:

Ear, nose and throat/ophthalmology unit opened in 2001.

Accident and emergency department expanded and modernised in 2003.

Maternity unit modernised and refurbished in 2003.

Patient advice and liaison service set up in 2003.

Simulation and clinical skills centre opened in 2004.

New magnetic resonance imaging scanner operational in 2004.

Nottingham City Hospital NHS Trust:

Extension of cardiac surgery unit (extension of existing services) 1997.

New high dependency unit (new service) opened 2000.

Re-provision of the endoscopy unit (to existing service) opened in 2001.

New orthopaedic pre-operative assessment suite (new service) opened in 2002.

Re-provision of the breast unit, which opened in 2003.

New clinical haematology wards opened in 2003.

Walk in Centre:

Nottingham walk-in-centre opened in June 2000.

Dental Access Centre (DAC):

A DAC was opened in Nottingham City Primary Care Trust in 2001.

Personal Dental Services—fieldsites:

Two personal dental services also opened in Nottingham in January 2004, at Broxtowe and Hucknall and Rushcliffe.

Independent Sector Treatment Centre:

Based at Barlborough, at junction 30 of the M1. An interim service is being provided from Bassetlaw and Ilkeston hospital, which commenced in April 2004. The full service from the new facility is due to commence in May 2005.

Pharmacy information:

Since 1997–98, five pharmacies have opened in the Nottingham area.

Pharmacies

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 497W, on pharmacies, what progress he is making in reviewing legislation regarding the arrangements for the dispensing and sale of medicines; and when he intends to consult on possible changes. [193449]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Good progress is being made and I hope to be able to issue a consultation document soon.

Silzone Heart Valves

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will take measures to ensure that all UK recipients of the St. Jude Silzone heart valve are alerted to the problems associated with these valves; [193086]

(2) what information he has collated on the compliance of cardiothoracic surgeons and cardiologists with the departmental advice of (a) November 1999 and (b) January 2000 regarding Silzone heart valves. [193091]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department issued advice to United Kingdom cardiothoracic surgeons and cardiologists on the problems associated with the St. Jude Silzone heart valve in November 1999 and January 2000. Specifically, the Department advised clinicians of the recall of Silzone heart valves; of the increased risk of complications with the Silzone heart valves and of the consequent need to undertake early review of all patients implanted with these valves. Clinicians are responsible for acting on this advice and for bringing relevant information to the attention of their patients.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make representations to the relevant authorities in the Republic of Ireland that they should alert Irish citizens who have received the St. Jude Silzone heart valve to the problems associated with these valves. [193087]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department notified other European competent authorities of the action taken in the United Kingdom, in relation to Silzone heart valves, via notifications through the medical devices vigilance system on 19 November 1999 and 3 February 2000. These notifications informed other European competent authorities of the UK's recommendation to undertake an early review of all patients implanted with the Silzone heart valve and gave background to this advice. Notifications of this type are the recognised method for exchanging information on the safety of medical devices between European member states.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of his departmental advice to UK cardiothoracic surgeons and cardiologists in (a) November 1999 and (b) January 2000 regarding Silzone heart valves. [193090]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Copies of the advice regarding Silzone heart valves (MDA AN1999(06), MDA DA2000(01)), issued to United Kingdom cardiothoracic surgeons and cardiologists in November 1999 and January 2000, have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the risk of complications to recipients of the St. Jude Silzone heart valve. [193093]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) evaluated reports of an apparently high rate of complications among patients implanted with Silzone heart valves. Consequently, the MHRA commissioned an independent assessment of these findings by the Society of Cardiothoracic Surgeons of Great Britain and Ireland, which confirmed the validity and statistical significance of these adverse event reports. In addition, the Department further commissioned a report on the biocompatibility of the Silzone heart valves by a leading United Kingdom professor of toxicology. The evaluation of these reports helped the MHRA in the decision to notify cardiothoracic surgeons and cardiologists in November 1999 and January 2000 regarding risks associated with the Silzone heart valves.

The MHRA has continued to monitor the Silzone heart valves through review of publications from the AVERT study. This is a clinical study of these valves, involving some 800 overseas patients, sponsored by the manufacturer, St. Jude Medical. The three publications to date have confirmed the MHRA's conclusions regarding the risk of complications for the Silzone heart valve.

Student Childcare Helpline

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the student childcare helpline does not indicate how much childcare assistance an individual is likely to receive until they have been accepted onto a course for nurse training. [193143]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The national health service student childcare helpline was set up following the announcement made in May 2004 by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Health (Mr. Hutton), to introduce an allowance to help students with their childcare costs during training. The purpose of the helpline is to provide prospective NHS professionals with easy access to general information about this new provision under the NHS bursary scheme. As the childcare allowance payable to NHS-funded students is means-tested, it is not possible for the helpline to identify or advise on the actual level of financial support in individual cases. An accurate assessment can be provided only by the NHS Pensions Agency student grants unit on receipt of a fully completed application form from the student, which contains all the necessary supporting information and documentation.

Waiting Times

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting times for operations in Nottingham were (a) in 1997 and (b) on the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [193612]

Dr. Ladyman: The information is shown in the table.

Total number of patients waiting for elective in-patient admission

Wilf Ward Family Trust

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1965W, on disabled people, what funding the Department has provided indirectly to the Wilf Ward family trust. [194935]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government do not allocate particular amounts to councils to spend on the care of disabled people. It is for each council to decide how much of its general funding allocation to spend for this purpose. Councils do this in the light of local needs and priorities. This includes funding made available to voluntary organisations.

If the Wilf Ward Family Trust was funded via a supporting people grant, that would be a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Local Government and the Regions (Mr. Raynsford).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Abortions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland where each termination in the Province in each of the last five years was performed; and what maternal illness was responsible in each case. [187803]

Angela Smith: Information is not available centrally on the maternal illness that was responsible for each termination and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many terminations in females from Northern Ireland aged 16 years or younger there were in each of the last five years. [187813]

Angela Smith: While the information required is available, the numbers involved are small and as a result individual patients could potentially be identified. For this reason it is felt that the disclosure of information on the number of terminations performed on females aged 16 years or younger is not appropriate.

Beef Exports

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to secure the lifting of restrictions on the export of beef from Northern Ireland. [193919]

Mr. Pearson: In Northern Ireland beef exports under the revised Date Based Export Scheme (DBES) have been possible from 30 September 2003. Currently two Northern Ireland companies export beef under DBES to various EU countries.

In the light of the recent positive opinion from the European Food Safety Authority on the UK case for moderate risk status we will continue to work with the EU Commission to ensure that restrictions on UK beef exports are lifted as quickly as possible.

In the meantime, my officials are working with industry stakeholders to explore the possibility of improving the operation of the Date Based Export Scheme. This is to examine ways to make DBES more financially viable for processors and therefore encourage further beef exports. If that can be achieved, it would be a welcome step in the right direction and would add value to beef, which should in turn feed back to producers.

Cancer Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding was provided for cancer care in the Province in each of the last 10 years. [192932]

Angela Smith: It is not possible to identify separately the amount spent on cancer care in each of the last 10 years. In total, approximately £73 million of capital funding was allocated for the period 1996–97 to 2004–05. Much of this funding is allocated to the construction of the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre (due to be completed at the beginning of 2006).

The Department has also provided significant additional revenue funding to boards for cancer services in the nine years from 1996–97 to 2004–05. In total the Department has allocated approximately £28 million recurrent and £1.3 million non-recurrent additional funding during this period. Boards may also have added to these resources.

We estimate that the total acute hospital expenditure on cancer services was some £62 million in the financial year 2002–03 and this figure is expected to increase in future years.

Child Poverty

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of children in Northern Ireland lived in poverty in (a) 1990, (b) 1995, (c) 2000 and (d) each year since 2000. [193377]

Mr. Spellar: The information sought by the hon. Lady is not available in the form requested, however the following details of child poverty in Northern Ireland are provided:

The Family Resources Survey has recently been extended to Northern Ireland. This contains information on the proportion of children (persons under 16 or 16–18 years old on a course up to c A' level standard) living in households below the 60 per cent. GB median household income level (after housing costs). The 2002–03 figure indicates that 26 per cent. of children are living in such households, with a weekly income below £172, in Northern Ireland.

Research published by the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister in the report 'Low Income Households in Northern Ireland' (2003), contains figures on the number of children living in low income households for the periods 1990–1994, 1997–1999 and 2000–2002. The Northern Ireland Poverty and Social Exclusion Survey (2003) also contains information on the proportion of children in 'consensual' poverty. I will ensure that copies of these reports are made available in the House of Commons Library.

Child Support

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of child support cases in Northern Ireland were being assessed under the new criteria as of 1 October. [193552]

Mr. Spellar: The percentage of child support cases in Northern Ireland being assessed under the new rules as of 1 October 2004 is 15 per cent.

Communicable Diseases

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the (a) size and (b) resources available to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre (CDSC) (NI). [193380]

Angela Smith: The Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre (CDSC) (NI) which is located at the Belfast City Hospital is staffed by two regional epidemiologists, a part-time consultant microbiologist, one epidemiology training fellow, two scientists and five administrative/clerical workers. CDSC is funded and directed by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety although the staff are employed by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). The funding available to HPA/CDSC in the financial year ending 31 March 2005 is £580,000. Expenditure in the year 2003–4 was £375,000.

Crime Statistics

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what convictions there have been over the last six months for serious crime involving members of the (a) UDA, (b) UVF, (c) LVF, (d) PIRA, (e) RIRA and (f) CIRA. [191842]

Mr. Pearson: During the first six months of 2004, a total of 51 persons have been proceeded against for scheduled offences in Northern Ireland. Of these, 37 were convicted on some or all counts. Information on specific attribution of defendants in scheduled cases is not recorded.

Diabetes

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the members of the Diabetes Service Framework Implementation Team indicating their positions; how many times the Team has met since its formation; and what progress has been made in the implementation of a diabetes framework as a result. [193344]

Angela Smith: The Regional Diabetes Steering Group which the Department established to oversee the work of the local implementation teams set up by each of the Health and Social Services Boards and to manage the overall implementation of the recommendations made by the CREST Taskforce has met on three occasions. Each of the four Health and Social Services Boards have now produced local development plans detailing how the additional resources of lm allocated by the Department in 2004–05 for the development of services for people with diabetes will be deployed and identifying local priorities for development. The Steering Group has considered the development plans produced by the local implementation teams and will continue to work with them to ensure that, as additional resources are secured, developments are taken forward on a prioritised basis.

The membership of the Regional Steering Group is as follows:

Director of Primary Care (DHSS&PS)

Two Senior Medical Officers (DHSS&PS)

A Consultant in Public Health Medicine from each of the four HSS Boards

A representative from Diabetes UK (NI)

District Policing Partnerships

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects Northern Ireland district policing partnerships to have their budgets confirmed for the current financial year ; and if he will make a statement. [192549]

Mr. Pearson: I am advised by the Northern Ireland Policing Board that following detailed discussions with District Policing Partnerships, letters of offer seeking confirmation of DPP budgets, will have been issued to all relevant Councils by the end of this week. Verbal agreement has already been reached in 19 cases.

Educational Under-achievement

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to tackle educational disadvantage in (a) north Belfast and (b) greater Shankill. [192372]

Mr. Gardiner: Under the Department's School Improvement Programme, which is concerned with tackling low achievement, some £3.1 million has been made available in the last two years to support schools serving north Belfast and greater Shankill. Also, the Intensive Support Programme for Interface Schools is making available a total of some £2.3 million over the three financial years from 2004–05. The new Education

Action Zones will also complement existing programmes in such areas. In addition, a revised bid is being prepared to obtain funding from the Integrated Development Fund to tackle educational underachievement in the west Belfast and greater Shankill areas.

The Department for Employment and Learning also supports a number of initiatives aimed at tackling educational disadvantage in the North Belfast and greater Shankill including:

the Springvale Community Outreach Initiative, which aims to improve educational standards, promote social, cultural and economic regeneration in these areas;

the Essential Skills for Living Strategy, which provides adults in all areas of Northern Ireland with the opportunity to improve their literacy and numeracy skills, to enable them to function and progress in society;

Special Project Funding, which allows the universities to develop partnerships with schools with traditionally low levels of participation in HE. This work includes the 'Step-Up' programme, which may be expanded to include north and west Belfast.

Additionally, the Belfast Institute, east Antrim Institute and the Workers' Educational Association, as the main statutory and non statutory education and training providers for north Belfast and greater Shankill, offer a wide range of provision aimed at tackling educational disadvantage, including Essential Skills provision.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial support he is giving to support parents in Northern Ireland to access educational opportunities for (a) themselves and (b) their children. [192374]

Mr. Gardiner: The Government make available to parents and students a wide support package which is designed to help provide assistance to those whose access to education may be inhibited by financial constraints. The support in the main consists of allowances, bursaries, loans and grants. These are supplemented, in particular circumstances, by support for free school meals, home to school transport and provision of clothing allowance.

Evacuated Dwellings

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many properties purchased under the scheme to purchase evacuated dwellings are on the market; how many properties have been on the market for (a) less than six months, (b) between six and 12 months, (c) between 12 and 18 months and (d) over 18 months; and what the total market value of these properties is. [193553]

Mr. Spellar: There are a total of 62 houses bought under the Scheme to Purchase Evacuated Dwellings on the open market and these are valued at £6,638,250. Of that total the breakdown requested is as follows:

Period	Number	Value (£)
Less than 6 months	19	2,498,750
6 to 12 months	12	1,502,000
12 to 18 months	10	1,446,500
More than 18 months	21	1,191,000

Farm Payments

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many in each category of farm payments due to be paid by 30 June remain outstanding; and what the value is of outstanding payments. [193917]

Mr. Pearson: The number and potential value, if paid in full, of farm subsidy claims currently outstanding is as follows:

	Applications unpaid	Value (£ million)
Beef Special Premium	2,740	1
Slaughter Premium	1,178	0.6
Suckler Cow Premium	301	0.3
Extensification Payment	1,447	2.8

These applications relate to unresolved cases where there is a query or penalty to be applied. It is not expected, therefore, that all claims will be paid in full.

Fireworks

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to combat antisocial behaviour associated with the use of fireworks in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [191828]

Mr. Pearson: The law in relation to the possession, sale and use of fireworks in Northern Ireland is clear. Appropriate action is taken by the police against anyone breaking the law and I am aware of at least one arrest recently where a young person was found to be in illegal possession of fireworks in a public place. I will continue to keep the law in relation to the use of fireworks under review.

Funding (Small Businesses)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many small businesses received start-up funding in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997; and how many of these businesses were still operating as of 1 September. [193556]

Mr. Gardiner: During the period 1997–98 to 2003–04, 1,097 businesses were offered start-up assistance through schemes directly provided by Invest NI, and prior to April 2002, by the Local Enterprise Development Unit (LEDU). Of these businesses, 788 (72 per cent.) were still trading at September 2004.

In addition to these, 10,216 new businesses have been provided with assistance through the Northern Ireland Start a Business Programme. Prior to 2003, this was referred to as the Business Start Programme. Monitoring information available from September 2001 indicates that 84 per cent. of those businesses were still operating at September 2004.

GP Prescribing

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of prescribing by each general practitioner surgery in the Province has been in the last year. [193711]

Angela Smith: The cost of drugs prescribed per general practice surgery is not held centrally as a number of prescriptions are never presented for dispensing.

However, the cost of drugs dispensed by pharmacists against health service prescriptions received per general practice surgery is available and the information for the latest available financial year (2003–04) has been placed in the House Library.

Health Service

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reason there was no capital allocation for IT equipment acquisitions for general practitioner practices in the current financial year. [188471]

Angela Smith: With the implementation of the new General Medical Services contract with effect from 1 April 2004, Health and Social Services Boards are responsible for funding the purchase of IT systems in general practices. While no formal capital allocations for this purpose have as yet been made to Health and Social Service Boards in the current financial year, such resources will be allocated when boards have finalised their expenditure plans in this regard.

Illegal Fuel Imports

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what his estimate is of the amount of (a) gasoline and (b) diesel fuel illegally imported into Northern Ireland in the last year for which figures are available; [191825]

(2) what estimate the Government have made of the amount of (a) gasoline and (b) diesel fuel that is being illegally laundered in Northern Ireland; and what the figures were for the illegal importation and laundering of (i) gasoline and (ii) diesel fuel in Northern Ireland over the last five years. [191835]

Mr. Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer from my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 12 May 2004, Official Report, column 388W.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which paramilitary organisations are (a) known to be and (b) suspected by the Government of being involved in the illegal importation of gasoline and diesel fuel into Northern Ireland. [191826]

Mr. Pearson: There is no doubt that a range of individuals, including those with paramilitary links are involved in smuggling and laundering of fuel in Northern Ireland.

The Organised Crime Task Force Threat Assessment, which was launched on 11 May, clearly indicated the involvement of paramilitary groups in organised crime in Northern Ireland. The IMC's first report, published on 20 April also provided a clear assessment of the criminal activities of all paramilitary groups.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the revenues earned by individual paramilitary organisations from the illegal importation and laundering of (a) gasoline and (b) diesel fuel in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [191836]

Mr. Pearson: There is no doubt that paramilitary organisations are involved in the smuggling and laundering of fuel in Northern Ireland. It is impossible to estimate, however, with any precision the amount of revenue earned through this activity. Neither is it clear what proportion of the profits are retained by paramilitary organisations and what individuals retain to line their own pockets.

Lewis Report

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken in response to the Lewis Report in the case of David and Samuel Briggs, in relation to (a) multi-disciplinary working, (b) access to supervision for health and social care staff and (c) workforce planning policies for health visiting staff. [192908]

Angela Smith: Craigavon and Banbridge HSS Trust has complied with the review's recommendation that it review its guidance to staff in respect of multi-professional working.

With regard to inter country adoption, the Department's 2003 inter country adoption guidance outlines specific expectations in respect of multi-disciplinary working in this area and multi-professional, regional training has been provided in relation to implementation. A recent inspection of the intercountry adoption service in the trust carried out by the Department's Social Services Inspectorate has confirmed that the Southern Area Adoption Consortium is currently implementing the guidance in each of the Southern Board's trust areas.

Craigavon and Banbridge Trust has responded to the review's recommendation that it review its supervision policy by ensuring that within health visiting and social services, there are arrangements for first line managers to raise issues of concern with senior managers. The Trust has reviewed its supervision policy for health visitors and supervision is provided through bi-monthly supervision sessions with team leaders as well as monthly structured peer supervision. Supervision is more frequent for newly qualified and newly appointed nurses.

The Southern HSS Board meets at least quarterly with the three community trust directors of Social Services regarding workforce issues in child care social work.

The Department has in place a comprehensive workforce planning mechanism, which involves a cycle of reviews of the workforce across the main HPSS professional groups. As part of this mechanism, the Department is taking forward its second major review of the nursing, midwifery and health visiting workforce. The Steering Group for this review first met on 15 September and the review is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Lower Newmills Road Fire

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what involvement there was of health and safety officials in assessing the aftermath of the fire at Lower Newmills Road in Coleraine on 15 October. [193641]

Mr. Gardiner: Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI) visited the site of the fire at W. D. Meats Ltd., Lower Newmills Road, Coleraine on 18 October 2004. The purpose of the inspection was to ensure that appropriate health and safety controls were in place so that no one was put at risk during salvage operations.

Missed Appointments

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many missed hospital appointments there were in the Province in each of the last five years; and what the estimated resultant costs were in each year. [192872]

Angela Smith: The total number of missed hospital appointments in each financial year 1999–2000 to 2003–04 is provided in the following table. These figures represent the number of out-patient appointments where a patient did not attend and failed to give advanced warning to the hospital.

	Total number of missed hospital appointments
1999–2000	216,643
2000–01	216,378
2001–02	211,813
2002–03	203,970
2003–04	204,809

Data for 2003–04 are provisional and may be subject to change

The average cost of an out-patient attendance across all Programmes of Care was £133 in the year ended March 2003. If the cost of missed hospital appointments were estimated at the full price per attendance then the cost of missed hospital appointments for that year would be £27 million. However, the real cost is likely to be much less since much of the cost is associated with actual attendance and will not be incurred when the appointment is missed. More precise information is not available.

MLA Salaries

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what review has taken place of the salaries and staff allowances paid to Members of the Northern Ireland Assembly; and whether he plans to reduce the salaries and staff allowances due to suspension of the Assembly. [192565]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I keep the salaries and allowances of Members of the Northern Ireland Assembly under regular review and will continue to do so in the light of current political developments.

New Deal (Departmental Recruitment)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many personnel the Department has recruited under the New Deal in each of the past five years. [194475]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary on 25 October 2004, Official Report, column 1052W.

Pain

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the cost of medically-related benefits in the Province in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how much of that resulted from chronic pain. [193705]

Mr. Spellar: The cost of medically-related Social Security Benefits for the 12 months up to June 2004 is shown as follows:

	£ million
Disability living allowance	524
Incapacity benefit	321
Severe disablement allowance	42
Industrial injuries benefit	32
Attendance allowance (12 months up to March 2004)	174

A breakdown of how much resulted from chronic pain is not available.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pain sufferers in the Province are diagnosed with depression. [193706]

Angela Smith: This information is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of individuals in the Province who lost jobs on account of suffering pain in each of the last five years. [193707]

Mr. Gardiner: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment does not hold information on the number of individuals who lost jobs on account of suffering pain. However, latest figures from the summer 2004 Labour Force Survey estimate that there are 44,000 persons who are currently of working age that have left their last job for health reasons in the preceding eight years.

Paramilitary Terrorism

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his assessment is of the present terrorist threat from (a) the PIRA, (b) Continuity IRA, (c) the Real IRA, (d) the INLA, (e) the UVF and (f) the UDA. [192258]

Mr. Pearson: The Government's view is that the ceasefire of the PIRA remains in place and there is no indication that it is actively considering a return to violence. Dissident Republicans continue to carry out attacks on security forces and the intimidation of members of District Policing Partnerships, but much of their activity has been nullified by good policing and intelligence led operations. The INLA's paramilitary activity is confined principally to 'civil administration'. Factionalised feuding within Loyalism has continued over recent months. The IMC will report shortly on the activities of all paramilitary organisations.

Pedestrian Deaths (Children)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many child pedestrian deaths there were in the Province in each of the last 10 years. [192904]

Mr. Pearson: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number of Child Pedestrian Deaths
1994	16
1995	9
1996	9
1997	6
1998	12
1999	10
2000	8
2001	3
2002	4
2003	7
Total:	84

Pharmacies

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last reviewed the regulations for setting up pharmacies in Northern Ireland; and what the result was of that review. [188653]

Angela Smith: The regulations for setting up pharmacies in Northern Ireland were last reviewed in January 2003 in response to the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) Report on the control of entry regulations and retail pharmacy services in the United Kingdom. The then Minister, the hon. Member for Kilmarnock and Loudon announced on 26 March 2003 that he would not be accepting the OFT report for Northern Ireland, and the Secretary of State fully endorsed that decision. The Minister stated that simple and complete deregulation was not a realistic option and therefore not the way forward for Northern Ireland. He also made clear that Northern Ireland community pharmacy services would be developed within the context of a Community Pharmacy Strategy and a new pharmacy contract, which is currently under negotiation, and would include consideration of how the existing regulatory arrangements could be improved to take account of changing health policies.

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholics and (c) others have applied for posts and been assessed as being suitably qualified with the Police in Northern Ireland since the 50/50 recruitment rule was introduced; [191886]

(2) how many (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholics and (c) others have been successful in their applications to join the Police Service of Northern Ireland since the introduction of the 50/50 recruitment rule; [191887]

(3) how many (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholics and (c) others have been unsuccessful in their applications to join the Police Service of Northern Ireland despite being assessed as suitably qualified since the introduction of the 50/50 recruitment rule. [191888]

Mr. Pearson: There have been six competitions for the post of PSNI Trainee Constable, in which the pool of suitably qualified candidates has been finalised. Appointments are still being made from these pools for competitions four, five and six. As a result the numbers contained in the table are continually changing.

For the purpose of PSNI recruitment, a candidate's community background is categorised as either non-Roman Catholic or Roman Catholic.

I am advised that the breakdown of candidates according to these categories, for the first six competitions as requested, is as follows:

	Non-Roman Catholic	Roman Catholic
Assessed as being suitably qualified	3,253	1,089
Successful in their applications	747	716
Unsuccessful despite being assessed as suitably qualified	1,944	92

In common with many organisations recruiting staff, PSNI has a finite number of posts that can be filled. Encouragingly, they continue to have a very high number of applications for each competition. In the latest competitions this has produced a surplus of suitably qualified candidates from both the Roman Catholic and non-Roman Catholic community background.

The majority of candidates that have failed to be appointed from the pool did so because of their assessment score rather than their community background; that is to say if 50/50 had not applied then those candidates would still have failed to be appointed.

We remain sympathetic to those candidates who have been directly discriminated against because of their community background. We are satisfied, however, that the temporary policy of equal recruitment has brought about a positive change and is justified as a means of rectifying an acute historical imbalance in the composition of the police service.

Prisons (Substance Abuse)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the prevalence of (a) drug and (b) alcohol abuse in Northern Ireland's prisons. [191942]

Mr. Pearson: The drugs culture in prisons mirrors that in the community. Drugs misuse in prison involves cannabis, steroids and prescription drugs. There is a small amount of hard drug abuse but no evidence of a needle culture involving hard drugs. The Northern Ireland Prison Service operates a drug and alcohol strategy which addresses supply reduction, care and support for those with drug related problems, education, rehabilitation and throughcare. An extensive monthly monitoring system is operated in all establishments. Additional to this, detailed assessments are carried out by external independent consultants. The evaluation reports produced provide a clear insight into the nature and scope of drugs and alcohol misuse in each establishment and a solid foundation for influencing any changes necessary to strengthen the drugs and alcohol policy.

Although a significant percentage of prisoners have a dependency problem on committal to prison, illegal alcohol is not a problem for the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

Refrigerator Disposal

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what facilities are available in Northern Ireland for the disposal of refrigerators; and how many refrigerators were disposed of in Northern Ireland in each year since 2000. [191952]

Angela Smith: The Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland in conjunction with the Department of the Environment, Heritage and Local Government in the Republic of Ireland facilitated an exercise which led to all Councils in Northern Ireland, and 33 of the 34 Councils in the Republic of Ireland, contracting with M Baker Recycling Limited for the management of waste domestic fridges and freezers. The refrigeration equipment is collected and transported to M Baker's facility in England to be demanufactured. The contract will run until August 2005, at which point responsibility for disposal transfers to the manufacturers. There are no facilities available in Northern Ireland that can dispose of whole refrigerators containing hazardous components including ozone depleting substances such as chlorofluorocarbons, hydrochloroflurocarbons and hydrochlorocarbons. However there is now one facility in Northern Ireland that is being commissioned to demanufacture refrigeration equipment.

Prior to the introduction of the Ozone Depleting Substances Regulations on the 1 January 2002, fridges could be disposed of to landfill. My Department is not aware of any refrigerators being disposed of in Northern Ireland since 2001.

My Department does not hold statistical information for the number of refrigerators disposed of in Northern Ireland for the years 2000 and 2001, nor comprehensive and readily accessible statistical information on the number of refrigerators transported to GB or elsewhere in Europe for disposal since 2001.

Regional Development Strategy

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the Planning Appeals Commission has been guided by the Regional Development Strategy when considering planning appeals; how often the PAC has referred to the strategy in its decision making; and if he will make a statement. [193747]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As the Planning Appeals Commission is a tribunal Non-Departmantal Public Body, I have asked the Chief Commissioner to write to the hon. Lady directly in connection with the information requested.

School Crossing Patrol Officers

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many school crossing patrol officers there were in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; what steps he is taking to increase the number of officers; and if he will make a statement. [193383]

Mr. Gardiner: The number of school crossing patrol officers is as follows.

	BELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	WELB	Total
2000–01	126	152	167	236	198	879
2001–02	123	161	161	230	196	871
2002–03	121	173	161	234	198	887
2003–04	131	187	161	231	198	908
2004–05	135	180	159	220	198	892

Education and library boards have experienced difficulty in recruiting crossing patrol officers. This is despite strenuous recruiting measures such as advertising in the press, poster campaigns in schools, libraries etc., recruitment seminars and radio advertising. Consideration was given to combining crossing patrol duties with those of school caretakers, classroom assistants etc. but it was concluded that this was impractical. As caretakers, in particular, are busy with a wide range of duties school principals are generally reluctant to release them for other duties.

Boards are currently seeking advice from the Local Authority Road Safety Officers Association (LARSOA) regarding the recruitment of crossing patrol personnel. LARSOA frequently advises local education authorities in England on procedures and recruitment arrangements for crossing patrol officers. This association may be able to advise boards on options for reducing the number of outstanding crossing patrol vacancies in Northern Ireland.

School Selection

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors underlie the Government's policy not to allow parents a ballot before ending academic selection at grammar schools in Northern Ireland. [193920]

Mr. Gardiner: Legislation in England to enable a ballot of parents in relation to proposals to end academic selection at individual schools does not apply in Northern Ireland. Following detailed review, Government have decided to end academic selection in Northern Ireland. Grammar schools will remain and will continue to offer an academic style of education for those pupils whose parents consider it to best meet the educational needs of their child. School managing authorities will consult with parents when new arrangements are being developed at local level.

Security Vetting (Stormont)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people with criminal records have been granted security passes to Parliament Building at Stormont since the establishment of the Northern Ireland Assembly. [192558]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Since the establishment of the Northern Ireland Assembly, security passes for Parliament Buildings have been issued to a wide group including Members, their partners and staff, Party support staff, press, VIPs, contractors and Assembly Secretariat staff. Criminal record checks are confined to Assembly staff and contractors. However, the results of those individual checks are not centrally collated.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes have been made to the security vetting procedures at Stormont since the last suspension of the Northern Ireland Assembly; and whether security measures in Northern Ireland have been brought into line with the new security arrangements at the Palace of Westminster. [192559]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Security vetting procedures at Stormont remain unchanged since the Northern Ireland Assembly last met in October 2002.

Security arrangements at Parliament buildings are kept under constant review. Following recent incidents in the House of Commons chamber, Assembly officials have been liaising with colleagues at Westminster and the other devolved institutions regarding appropriate security measures and a number of additional provisions are under consideration.

Smoking (Public Places)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent assessment has been made of the merits of introducing legislation to ban smoking in public places in Northern Ireland. [194079]

Angela Smith: The Tobacco Action Plan, published in June 2003, addresses a range of tobacco control measures, including protecting the public from tobacco smoke. Northern Ireland has contributed to the wider UK debate on smoking in public places through the plan, which included a commitment to assess public attitudes towards smoking prohibitions/restrictions.

A recent survey commissioned by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety found that support for smoke-free provision in specific settings ranged from 82 per cent. in hospitals and 53 per cent. in cafes and restaurants, to 34 per cent. in pubs and bars.

The Government are currently assessing the views of a wide range of interests on this subject and will publish their conclusions in a forthcoming White Paper on Public Health.

Soccer Facilities

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the finance to improve soccer facilities will be released. [192446]

Angela Smith: The Sports Council has to date released £2.406 million, under its Interim Safe Sports Grounds Scheme, to help improve Soccer facilities in Northern Ireland. It has also provided £1.243 million over the last three years to assist the Irish Football Association (IFA) with the promotion of youth soccer in Northern Ireland. Further Government moneys to help improve soccer facilities and promotion will be released when I am satisfied that all the necessary accountability and value for money safeguards are in place to protect public finances.

Speed Cameras

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) mobile and (b) fixed speed cameras in reducing speeding on Northern Ireland's roads. [191831]

Mr. Pearson: The Safety Camera Scheme, which includes fixed site and mobile safety cameras, came into operation on 1 July 2003. At the end of the first year, deaths and serious injuries had fallen by 27 per cent. at locations where safety cameras were used.

Surgery

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of Northern Ireland patients who have been advised that they will have NHS-funded surgery in the private sector this year, but have not as yet received treatment. [193692]

Angela Smith: 2650 patients have been offered the opportunity to have surgery privately funded through the HPSS this financial year. Of those who have accepted the offer, 676 have not received treatment to date but are due to have surgery by 31 March 2005.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many long-waiters from the Province have had surgery privately funded through the NHS since 1 January; and how many more are expected to receive surgery before the end of the year. [193699]

Angela Smith: Since January 2004, the HPSS has funded 1,344 long waiters in Northern Ireland to have their surgery carried out by private sector providers. In addition, a further 1,147 patients are expected to receive surgery before 31 March 2005.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public funding has been spent on providing surgery for patients from Northern Ireland within the private sector. [193700]

Angela Smith: £6.9 million of public funding was spent on providing surgery for patients from Northern Ireland within the private sector during 2003–04. From April-September 2004, £2.6 million has been spent.

Triads

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment the Government have made of the level of Triad activity in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [191841]

Mr. Pearson: The Police Service of Northern Ireland is aware of the presence of a Triad group in Northern Ireland and that it is involved in organised crime.

The Organised Crime Task Force is creating an Organised Immigration Crime Expert Group to assist and advise on how organised immigration crime might be tackled.

Tuberculosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on tuberculosis prevention in the Province. [188603]

Angela Smith: The incidence of tuberculosis (TB) in Northern Ireland is low with 67 cases in 2002 and a crude rate of 3.9 per 100,000 population. Rates are over three times greater in England and Wales, and the Republic of Ireland.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's Regional Advisory Committee on Communicable Disease Control has a TB subcommittee which keeps prevention and surveillance issues constantly under review.

The Chief Medical Officer issued a letter to the health service on 30 April 2002 endorsing and enclosing the updated clinical guidelines on control and prevention of TB of the British Thoracic Society's joint tuberculosis committee. They highlight the importance of early treatment and contact tracing and provide extended advice on TB in schools. The BCG programme continues to be offered to all school children from age ten to 14.

Violent Patients

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how resources are to be provided for dealing with violent patients following the implementation of the new general practitioner contract in the Province. [194078]

Angela Smith: To facilitate implementation of the new general practitioners contract, resources have been allocated to the Health and Social Services Boards to fund the commissioning of a range of services, including services for patients who are violent.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Children's Centres

3. Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Government are investing on average in each of the current round of children's centres. [194094]

Margaret Hodge: We have already announced 71 children's centres and will shortly be announcing more. There will be up to 2,500 by March 2008, which will include one for each of the 20 per cent. most disadvantaged areas. We are working up plans to provide a children's centre in every community.

Higher Education

19. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in Coventry went on to higher education in 2004–05. [194110]

Dr. Howells: Latest figures from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) show that 1,685 students from Coventry LEA have so far been accepted to entry for full-time undergraduate courses in 2004/05. Final figures for 2004/05 will be published by UCAS in late January.

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on access to higher education. [194104]

Dr. Howells: The Government are determined to improve opportunities for people of all backgrounds. The Aimhigher programme helps young people in disadvantaged areas to gain the qualifications and aspire to university. Our reforms to student finance will broaden access and help poorer students. And the Office for Fair Access will ensure that universities charging higher fees encourage applications from all backgrounds through their plans for outreach and financial support. Admissions, however, are a matter for universities and must be based on merit.

A-Levels

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will extend targeted support to those learners wishing to attain the equivalent of two good A-levels. [191367]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: From September 2004 Education Maintenance Allowance became available to young people who had reached the compulsory school leaving age and were entering full time education in 2004/05. EMA is available for both academic and vocational courses up to level 3.

Our advanced apprenticeship programmes for young people offers training to technician and skilled craft level. And as resources allow, we have committed to expanding training programmes for adults as well at that intermediate level, particularly in those areas that employers tell us are their priorities by region and by sector. To support younger adults up to age 30 to get these higher level qualifications, we are piloting financial support of up to £30 a week through a new Adult Learning Grant. The new grant has been piloted since September 2003 in over 80 further education providers across 10 Learning and Skills Council areas. From September 2004 Adult Learning Grant has been extended right across the North East and South East regions alongside trials of the new entitlement to free tuition to reach a first level 2 qualification.

Child Care

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average cost of providing a child care place is in (a) London and (b) England. [192098]

Margaret Hodge: This information is not routinely collected centrally. The General Sure Start Grant distributed to local authorities includes funding to provide for new childcare places. Local authorities currently receive £642 for each newly created place in a disadvantaged area and £342 for places created in other areas. This is an average revenue cost and covers places created with childminders, in Out of School settings and in full day care setting. This is based on the average estimated costs for all types of provision nationally.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department is taking to increase the number of qualified child care workers in (a) London and (b) England. [192101]

Margaret Hodge: For 2004–06, we have given £129.9 million to local authorities in England to help them recruit, train and develop their early years and child care workforce. We have also worked closely with the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) nationally to raise the profile of the child care sector, so that all local LSCs and local authorities now have shared targets for training child care workers to levels 2 and 3. We also support this local activity with our national child care recruitment campaign that has been running since 2000 and has generated over 25,000 responses to our national campaign order line. The new National Professional Qualification for Integrated Centre Leadership (NPQICL), launched September 2004, aims to foster the highest calibre of leadership in children's services. As well as raising standards within the early years profession, the NPQICL aims to raise professional status in the sector and attract more good people into the profession.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the average salary of child care workers in (a) London and (b) England. [192102]

Margaret Hodge: The 2002/03 Childcare and Early Years Workforce survey shows an average salary of around £7,500 a year for annually paid childcare workers in London. This is based on an average working week of 25 hours. The survey shows an average salary of around £5,100 a year for annually paid staff in England, based on an average working week of 26 hours.

In England hourly paid staff earn on average, a little over £5.70 per hour. Grossing up based on the average hours per week worked (26), this equates to a little over £7,600 p.a. In London hourly paid staff earn on average, around £7.10 per hour. Grossing up based on the average hours per week work (25), this equates to a little over £9,300 p.a.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the ratio of child care places to children of pre-school age is in (a) London and (b) England. [192104]

Margaret Hodge: The available information is shown in the table. Statistics on the number of child care places registered in England were published on 22 July 2004 in a report by Ofsted "Registered Childcare Providers and Places in England, 30 June 2004". The report is available on the Ofsted website, www.ofsted.gov.uk/publications.

Consultants

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many consultancy firms or companies have been retained by the Department since June 2001; what the projects are for which each has been retained; and what the total is of the fees paid or incurred in each case. [193417]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: This information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Fostering

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps the Department is taking to encourage more people into fostering. [193767]

Margaret Hodge: The Choice Protects grant, which provides funding of £113 million over three years, has a specific emphasis on improving fostering services. £1.5 million of the funding available through the grant in the current financial year is being used to develop a number of suggestions from the Green Paper, "Every Child Matters", to improve the status support and training for foster carers. These include the development of a national award, a national advice line and measures to improve the support given to foster carers who are subject to allegations.

In February this year we produced a Fostering Publicity Pack designed to help local authorities to run targeted local campaigns to recruit new foster carers for looked after children. We have also awarded a three-year grant of £180,000 to the Fostering Network to support Foster Care Fortnight, which has a particular focus on recruitment.

School Transport

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cost (a) in total and (b) per child of school transport on the Isle of Wight was in each of the last five years; and what the figures are for other authorities in the Audit Commission's relevant family of local education authorities. [192724]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 19 October 2004]: The total cost of home to school transport in the Isle of Wight and other local education authorities (LEAs) in the Audit Commission's relevant family of LEAs for each of the last five years is shown in the following tables. Data on the number of pupils using home to school transport are not collected, so it is not possible to provide a per child cost for the last five years. However, a joint DfES/Confed survey collected these data for 2002/03 and is also included in the tables.

[1] The gross expenditure and income figures for 1998–99 to 2001–02 are taken from the home to school/college transport and the transport related parental contribution lines of the section 52 Outturn Statement Table 3 (1998–99 figures are from the corresponding lines of the R01 form submitted to the ODPM) respectively. In 2002–03 home to school transport was recorded separately from home to college transport for the first time and consequently both home to school transport and the combined home to school/college transport figures are provided. 2002–03 figures are taken from the respective gross, income and net columns of the section 52 Outturn Statement Table A.

[2] Total transport income and expenditure includes that incurred in relation to pre-primary, primary, secondary and special school education as well as in education out of school, continuing education and the management and support elements.

[3] The DfES do not collect data on the number of pupils using home to school transport and as such we are unable to calculate the cost of home to school transport per child. However in 2002–03 the Department conducted a survey with Confed which provided a snapshot of the number of pupils using home to school transport (including sixth form) and these have been used to provide a unit cost for 2002–03.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the impact on schools in the Vale of York of his proposed changes to school transport. [193876]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The School Transport Bill will allow up to 20 local education authorities in England to trial new arrangements for school transport. Trial areas cannot be selected until the Bill becomes law, so at this point it is not possible to assess the impact on schools in the Vale of York.

Ministers' Private Offices

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the running costs of Ministers' private offices in his Department have been in each year since 1997. [191390]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is in the following table. This information includes the total running cost for the Department of Education and Skills and its predecessor, the Department of Education and Employment.

Teenage Pregnancy

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have registered with the Teenage Pregnancy Unit website in each year since it was launched. [193997]

Margaret Hodge: The Teenage Pregnancy Unit website is an internal DfES website, designed primarily for practitioners working with both young parents and those at risk of teenage pregnancy. There are currently 372 registered users of the website.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the 2004 annual report for the Teenage Pregnancy Unit will be published. [193998]

Margaret Hodge: The Teenage Pregnancy Unit does not produce an annual report.

However, the Independent Advisory Group (IAG) on teenage pregnancy does produce a report each year, in which it comments on progress on implementing the teenage pregnancy strategy, and makes recommendations for further action. IAG's report for 2003–04 is due to be published in November 2004.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much it cost to set up the Teenage Pregnancy Unit website; what the maintenance costs are estimated to be for each year of its operation; and who is responsible for updating the website. [193999]

Margaret Hodge: The Teenage Pregnancy Unit website is an internal DfES website, designed primarily for practitioners working with both young parents and those at risk of teenage pregnancy. Maintenance of the website is carried out by members of staff working in the Teenage Pregnancy Unit. It is not possible to calculate how much of their time is involved in its maintenance.

Tsar Appointments

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many tsars have been appointed with responsibilities which cover part of the work of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [191927]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There have been no tsars appointed to cover any responsibilities of my Department.

University Outreach

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on outreach work by universities in educationally deprived communities. [194107]

Dr. Howells: Many universities undertake outreach activities with schools and communities in deprived areas. I am pleased to acknowledge these efforts and to support them through the Aimhigher programme, which helps school, university and college partnerships to deliver a range of attainment—and aspiration-raising activities. In addition, the new Office for Fair Access will result in more financial support for students and more outreach work to boost applications from under-represented groups.

I will write to my hon. Friend to further address the issues he raised at today's oral questions.

DEFENCE

40 Commando

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to supply extra helicopters to transport troops of 40 Commando on operational tasks outside the British controlled zone in Iraq. [193881]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 2004]: Helicopters in Iraq are a theatre-wide asset and are not allocated to individual units.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to provide armoured personnel carriers for the troops of 40 Commando. [193882]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 2004]: There are no plans to provide armoured personnel carriers for the troops of 40 Commando. However, they are, and will continue to be, afforded all appropriate protection while deployed.

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to deploy 40 Commando to work outside the British controlled zone in Iraq. [193884]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 October 2004]: A single mortar platoon from 40 Commando RM will be deployed with the 1st Battalion, The Black Watch to an area south of Baghdad in the next few weeks. In addition, a small number of troops from 40 Commando RM are currently performing force protection duties in Baghdad.

Armed Forces (Dependent Children)

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government pays fees for (a) schooling and (b) board and lodging for children of servicemen and servicewomen serving outside the UK. [191215]

Mr. Caplin: Boarding School Allowance (BSA) is paid to contribute towards the cost of boarding and tuition. It is paid to eligible service parents stationed in the UK and overseas. Day School Allowance is paid towards the cost of tuition only and provides the opportunity for children for whom BSA is in issue to become a day pupil at the same school and to live at home when family circumstances permit.

The Ministry of Defence via HQ Service Children's Education, also provides free education in service schools for the children of service personnel who accompany their service parents to some overseas countries. In those countries where free service schools are not provided, service parents use local schools, which may be free of charge, or independent fee paying schools. In the latter case, necessarily incurred school fees may be reimbursed within MOD set limits.

Canadian Submarines

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with the Canadian Government on the four submarines sold to the Canadians by the Royal Navy Service. [192979]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 October 2004]: Ministry of Defence officials have been in discussion with the Canadian Government regarding the Upholder class submarines for several years. Discussions have been wide-ranging and led to an agreement in 1998 that the United Kingdom would lease the submarines to Canada, with an option to purchase. Subsequent discussions focused on the reactivation and transfer of the submarines to Canada, and included main contract reviews at three-monthly intervals, regular exchanges of technical information, and day-to-day contact with Canadian personnel based at BAE Systems, Barrow-in-Furness, where the reactivation programme was undertaken.

Clothing Specifications

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specifications were included in the contract for clothing given to Cooneen, Watts & Store to ensure that the clothing was manufactured in the UK. [187494]

Mr. Ingram: No specifications were included to ensure clothing was manufactured in the UK as EU Public Procurement Regulations prohibit consideration on grounds of national interest.

EU Battlegroups

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who will have final command of the EU Battlegroups initiative. [194384]

Mr. Hoon: Policy decisions on the EU Battlegroups initiative will be taken by unanimity of all the member states.

Decisions to deploy national forces are for national governments to take. Any decision to commit the United Kingdom forces to an EU Battlegroup operational deployment would be taken by the Government on a case-by-case basis.

Battlegroups will be offered either by single nations or by small multinational groupings. The military command of any operational deployment of an EU Battlegroup will be determined on a case-by-case basis and will reflect which of the Battlegroups is being deployed. We would expect Battlegroups involving UK forces to be commanded from the Permanent Joint Headquarters at Northwood.

As with all EU operations, the political control of an EU Battlegroup mission would rest with the 25 member states, acting by unanimity through the Political and Security Committee and Council.

EU Defence

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to paragraphs 50 and 51 of the document Update on Prospects for the European Union in 2004, (Cm 6310), what documentation has been published concerning (a) the nature, function, organisation and finance of the European Defence Agency, (b) the agreement concerning nations within the European Union agreeing to form battle groups to provide rapidly deployable forces and (c) the planned conference in November where member states will be able to discuss their respective commitments. [193822]

Mr. Hoon: The following documents have been published by the Council of the European Union, the Ministry of Defence, or the House of Commons, concerning the European Defence Agency:

Press release, 'EU HR Javier Solana announces appointments of European Defence Agency Directors', 13 October 2004.

Council Joint Action 2004/551/CFSP of 12 July 2004 on the establishment of the European Defence Agency.

EU Defence Procurement

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on European Union defence procurement policy. [193758]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are committed to playing a leading role in the development of European security and defence policy. We have been actively engaged in the formation of the European Defence Agency, which was formally established on 12 July 2004. The Agency will, inter alia, promote capability development and enhance European armaments co-operation, building on the work already undertaken within existing European fora. We expect the Agency also to work closely with the European Commission on any further work emanating from the Commission's Green Paper on Defence Procurement, published on 23 September 2004. This paper sets out to open the debate on creating a more transparent European defence equipment market, and on promoting further the global competitiveness of European defence industry. Policy for defence procurement rests nationally with the individual member states, with contribution from the Commission being in support of initiatives developed by the national Governments.

Flight ZD576

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 440W, on Flight ZD576, whether the third parties consulted by the reviewing air marshals before coming to their conclusions on the crash of Flight ZD576 were limited to those providing legal advice; and if he will list the third parties consulted. [193961]

Mr. Ingram: Third party consultation by the reviewing officers was limited to legal advice, provided by the Directorate of Legal Services (RAF).

Iraq

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average tour of duty is for a British soldier in Iraq. [193305]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The majority of United Kingdom troops deployed to Iraq deploy for six-month tours.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost has been to public funds of military deployment and action in connection with the intervention in Iraq since 1 March 2003; and if he will make a statement. [193361]

Mr. Ingram: Audited figures for the costs of operations in Iraq is net additional published each year in the Ministry of Defence's Annual Report and Accounts. Net additional costs for 2002–03 were £848 million, and for 2003–04 £1,311 million, a total of £2,159 million.

It is too early to provide a firm estimate of costs in 2004–05, but we will seek parliamentary approval for this expenditure through Supplementary Estimates in due course.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) US, (b) UK and (c) Iraqi troops are serving in Iraq. [193648]

Mr. Ingram: The number of United States troops in Iraq is a matter for the US Government. There are some 8,100 United Kingdom troops deployed in Iraq, and a new Iraqi army is in training, which currently has some 9,000 troops.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the UK to be granted access to sensitive technology to permit maintenance and logistic support for the Joint Strike Fighter in the UK. [193108]

Mr. Ingram: The Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) programme is still at a relatively early stage in its development programme, and our current planning is that the aircraft will not enter service in the UK before 2012. Nevertheless, we are working closely with the US Joint Programme Office (JPO) to develop the support solutions required to maintain and support JSF through life on a global basis. Access to technology is a key element in this work and we expect to have sufficient access by December 2006 to give confidence in our ability to maintain and support the JSF in service prior to signing the Production, Sustainment and Follow on Development MOU.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer the question from the hon. Member dated 16 July, ref. 185178. [192168]

Mr. Caplin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 714W.

Provigil

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 11 October 2004, Official Report, column 65W, on Provigil, what the conclusions of the research were, with particular reference to using these pharmaceutical agents during times of hostilities; and if he will make a statement. [191147]

Mr. Caplin: The aim of the QinetiQ study was to investigate the effects of modafinil, the generic name for Provigil, on nocturnal sleep, and on subsequent performance in 12 healthy male volunteers. The effects studied included sustained attention, reaction time, digit symbol substitution, tracking, memory, sleepiness and fatigue.

QinetiQ concluded that the effects on nocturnal sleep depended on the dose. In the study, 100 mg of modafinil had no affect on nocturnal sleep. At higher dose levels of 200 mg and 300 mg, total sleep was reduced. The alerting activity of modafinil was observed the following day, although at the highest dose, increased sleepiness was reported within 24 hours of ingestion.

The Ministry of Defence does not use performance enhancing drugs, and the policy has not changed in light of this research.

RAF Fylingdales

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities are available at RAF Fylingdales; and what future use is envisaged for the base. [194008]

Mr. Hoon: RAF Fylingdales uses a Solid State Phased Array Radar to provide early warning of the launch of ballistic missiles and to carry out space surveillance. There is no planned change in the usage of the RAF Fylingdales site.

Satanism

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is with regard to the practice of Satanism in the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [194205]

Mr. Caplin: A person's beliefs are essentially a private matter.

Tsar Appointments

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many tsars have been appointed with responsibilities which cover part of the work of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [191925]

Mr. Caplin: None.

Trident

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent progress has been made on (a) considering future options for a nuclear deterrent capability and (b) reaching a decision on whether or not to withdraw the Trident fleet. [194013]

Mr. Hoon: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave my hon. Friend on 19 July 2004, Official Report, column 32W, when I said that work on a range of options for maintaining a nuclear deterrent capability is in hand in accordance with the policy set out in last December's Defence White Paper. As that White Paper made clear, decisions on whether to replace Trident are not needed this Parliament but are likely to be required in the next one.

US Interceptor Missiles

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the policy is of Her Majesty's Government on the stationing of US interceptor missiles in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [193848]

Mr. Hoon: We have received no request from the United States regarding siting of interceptors in the United Kingdom. Should such a request be made, the Government's response will depend on the nature of the request and the circumstances in which it is made.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he or officials from his Department last met US Administration secretaries or officials to discuss the stationing of interceptor missiles in the UK; what the outcome was of those discussions; and if he will make a statement. [193849]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no discussions between Ministers or officials of either government about the stationing of interceptor missiles in the UK. The Government have not yet decided whether the UK requires its own missile defence, and our discussions with the US on missile defence matters do not therefore involve specific architectures or basing assumptions.

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions (a) he and (b) officials from his Department have had with their counterparts in (i) France, (ii) Germany, (iii) Italy and (iv) Spain regarding (A) the upgrade of RAF Fylingdales and (B) the stationing of US interceptor missiles in the UK; and what the outcome was of the discussions. [193850]

Mr. Hoon: Officials speak regularly with their counterparts in these countries and keep them informed on the United Kingdom defence matters, including those relating to missile defence, as appropriate. NATO allies have been kept informed in broad terms of the Government's decision last year to agree to the United States request to upgrade the early warning radar at RAF Fylingdales. There has been no contact with these countries regarding the stationing of interceptor missiles in the UK.

Warships

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 14 October 2004, Official Report, column 327W, on warships, what the timeline is for the refit of HMS Victorious; and when she is expected to return to service. [193441]

Mr. Ingram: The refit (Long Overhaul Period (Refuel)) of HMS Victorious is currently planned to start in the first quarter of 2005. On completion of sea trials, she is expected to return to service with the Fleet mid 2008.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many Child Support Agency cases are waiting to be transferred onto the new IT system; how many attempted transfers have failed; and how many cases have been successfully transferred from the old scheme to the new; [194322]

(2) how many Child Support Agency cases where money has been paid to the parent with care have successfully been transferred from the old scheme of calculation to the new system. [194324]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mr. Doug Smith to Mr. Frank Field, dated 28 October 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Child Support Agency cases are waiting to be transferred onto the new IT system; how many attempted transfers have failed; and how many cases have been successfully transferred from the old scheme to the new.

You also asked, how many Child Support cases where money has been paid to the parent with care have successfully been transferred from the old scheme of calculation to the new system.

I do not have the information you require. I can however say that since March 2003 around 18,500 cases have successfully transferred from the old scheme to the new scheme.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency cases were waiting (a) to be calculated and (b) for money to be paid at 1 March 2003. [194323]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mr. Doug Smith to Mr. Frank Field, dated 28 October 2004:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Child Support Agency cases (a) were waiting to be calculated and (b) for money to be paid at 1 March 2003.

I do not have the information required. I can, however, say that there were around 142,000 applications for maintenance awaiting action as at 1 March 2003.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency applications waiting to be calculated were made (a) before 1 March 2003, (b) after 1 March 2003 but are assessed on the old scheme of maintenance calculation and (c) after 1 March 2003 and are assessed on the new scheme of maintenance calculation. [194325]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Mr. Doug Smith to Mr. Frank Field, dated 28 October 2004:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Child Support Agency applications waiting to be calculated were made (a) before 1 March 2003 (b) after 1 March 2003 but are assessed on the old scheme of maintenance calculation and (c) after 1 March 2003 and are on the new scheme of maintenance calculation.

No new applications received after 3 March 2003 will be progressed under the 'old scheme'. Around 26,000 applications made before 3 March 2003 currently await a final decision being made—this may or may not result in a maintenance assessment.

Around 240,000 applications recorded on the new IT system after 3 March 2003 are also awaiting a decision—again, this may or may not result in a maintenance calculation.

Pension Credit

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of pension credit on pensioner poverty; [193370]

(2) what the average value is of pension credit for (a) women and (b) all pensioners; [193371]

(3) what estimate his Department has made of the number of (a) women and (b) all pensioners in receipt of pension credit. [193372]

Malcolm Wicks: Even before the introduction of pension credit, the Government's basic strategy of getting more money to pensioners, particularly the poorest, was making significant inroads into tackling pensioner poverty. The latest figures available show that by 2002–03 absolute pensioner poverty (the number living below the 1996–97 low-income threshold) had fallen by two-thirds, or 1.8 million.

Since its introduction in October 2003, pension credit has had an impact on pensioner incomes by giving around 1.94 million households (2.36 million individuals) an average £16.33 a week more money (figures to the end of August). This represents 74 per cent. of all households receiving pension credit at the end of August 2004. The number and proportion of households gaining have risen in each of the months since October 2003 and this positive trend is set to continue with increased take-up levels.

At the end of August there were 2.61 million households receiving pension credit in Great Britain. This figure comprises 3.17 million individuals, of whom 2.11 million were women. The average award was £41.71 a week for all pensioner households and £41.13 for households containing a woman.

Notes:

1. Numbers of pension credit recipients are rounded to the nearest 10 thousand.

2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.

Incapacity/Severe Disablement Benefit

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to put time limits on payments of incapacity benefit; and if he will make a statement. [193256]

Maria Eagle: We currently have no such plans. The Government's approach, as delivered in its flagship incapacity benefit reform programme, Pathways to Work, is to work actively and intensively with the large number of people on incapacity benefit who expect and want to work again and any longer term reform will continue to build on that approach.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the ratio was in each year since 1990 of the average incapacity benefit payment to the average jobseeker's allowance payment in cases in which the claimant claimed both benefits for a year or more. [193592]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

Ratio of the average incapacity benefit payment to the average jobseeker's allowance payment in cases which the claimant claimed both benefits for a year or more
1990–2004

	Average incapacity benefit payment (sickness benefit/invalidity benefit prior to April 1995) (£)	Average jobseeker's allowance payment (income support for unemployed prior to October 1996 (£)	Ratio of average incapacity benefit payment to average jobseeker's allowance payment
1990	61.41	39.62	1.55:1
1991	66.52	44.38	1.50:1
1992	74.31	45.53	1.63:1
1993	78.14	46.53	1.68:1
1994	81.68	47.37	1.72:1
1995	84.01	n/a	n/a
1996	83.05	n/a	n/a
1997	85.19	62.30	1.37.1
1998	87.37	62.98	1.39:1
1999	87.66	65.02	1.35:1
2000	86.49	67.52	1.28:1
2001	87.36	70.41	1.24:1
2002	87.04	69.96	1.24:1
2003	87.03	71.41	1.22:1
2004	87.88	71.06	1.24:1

Notes:

1. Incapacity benefit (IB) replaced sickness benefit (SB) and invalidity benefit (IVB) from April 1995.
2. Jobseeker's allowance (JSA) replaced income support (IS) for the unemployed from October 1996. IS and JSA figures are not available by duration for 1995 or 1996.
3. Ratios are rounded to 2 decimal places.
4. Average amounts have been given to the nearest penny.
5. JSA figures are based on 5 per cent. samples and therefore subject to sampling variation.
6. SB, IVB and IB figures are based on 1 per cent. samples up to April 1995 and 5 per cent. samples thereafter.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claiming incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance in each year since 1997 had their claims terminated as a result of assessments made by doctors employed by or under contract to the Department, broken down by (a) age and (b) region. [191678]

Maria Eagle: The Information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance recipients claimed (a) statutory sick pay, (b) jobseeker's allowance income support and (c) other benefits before receiving incapacity benefit in each year since 1997, broken down by (i) age and (ii) region. [191692]

Maria Eagle: Information on the benefits previously claimed by incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance recipients is not available.

Pensioner Poverty (Scotland)

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners are estimated to be living below the poverty line in Scotland. [193617]

Malcolm Wicks: Poverty and social exclusion are complex and multi-dimensional issues, affecting many aspects of peoples' lives including their living standards, health, housing, the quality of their environment and not just low income. The sixth annual "Opportunity For All" report (Cm 6329) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy.

Statistics for Scotland on numbers of people living in low income are published by the Scottish Executive. These show that, in 2002–03 180,000 pensioners in Scotland were living in households with income below 60 per cent. of the Great Britain median on a before housing costs basis.

Notes:

1. Data from the Family Resources Survey.

2. Estimates are based on sample counts, which have been adjusted for non-response using multipurpose grossing factors that control for tenure, council tax band and a number of other variables. Estimates are subject to both sampling error, and to remaining variability in non-response which is not corrected by the grossing regime.

3. Income measure used is weekly net (disposable) equivalised household income (that is to say income that is adjusted to reflect the composition of the household). The median relates to the middle-ranked individual.

Job Centres

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many clients attended each Jobcentre due for closure in North Wales in each of the last 10 years; and what replacement service will be put in place after closure of these offices. [190880]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 28 October 2004:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning how many clients attended each Jobcentre due for closure in North Wales in each of the last ten years; and what replacement service will be put in place after closure of these offices. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

I am unable to state the exact number of callers to each of the Jobcentres expected to close covering the last ten years. Information showing the weekly average number of clients registering for Jobseeker's Allowance in each of the last ten years ending in August is shown in the table below.

Separate records are not available for some of the very small sites as their figures are included in their parent office. Each of these customers is expected to attend the Jobcentre every fortnight for an interview about their job search activity and they represent most of the traffic into the offices.

Work is currently in progress to develop options for Flexible Service Delivery in the locations where offices will close. This work will be undertaken in partnership with MPs, Assembly Members and other relevant stakeholders to tailor these options to meet the needs of the local community.

I hope this is helpful.

Job Losses (Incapacity)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of individuals who lost jobs in 2003–04 as the result of suffering pain. [194076]

Maria Eagle: The requested information is not available. Data on individuals who lost their jobs as a result of suffering pain is not collected.

State Retirement Pension

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 19 October 2004, Official Report, column 638W, on pensions, for what reasons the introduction of equal treatment for men whose wives die before reaching state pension age has been delayed until 2010; and what estimate he has made of the cost of introducing this change before 2010. [193987]

Malcolm Wicks: The introduction of equal treatment for widowers from 2010 forms part of the package to equalise state pension age including husbands being entitled to a basic state pension on their wife's national insurance contributions thereby ensuring that all of the provisions could be funded.

The gross costs of introducing the widowers' change is in the table.

Notes:

1. Costs are in 2004–05 prices to the nearest £1 million and show the combined increase in expenditure on basic state pension and additional state pension.
2. It is assumed the policy would be introduced from 2005 onwards.

3. We are unable to estimate the costs net of income related benefits and tax reliably as the numbers involved are small and there are limitations in our ability to model the impact of the change.

Work Preparation Programmes

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people who have entered (a) an Access to Work programme, (b) a Work Preparation programme and (c) Workstep in each year since 2001 have re-entered those programmes or other employment and training programmes later, broken down by (i) age and (ii) region. [191701]

Maria Eagle: Information is not collected on the numbers of people who receive support through these programmes more than once, or who subsequently enter other employment and training programmes.

CABINET OFFICE

Disabled People

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if she will publish research carried out by the Downing Street Strategy Unit into life chances for disabled people; and if she will make a statement. [194305]

Mr. Milburn: In June 2004, the Strategy Unit published an interim analytical report from its project, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People". A final report from the project will also be published in due course.

Government Websites

Paul Holmes: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what percentage of Government websites meet the Disability Discrimination Act 1995's guidelines on web accessibility; and if she will make a statement. [193571]

Ruth Kelly: The Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA) makes no reference to web accessibility. However, the Disability Rights Commission's supporting "Code of Practice on Rights of Access—Goods, Facilities, Services and Premises" (published in 2002), makes it clear that any website owner as a service provider must take all reasonable measures to have their service usable by disabled people. This Code of Practice does not provide or recommend any particular web accessibility guidelines.

In 2001 the Government adopted the World Wide Web Consortium's (W3C) "Web Content Accessibility Guidelines". Since the publication of the "Guidelines for UK Government Websites" in 2002, the Cabinet Office has promoted web accessibility extensively to both the public sector web management community and their contractors.

The Cabinet Office does not hold statistics on the percentage of Government websites that meet the accessibility guidelines. Earlier this year the Disability Rights Commission conducted a formal investigation. Its report showed that levels of accessibility awareness in the Government web community were high: around 49 per cent. of websites in the Government sector fully achieved the basic level of accessibility, compared to 19 per cent. of all websites in all sectors surveyed.

It is now a condition of owning a .gov.uk domain name that the "Guidelines for UK Government Websites", regarding accessibility, apply.

Special Advisers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many unpaid special advisers the Office has; what their names are; and which Government (a) bodies, (b) committees and (c) strategy groups each unpaid adviser (i) belongs to, (ii) advises and (iii) works alongside. [194080]

Ruth Kelly: For information relating to numbers and names of unpaid advisers I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 22 July 2004, Official Report, columns 466–70W.

Special advisers, whether paid or unpaid, are employed under the terms and conditions set out in the Model Contract for Special Advisers. Unpaid advisers are appointed in accordance with the requirements of paragraph 51 of the Ministerial Code.

TREASURY

Correspondence

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Chairman of the Inland Revenue will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Workington dated 18 August. [194342]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chairman of the Inland Revenue has replied on 27 October to the letter from the hon. Member.

Double Taxation Convention

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a former UK civil servant in receipt of a civil service pension permanently resident in the US but not a US citizen can opt to pay only US tax under the double taxation convention. [194162]

Dawn Primarolo: Under Article 19 of the 2001 UK/US Double Taxation Convention, the UK has the right to tax a UK civil service pension where the recipient is a resident, but not a national, of the US. There is no provision in the Convention which allows the recipient to opt to pay only US tax.

Employment (North Southwark and Bermondsey)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were in full-time employment in North Southwark and Bermondsey constituency in each year since 1997. [194311]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Simon Hughes, dated 28 October 2004:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about employment. I am replying in his absence. (194311)

The attached table gives estimates of the number of people in full-time employment and resident in the North Southwark and Bermondsey Parliamentary Constituency for the twelve months ending February each year from 1997 to 2003, the latest date for which information is available.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey are, as with any sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

Equity Release Schemes

Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on equity release schemes and inheritance tax. [194366]

Dawn Primarolo: There have been no recent changes to the inheritance tax rules which have any impact on equity release schemes.

Pensioners (London)

Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pensioners live in (a) the North Southwark and Bermondsey constituency, (b) the Camberwell and Peckham constituency and (c) the Dulwich and West Norwood constituency. [194310]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Simon Hughes, dated 28 October 2004:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many pensioners live in (a) The North Southwark and Bermondsey constituency, (b) the Camberwell and Peckham constituency and (c) the Dulwich and West Norwood Constituency (194310)

Mid-year population estimates on pensioners are not available for Parliamentary Constituencies. I have therefore provided figures taken from the 2001 Census.

The table below shows the number of people living in each of the constituencies on Census day (29 April 2001). The figures have been extracted from Table CAS002 on the CD supplement to the "Census 2001 Census Area Statistics for Parliamentary Constituencies in England and Wales", which is available on request from Census Customer Services (census.customerservices@ons.gov.uk).

	England
Area	All people	People of pensionable age[1]
North Southwark and Bermondsey	111,860	13,164
Camberwell and Peckham	79,096	9,255
Dulwich and West Norwood	99,619	12,681

[1] Pensionable age is 65 and over for males and 60 and over for females.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance is provided to procuring authorities about the treatment of PFI arrangements in the accounts of public bodies. [193891]

Mr. Boateng: In determining the accounting treatment of PFI arrangements, public bodies are required to follow United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice, Including Financial Reporting Standards issued by the independent Accounting Standards Board (ASB).

The specific guidance issued by the ASB on accounting for PFI is 'Application Note F to FRS 5—Private Finance Initiative and Similar Contracts', as supplemented by the HM Treasury issued 'Technical Note No 1 (Revised)—How to Account for PFI transactions'.

Tax Credits

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce a steeper taper for those eligible for tax credits to prevent disincentive for those who wish to work for more than 16 hours a week. [194680]

Dawn Primarolo: The vast majority, over 90 per cent., of main earners in couples benefiting from tax credits work over 35 hours per week. The tax credits system contains several elements which help those who wish to increase their working hours. There is a 30-hour element in the working tax credit (WTC) worth £640 per year. The child care element of WTC is payable to lone parents and to couples where both partners work at least 16 hours per week and provides up to 70 per cent. of costs up to certain limits. Finally, the tax credits system disregards income rises from the previous tax year of up to £2,500, so tax credit recipients whose family income increases by up to this amount will not see any reduction in their current year's award.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people claimed the 50-plus return to work element of the working tax credit in 2003–04. [194754]

Dawn Primarolo: The final number of beneficiaries in 2003–04 will be shown in the annual statistical publication for that year, which is due to be published in May 2005.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many opium seizures have been made (a) in Afghanistan and (b) on Afghan borders since UK forces took control of the international community's efforts to stop the flow of drugs from Afghanistan. [193467]

Mr. Rammell: The UK took on lead nation status for coordinating international counter narcotics activity in Afghanistan in April 2002. We remain committed to supporting the Afghan Government in implementation of their Afghan National Drug Control Strategy, and have allocated more than £70 million over three years for counter narcotics activity plus significant development funding and support for alternative livelihoods. The British Embassy Drugs Team, with assistance from other Government Departments, rather than UK forces, is the main delivery agent of this support and coordination.

Since it became operational in January 2003, the Afghan Special Narcotics Force, supported by UK advice and funding, has seized over 50 tonnes of opiates. In addition, the Counter Narcotics Police of Afghanistan, which was created in January 2003 with UK support, report that to date they have seized 2.1 tons heroin and 13.6 tons opium, over 1.5 tons of which were achieved specifically in UK supported operations together with 4.6 tons of precursor chemicals. The Afghan general and border police also seize opiates in the course of their work, but we do not have reliable figures.

In addition, the UK works closely with Afghanistan's neighbours, including providing assistance, to help their efforts to counter the flow of opiates from Afghanistan. These countries have reported that in excess of 100 tonnes of opiates were seized in 2003.

Belarus

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe regarding the recent referendum vote in Belarus; and if he will make a statement. [193821]

Mr. MacShane: On 18 October, the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe's (OSCE) International Election Observation Mission (IEOM) to Belarus issued its preliminary findings and conclusions on the 17 October election and referendum. Initial discussions took place in the OSCE's Permanent Council on 21 October. There will be further discussions when the IEOM releases its final report. We will press for clear EU action within the framework of the OSCE. We will also press Belarus to implement the recommendations in the final report.

British Indian Ocean Territories

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he received from British Indian Ocean Territory citizens concerning their economic well being in (a) Mauritius, (b) the Seychelles and (c) the UK; and if he will make a statement. [194012]

Mr. Rammell: I have from time to time received representations from the leader of the Chagossian community in Mauritius concerning the economic well being of that community, but I have received no comparable representations from Chagossians in Seychelles. In addition, a representative of the Chagossians who recently arrived in the UK contacted my officials who advised that any matter relating to the Chagossians' well being in this country should be raised with the local social services.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much compensation has been paid by the UK Government to former residents of the Chagos Islands; and how many recipients there have been. [193283]

Mr. Rammell: £650,000 was paid to the Mauritius Government in the early 1970s to meet the cost of resettling the islanders. Under a 1982 Treaty between HMG and the Mauritius Government, negotiated and concluded with the agreement of representatives of the islanders, a further £4 million was paid by HMG into a Trust Fund for the benefit of the Chagossians. In addition, the Mauritius Government vested land to the value of a further £1 million in the Trust Fund.

By the end of 1986, the trustees of the Fund, consisting of representatives of the Mauritius Government and the Chagossians themselves, had disbursed payments to around 1350 former islanders. This constituted the total population of those recognised by the trustees as members of the Chagossian community.

The total compensation already paid would amount to over £14 million at today's prices.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent discussions with the Argentinean Government in relation to the future of the Falkland Islands. [193464]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met Argentine Foreign Minister Bielsa during the United Nations General Assembly on 22 September. They discussed a variety of issues including those relating to the Falkland Islands. The Foreign Secretary made clear that the UK has no doubts about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands and the surrounding maritime area, and that we will not negotiate on sovereignty unless and until the Islanders wish that.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place with the Governments of (a) Argentina, (b) Chile, (c) Brazil and (d) Uruguay regarding port blockades on vessels travelling to and from the Falkland Islands. [193465]

Mr. Rammell: There are no port blockades on vessels travelling to and from the Falkland Islands and Latin America. Merchant ships (including cruise ships and fishing vessels) travel freely between ports in the region. Naval vessels are subject to the usual discussions on diplomatic channels.

Discussions with the Governments of Argentina, Chile, Brazil and Uruguay take place as necessary.

Georgia/Abkhazia

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Georgia-Abkhaz peace process. [193915]

Mr. Rammell: Talks between the parties, under the auspices of the resident Special Representative of the Secretary-General of the United Nations continue, but 2004 has been a period of reduced diplomatic activity overall. The new Georgian Government concentrated their attention first on Ajara and then on South Ossetia; and political energies in Abkhazia have focused on the leadership elections which took place there on 3 October.

We have continued to keep in touch with the parties, with the United Nations, and with our French, German, Russian and United States colleagues on the group of Friends of the Secretary-General. We look forward to the early reactivation of work on confidence-building, with particular reference to the conditions needed to ensure the safe return of refugees and internally displaced persons, in the first place to the Gali district of Abkhazia.

Iraq

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the oral statement of the Secretary of State for Defence of 18 October 2004, Official Report, column 642, on UK forces (Iraq), what assessment he has made of the effect of alleged corruption at the UN during the Oil for Food Programme on the current insurgency in Iraq. [193174]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 October 2004]: The Government conducts regular assessments of the insurgency in Iraq, including sources of funding. But assessments of funding have been limited owing to the invisible nature of most transactions, and it has not been possible to make a definitive judgement. Although it is difficult to be precise, we believe that elements of the insurgency have access to funds of the former regime, some of which, it is reasonable to assume, may have been derived through corruption under the Oil for Food Programme. The Government continues to work hard through the UN Security Council to ensure that assets belonging to the former government of Iraq are frozen and transferred to the Development Fund for Iraq in compliance with resolution 1483 (22 May 2003).

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his reply of 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1836W, on Iraq, when the full assessment of Iraq's declaration of the status of its programmes of weapons of mass destruction was completed. [194025]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 26 October 2004]: A full assessment of the text of the Iraqi declaration was completed on 21 December 2002. The supporting documentation was reviewed and summarised to ensure it did not contain any information which contradicted the main body of the declaration. This was concluded in early March 2003.

Iraq Survey Group Report

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the conclusions of the Iraq Survey Group with which he does not agree; and if he will give the reason for disagreement in each case. [190696]

Mr. MacShane: There are three principal areas of disagreement, all concerning Iraq's nuclear programme:

The Iraq Survey Group (ISG) report concludes that there is no evidence to suggest that Iraq sought to procure uranium from Africa in the 1990s. The Government continues to believe that credible evidence exists to support the assertion made in the September 2002 dossier. Lord Butler of Brockwell's review upheld that belief. The UK was not in a position to share all the intelligence on this issue with the ISG.

The ISG also expressed doubt that the aluminium tubes referred to in the September dossier were evidence of a resumption of Iraq's nuclear programmes. Again, Lord Butler's review assessed this, and concluded that the Joint Intelligence Committee were right to include reference to the tubes in the dossier and that it properly reflected doubts about the use of the tubes in the caution of its assessments. The Government fully accepts the findings of Lord Butler's review.

The ISG also report that they found no evidence to support the claim in the dossier that Iraq "is almost certainly seeking an indigenous ability to enrich uranium" based on gas centrifuge technology. They do, however, admit that elements of useful and relevant technologies were being developed.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy, following the publication of the Iraq Survey Group report, to correct all instances in the Official Report in which he or other Ministers in his Department stated that Iraq possesses weapons of mass destruction; and if he will establish an investigation into the reasons he and other departmental ministers were provided with inaccurate briefings that underpinned these answers. [190942]

Mr. MacShane: No. The Official Report is produced in order to provide an accurate account of current business in the House. All instances on which Ministers stated that Iraq possessed weapons of mass destruction accurately reflected the position of the Government based upon information available at the time. The information that underpinned these statements was the subject of the review headed by Lord Butler of Brockwell.

Ministerial Meetings

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) matters were discussed and (b) agreements were made during his meeting with UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan on 19 October. [193513]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and the Secretary-General met for an hour. They discussed Iraq, concentrating on the forthcoming elections and the security situation, Iran's nuclear programme, the situation in Darfur, prospects for the Middle East Peace Process and the Secretary-General's High Level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change, including Security Council reform.

North Korea

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the size of the population of prison camps in North Korea. [193579]

Mr. Rammell: The US Annual Human Rights Report on North Korea, dated February 2004, estimated the prison population of North Korea to be around two hundred thousand. We have no access to any more accurate and reliable figures. We are awaiting a written response from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea authorities on this and other concerns which I raised during my visit to Pyongyang in September.

Oil Sanctions (Sudan)

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has held since March with the Chinese delegation to the UN Security Council regarding Chinese support for a UNSC resolution on oil sanctions against Sudan. [194072]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the issue with Chinese Foreign Minister Li Zhaoxing by telephone on 20 September.

The UK delegation to the UN in New York has frequently discussed all aspects of the UN Security Council resolutions on Darfur with the Chinese delegation in meetings of the Security Council. This included discussion of what action the UN Security Council could take if the Government of Sudan failed to comply with resolutions 1556 and 1564, such as action to affect Sudan's petroleum sector. Officials have also discussed the issue with the Chinese in London and Beijing.

Egypt

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Egypt about the continued incarceration of (a) William Shaiboub Arsal and (b) Adly Shakir. [193580]

Mr. Rammell: William Shaiboub Arsal was convicted on 5 June 2000 for a double murder and was sentenced to 15 years. He appealed to the Court of Cassation in June 2000. Officials most recently discussed this case with the Egyptian authorities in August 2004 and received assurances that the case is being handled with due process and that an appeal hearing is due to take place later this year.

Officials at our embassy in Cairo followed closely the case of Adly Shakir at the time of his trial and appeal. His sentence was reduced at appeal in 1999 to 25 years. There was no evidence of any departure from the correct procedure in Egyptian handling of the case.

We will continue to look into all credible allegations of human rights abuse, and to raise with the Egyptian authorities any cases where there is evidence to support the allegations.

Private Finance Initiatives

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the private finance initiative arrangements in which the Department is engaged; what the total cost of each arrangement is (a) over its lifetime and (b) in each year of its operation; and how the arrangement appears in the Department's public accounts. [193981]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has two private finance initiative arrangements in place:

Global Crossing

Provision of a worldwide telecommunications network for a term of 10 years from 10 May 2000. The total estimated value of the contract is £236 million. The present unitary payment charged to the operating cost statement is £25 million per annum. This is an off-balance sheet charge and can be viewed in the FCO 2002–03 Resource Accounts on the FCO website: www.fco.gov.uk

Arteos

In respect of the building, operation and maintenance of the British Embassy in Berlin for a term of 30 years from 23 June 1998 with an option to extend for a further 30 years. The total estimated value of the contract over its lifetime is £131.5 million. The current unitary payment is £4.5 million per annum. This is mainly an on-balance sheet charge and can be viewed in the FCO 2002–03 Resource Accounts on the FCO website: www.fco.gov.uk

Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures his Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake to comply with the Sustainable Energy (CHP Provisions) Order 2003. [194426]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) purchases 100 per cent. of the electricity used in its King Charles Street Main Building from renewable energy sources. In addition we take heat, when available, from the Whitehall District Heating Scheme (WDHS). We are also discussing with "the Office of Government Commerce Buying Solutions", the possible purchase of electricity generated by WDHS.

The FCO is undertaking a feasibility study of the re-development of its Hanslope Park site in Buckinghamshire to determine the extent to which CHP Provisions can be implemented.

The FCO plans to purchase good quality CHP sourced electricity as it becomes available, provided the Department considers the purchase to be a good value for money option.

Turkmenistan

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to seek to prevent human rights and democracy abuses in Turkmenistan. [194048]

Mr. Rammell: We remain seriously concerned about human rights in Turkmenistan, including the plight of those convicted following the reported coup attempt in November 2002; the harassment of Turkmen opposition figures in exile; the tight controls over the individual freedoms of all Turkmen citizens; the apparent degradation of the education system; the comprehensive restrictions on freedom of expression; and increased evidence of state-sponsored ethnic discrimination. In their submission to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development in spring 2004, Human Rights Watch described Turkmenistan as one of the most repressive countries in the world.

Our ambassador most recently lobbied Foreign Minister Meredov on 30 September on a range of human rights concerns, including access to prisoners by the International Committee for the Red Cross and the use of child labour. We have also repeatedly raised reports of discrimination against holders of foreign qualifications, the issue of restriction of religious freedom as well as individual cases, including Rahim Esenov, a 78-year-old author arrested in February 2004 for allegedly criticising the regime. Mr. Esenov was subsequently released in March.

The United Kingdom actively supported the tabling and adoption of country resolutions at the 59th and 60th Sessions of the UN Committee on Human Rights in 2003 and spring 2004. The UK also supported a further country resolution at the Third Committee of the UN General Assembly in 2003. These have noted the limited positive steps by the Turkmen Government and have raised serious concerns about the human rights situation and the absence of democracy in Turkmenistan.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he will take to urge the Turkmen authorities to co-operate with international human rights organisations. [194049]

Mr. Rammell: The United Kingdom consistently encourages the Turkmen Government to co-operate with international human rights organisations. We supported the tabling of resolutions at the 59th and 60th sessions of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in 2003 and Spring 2004 and also at the Third Committee of the UN General Assembly in 2003. We are doing so again at this year's UN General Assembly.

Reinforced by broader international pressure, these Resolutions, have led to some welcome, if limited, signs of increased Turkmen engagement with the international community and human rights organisations. For example, a dialogue is now taking place between the Turkmen authorities and the International Committee for the Red Cross about access to prisons. It is important that this dialogue and other positive indications lead to positive outcomes. Our ambassador lobbied the Turkmen Foreign Minister on this point on 30 September 2004.

Following the decision of the Turkmen Government to refuse the extension of ambassador Badescu's mandate as Head of the OSCE Centre in Ashgabad in July 2004, it was our ambassador as local EU Presidency who delivered the critical EU statement on this matter. On 30 September he reminded the Foreign Minister of the need for positive engagement with the new Head of the OSCE Mission.

With our EU partners and other interested parties, we will continue to encourage Turkmen engagement with international human rights organisations as a necessary step on the road to improving democracy and human rights in Turkmenistan.

Western Sahara

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) the Government of Morocco, (b) the Polisario Front and (c) UN officials on the future constitutional arrangements for the Western Sahara; and if he will make a statement. [194002]

Mr. Rammell: UK officials have held recent discussions with all the parties to the Western Sahara dispute and UN Officials. Officials have underlined the importance the UK attaches to the UN process delivering a fair and lasting solution to this dispute that provides the people of the Western Sahara with an opportunity to exercise their right to self-determination.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Chechen Separatist Organisations

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's policy is on Chechen separatist organisations operating within the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [190240]

Mr. Blunkett: The Police and the Security Service continue to monitor closely the activities of those groups which seek to undermine the interests of the UK, whatever their background. If they find evidence of any terrorist activity they will act immediately.

D Notices

Mr. Flook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 'D' notices prohibiting the publication of sensitive news stories about the situation in Iraq have been issued in each month since March 2003. [191152]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

'D notices' are not issued to cover specific stories or events, nor can they actually prohibit publication of sensitive news stories. The system is advisory, and there are five standing Defence Advisory Notices. These are the basis on which the Secretary of the independent Defence, Press and Broadcasting Advisory Committee gives advice day-to-day, to the media and to officials, on the publication of information about national security (see www.dnotice.org.uk for full details). The decision whether or not to publish remains with the editor.

In the case of events in Iraq since March 2003 (and in the build-up to the operation), the Secretary has never had to advise that a complete story should not be published. He has however on occasion advised that some detail in an intended story should be omitted, for reasons of personal and operational security. The media have invariably agreed to observe this advice, and on occasion have voluntarily also withdrawn the whole story, as they have sometimes also done when the Secretary has informed them that some crucial details in their outline are known to him to be untrue.

The number of occasions on which advice of this nature has been sought by journalists, invariably by telephone, about endangering detail in an otherwise publishable story, has varied greatly from month to month, according to the pattern of operations. Over the whole period, it has averaged about twice a week.

Departmental Expenses

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what departmental expenditure was on (a) mobile telephones, (b) hospitality and (c) taxis in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) the latest accounting period for which figures are available. [184456]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 16 July 2004]: The information requested is shown in the table.

	1996–97	2003–04
Mobile telephones	438,783.30	1,282,909.33
Taxis	[1]—	435,416.24
Hospitality	[2]—	89,072

[1] Not available. The method for capturing travel and subsistence expenses in 1996–97 did not allow for a reliable separation of taxi costs.

[2] Hospitality figures relate to the cost of providing refreshment for non-civil servants and for limited hospitality provided by civil servants for business purposes. Details of such expenditure have been held only since 1997–98, for which the figure is £37,747.

Due to the nature of the Home Office's work, a large number of employees are involved in dispersed operations, which necessitate the use of mobile phones on a regular basis. Some organisations, like the National Probation Service, have also become part of the Home Office since 1997, and their costs are now included. The Department has contracts with major mobile phone companies to get the best deal for the tax payer.

Temporary Mortuaries

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department makes financial provision for the implications of setting up a temporary mortuary. [184594]

Paul Goggins: Responsibility for the provision of public mortuaries is covered by section 198 of the Public Health Act 1936, which states that local authorities may, or shall if directed to do so by the Minister, provide a public mortuary. This does not explicitly cover temporary mortuaries. The Civil Defence (General Lead Local Authority Functions) Regulations 199 set out a responsibility on local authorities for dealing with fatalities in emergencies. Responsibility for funding is covered by section 27 of the Coroners Act 1988, which sets out that county councils and lead boroughs in metropolitan areas are responsible for providing support to coroners.

PRIME MINISTER

Casinos

Mr. James Gray: To ask the Prime Minister whether he has visited (a) Las Vegas and (b) Atlantic City in an official capacity. [193897]

The Prime Minister: Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Copies of these lists are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many recent meetings he has had with representatives of (a) Sun International, (b) MGM Mirage, (c) Kerzner International, (d) Caesar's Entertainment and (e) the British Casino Association; when those meetings took place; and if he will list the representatives whom he met from each organisation; [193895]

(2) how many recent meetings his (a) officials and (b) special advisers had with representatives of (a) Sun International, (b) MGM Mirage, (c) Kerzner International, (d) Caesar's Entertainment and (e) the British Casino Association. [193896]

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what meetings (a) he and (b) his advisers and officials have held with representatives of (i) Sun City International, (ii) MGM Mirage, (iii) Mandalay Resort Group, (iv) Kerzner International, (v) Las Vegas Sands, Inc.,(vi) Harrah's Entertainment, (vii) Caesar's Entertainment and (viii) other foreign casino firms; what the (A) dates and (B) venues of the meetings were; and which individuals were present; [193762]

(2) on what dates (a) he and (b) officials in his Office have held meetings with representatives of the UK gambling industry to discuss proposed changes to legislation on gambling. [194517]

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list each meeting at which (a) he, (b) Ministers, (c) officials and (d) his representatives discussed with outside parties proposed changes to the gambling laws; when each meeting took place; and if he will list the attendees at each meeting. [194321]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I have meetings and discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals. As with previous Administrations it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings, under Exemptions 2 and 7 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Ministerial Residences

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Prime Minister what the cost to public funds was in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02, (c) 2002–03 and (d) 2003–04 of the (i) rent, (ii) capital charges and (iii) maintenance of official ministerial residences; and if he will make a statement. [193163]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Norman Baker) on 11 October 2004, Official Report, columns 53–54W.

Oil for Food Programme

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister when he last discussed the alleged corruption at the UN during the Oil for Food Programme in Iraq in person with the Secretary General of the UN. [194457]

The Prime Minister: I have had no such discussions with the United Nations Secretary General.

The allegations are subject to an independent inquiry appointed by the Secretary-General in April. The Government continues to co-operate fully with the inquiry, with which officials have had regular contact.

UN Secretary-General

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Prime Minister what criteria he used to select topics for discussion with the Secretary-General of the UN during his recent visit to London. [194456]

The Prime Minister: The office of the Secretary-General and the UK Government proposed topics for discussion.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Judges

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what measures the Department is taking to help (a) women and (b) members of ethnic minorities become judges. [193476]

Mr. Leslie: Judicial appointments are made solely on merit. To encourage lawyers from all backgrounds to apply for judicial appointment, we run workshops around the country, sometimes in conjunction with the Bar Council and the Law Society, to give an overview of the appointments process. Officials from my Department also attend conferences and events, such as the Minority Lawyers Conference and run a very successful work-shadowing scheme, whereby individuals can shadow a circuit or district judge for up to five days. This can help them to decide whether to pursue a judicial career.

In 2001, salaried part-time working for new district judge and tribunal appointments was introduced and from April 2005, this will be extended to all new and existing salaried appointments below the High Court unless the nature of the office or business needs dictate otherwise.

The establishment of the new Judicial Appointments Commission will further inspire a more diverse range of applicants through a more transparent, accountable and accessible appointments process. In addition, on 13 October 2004, we published a consultation paper entitled "Increasing Diversity in the Judiciary". The consultation paper highlights a range of issues that could act as barriers to judicial diversity, particularly for women, members of minority ethnic groups and disabled lawyers. Once we have identified which barriers exist, action will be taken to try to remove or reduce them.

Lay Magistrates

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what consultations he has had with the lay magistracy in each of the past 12 months. [192653]

Mr. Leslie: I have had at least 13 meetings with different groups of magistrates over the past 12 months on a range of matters. As with previous Administrations it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings under Exemption 2 of the Code of practice on Access to Government Information (internal advice and discussion) on the grounds that it would harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Magistrates Court Trial Centres

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many magistrates court trial centres there were in England and Wales (a) in 1997 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [192215]

Mr. Leslie: From the information available to my Department, in April 1997 there were 492 operational magistrates courthouses in England and Wales conducting trials and the latest data collected in September 2004 shows there are 369.

Personal Injury

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans he has to raise the small claims limit in personal injury cases; and if he will make a statement. [193868]

Mr. Lammy: The Better Regulation Task Force in its report, "Better Routes to Redress" recommended that research should be carried out into the potential impact of raising the small claims limit for personal injury cases from the current limit of £1,000. Careful consideration is being given to this and other recommendations in the BRTF report and the Government will respond shortly.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how the courts will implement the power to review awards of compensation for personal injury. [193928]

Mr. Lammy: Section 100 of the Courts Act 2003 gives the Lord Chancellor the power by Order to specify the circumstances in which orders and agreements for future pecuniary loss for personal injury, made in the form of periodical payments, can be varied. The terms on which variation will be possible are contained in the Damages (Variation of Periodical Payments) Order 2004, which has been approved by Parliament under the affirmative resolution procedure.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 425

SESSION 2003–2004

11 October 2004—28 October 2004

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volume of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The index to the daily parts of Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references may be different as a result of changes to the text and column numbering.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Daily part and volume indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine com[redacted]e sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings, written statements and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'ws' indicate written statements.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting, is a written statement or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Chamber Debates (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Westminster Hall Debates (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings);
  - Written Statements (consisting of ministerial statements issued in writing); and
  - Questions (which includes all written, oral and urgent questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R = First reading
- 2R = Second reading
- Com = Committee stage
- Rep = Report stage
- 3R = Third reading
- res = resolution
- amendt(s) = amendment(s)
- * = matter taken formally without debate or division
- (HL) = Bill starting in House of Lords
- (SP) = Bill in Scottish Parliament.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).
